Christmas and Holiday Trade

CHRISTMAS PLANTS.

Plants As Christmas Gifts.

A considerable portion of the holiday business is the sale of plants. "Gifts that will grow" are always attractive, and are made doubly so by the addition of fancy pot covers, jardinières, ribbons and other like artistic touches, features that add much to the appearance at very slight cost.

The foliage varieties are always popular, being so much sturdier than those which are prized for their flowers, and which are so comparatively short-lived. Kentias are always robust looking and saleable. In the various sizes of single specimens and made-up plants, there will be found something to meet all purses. Arecas are not nearly so plentiful, but find favor with many, as does the graceful and very hardy Phoenix Roebelenii. Well shaped aspidistras, if the leaves are kept rubbed up, have a record for longevity that appeals to many and are good stock to carry. A well grown ficus is sure to be asked for; the comparatively newer sorts, pandurata, utilis and altissima, if foliage is kept lustrously clean, will hold their own with any other plants in the shop. Dracenas of the bold type—fragnans and Massangeana—always look good for the money, while the color effect of terminalis and others of this sort makes them very desirable. Nothing is more gorgeous than a well colored croton. Made-up pots and tubs are now offered in a luxurious harlequin of colors that are very striking. The araucaria, beautiful in itself and appropriate on account of its resemblance to a fir tree, is essentially a Christmas plant and they will be found good sellers.

Probably more ferns are sold at Christmas than any other season, particularly of the Boston and its sports. It seems as if it would be impossible now to run a shop without a stock of this remarkable family. The Teddy, Jr., and the Scottii seem to hold the lead with the old Boston always hovering near. Elegantissima and E. compacta, Scholzei, tedeoides and John Wanamaker lead the tasseled sorts, while every locality appears to have a sport of its own. They are all splendid stock, and always sell to good advantage. The cibotium, with its light, feathery fronds, and the bird's nest fern, two extreme types, are both necessary for every collection. Pandanus Veitchii gives life and variety to any group and makes a handsome single specimen.

In the flowering class, the gay poinsettia is easily first. Few are now sold as single plants, being for the most part offered in low pans of from five to 10 plants, set off with ferns or asparagus, or in combinations of three or more taller plants, with asparagus, whose sprays thicken up and cover the rather naked stalks of the poinsettia, which soon drops its lower leaves.

The azalea, with its showy flowers and buds of promise, can now be flowered as well at Christmas as at Easter. Mme. Petrick and Vervaeana are the best early sorts; as offered by the leading growers, they leave nothing to be desired.

Christmas is the season of the cyclamens; they are one of the most satisfactory blooming house plants. Most growers now appear to know how to handle this rather difficult plant and splendidly flowered stock is seen in all the large centers.

Begonia Cinnamomi appears now to have the call in this class of wonderfully beautiful holiday plants; although fragile to a degree, they are yet with their clouds of lovely pink blossoms, much in demand, and for the day as attractive, or more so, than anything else in the shop.

Heather is a classy addition that finds discriminating buyers. When ribboned up, they attract much attention.

Plants, whose chief attraction is their fruit, generally meet with favor. Jerusalem cherries, while they do not hold their berries very long in the house, are brilliant with their branches of red berries and have the advantage of a low price. Many customers, whose limit is from one to two dollars, find them just the thing.

The ardisia has a lot of friends, with its compact, glossy foliage and tiers of brilliant red berries, which will sometimes hold into the second season. It is sure of a place.

When the aucuba is well set and the berries color up in time, it is a most ornamental and useful plant. Sprays cut from odd shaped plants, about to be left over, have been turned into splendid value in table decorations and other places where such material could be used.

The Otaheite orange, when well fruited, fairly walks away; there are generally orders on the file for these before the stock arrives. No grower who does these well ever has enough for his customers.

Quite a business can be done in jardinières and pot covers if some of the choice things are displayed in these receptacles. A bow of ribbon, tied around a plain pot cover, changes it at once into something noticeable and attractive. A chip mat, tied around a pot, with a cord or ribbon, all of a color to produce the best effect, may sell a plant that has stood for a time because of a rather naked stem. A nice red bow of silk ribbon (always silk) will give a touch of seasonable color to foliage plants that is well worth while.

Plant Baskets and Combinations.

Combination baskets of flowering and foliage plants have of late years become a standard feature of the holiday offering. As far as possible, each succeeding season's stock must show originality and variety. The supply men are alert—theirs is a business in which novelty is the leading feature. "What have you got new?" is the first question put to their traveling men, to be answered by the proud salesman with a line of photos or samples and a description that proclaim them the finest ever. New shapes, new colors, new materials, fancy duo-tone colorings, broad contrasting stripes and raised flower garland effects are now seen in all the stocks. Roomy baskets, with skeleton frame work, through which the fancy colored inside tin shows plainly, are now very popular, and while good looking, are less expensive than the more closely woven. Oblong baskets, with high handles at each end, are very effective. These have much the appearance of a pan. When filled with cyclamens of one color and a fringe of maidenhair, or the smaller plants of the Glory fern, and tied with a choice ribbon, they are especially attractive. They can be made up for the final rush with defective or smaller plants, which, when arranged together with the ferns, leave nothing to be desired. Short poinsettias also work up very well in these low baskets, whether oval or round. They are also very suitable for begonias. With poinsettias, or in fact all work of this character, it is much better to have it filled at the greenhouse the week before. Many growers now offer such made-up stock, but if special baskets, filled in certain combinations, are desired, it is best to make arrangements with the greenhouse man to get together the various plants required, fill the tins, which are cared for and delivered as required. Low pans and baskets of poinsettias are much improved with the addition of maidenhair ferns from three or four-inch pots; if these plants are short and bushy, they can be made to go further by cutting the root ball in two or three parts from the bottom up to within half an inch of the top. They will then divide much better than by tearing them apart. Each clump makes a separate plant that can be used without further disturbance of the roots. Asparagus plumosus is much used, but does not give the same finish as the maidenhair.

For the larger baskets, there is a great variety. Kentias, arecas and coconuts, of various sizes, together with dracaenas of the terminalis type, Sanderiana, and the very valuable Keleriana, with its white speckled and dotted branching foliage, are especially suited for this purpose. Small Pandanus Veitchii, high colored crotons, peperomias and all the dwarfier forms of the Boston fern family, particularly Smithii, are useful. Several varieties of maranta, while a trifle expensive, give a finish that is worth the cost. The bird's nest fern also makes a striking feature. Poinsettias, flowering begonias and cyclamens in these baskets will sell many a combination that would stand still without their life-giving coloring. Small azaleas are also useful.

For the higher class baskets, Otaheite oranges, well flowered heather and ardisias, add greatly to the appearance and are considered indispensable when certain color and other artistic effects are desired. The final finish is given by the ribbon bow, butterfly birdsticks, and other adornments, which are more or less necessary, being the fads of the present day.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia. Pa.

Thanksgiving in New York Stores.

Appropriately, the chrysanthemums were very prominent at Thanksgiving. Though some of the best varieties had passed, there was fine stock to be seen. The Chadwicks, Eatons, Bonnafons, Glenview and other varieties gave much color to the show windows. Indian Summer, a sport of Golden Chadwick, and of a yellowish bronze shade, is a large and attractive flower and large bunches of it made a fine display in several stores. A narrow band, darker than the main body of the flower, encircles it near the base and gives it a novel appearance. The pompons, both cut and in pots, were everywhere prominent. The causes and reasons for a tremendous jump in the wholesale prices of cut flowers, November 28, will be elsewhere noted; it is here mentioned to show that plants came to the front probably as they never did before at Thanksgiving.

Nothing, unless it may have been a particularly sad or a particularly joyous event that happened a year ago, is quite as vivid in our memories as what happened this year, but we think the flowering plants were better this year than ever before, at a Thanksgiving. None were more noteworthy than the Begonia Mrs. Peterson. It seems to have thrown the older varieties entirely in the shade. The rich bronze foliage is in striking contrast to the sickly appearing green, sometimes noted in the older varieties. Thousands of plants of this variety, well flowered, were seen in the various retail stores; in fact, but few stores were without them. Their best effects were shown in hanging baskets in the show windows. The cyclamens, usually a popular plant, were seen in numbers and in good bloom. There were also fine specimen poinsettias. Solanums (Jerusalem cherries), Celestial peppers, Otaheite oranges, a great variety of pompon and single chrysanthemums, and a sprinkling of azaleas were also seen. In foliage plants, ferns and heathers, crotons, Pandanus Veitchii, dracenas and other plants were noted.

O. J. FRIEDMAN'S STORE, CONGRESS HOTEL, CHICAGO, NOVEMBER, 1916.

The bowls filled with short cut flowers were features in a number of stores. Were it not for offending some aesthetic taste, we would call some of them platters, others saucers. This form of decoration has never greatly impressed us, but this is meant for a record of what we have seen, and not exclusively what pleases us. Some of those receptacles are too large, others are of grotesque shapes, but there is a happy medium where they are truly pleasing.

In a number of stores, the Japanese miniature gardens and dwarf plants were pleasing features and they seem to have reached the stage where they can be called a vogue. Patience and ingenuity appeal to the average mind, and there is a touch of both in these plants and gardens. These enduring qualities are also features not to be overlooked.

There was a time, in the lives of the pioneers, when "Bro. Turk" was a necessity, but from that he rose to be a luxury; and now he has risen even higher and become a decorative feature. This, of course, is in a figurative sense, for those seen in the shop windows are not real turkeys, but they are mighty good imitations. These imitation turkeys, mostly gobblers, are made in various sizes. At the store of the Dennison Manufacturing Co., Fifth avenue and 26th Street, we have noticed imitations of full grown gobblers and hens, but most of those used by the florists are in sizes corresponding to the stages of a chicken's growth, but made up as gobblers. On the back there is a receptacle for short cut flowers.

At the store of E. J. Hession, 984 Madison avenue, we noticed fine window decorations. This store has two large show windows. In one there was a grand display of the chrysanthemums, Indian Summer and other good varieties; also, a variety of orchids; in the other a number of hanging baskets of the begonia, Mrs. Peterson. The store was otherwise well stocked with flowering and foliage plants, which are handled to good advantage, as there is a large conservatory in the rear; or to be exact, the store is built in the form of a conservatory, with two houses of considerable dimensions in the rear. He also handled a fine stock of carnations, grown at the Hession range in Flatbush.

At the store of Herman Warendorff, in the Ansonia hotel, there were a number of pleasing features. Numbers of the begonia, Mrs. Peterson, were noticed, with other good plants. Handle baskets, filled with large red apples, were in the show windows, the handles being decorated with small apples and red winter berries and ribbon.

Malandre Brothers, Broadway and 72d street, had turkey decorations, previously described, and also a fine stock of plants, chrysanthemums and other cut flowers.

At A. Ehrmann's, 2112 Broadway, a great variety of flower bowls is always kept in stock, and many of these were handsomely filled and arranged. As usual, there was a good stock of standard varieties of plants and cut flowers.

At the store of David Clarke's Sons, 2139 Broadway, there was a very excellent stock of cut flowers and plants and business continued good from the first of the week. This store has a fine family trade.

The Astoria Florist (M. Vlachos), 2188 Broadway, had fine features in plants; Otaheite oranges, cyclamens and hanging baskets of the begonia, Mrs. Peterson, being noteworthy.

Pappas Brothers, 2216 Broadway, had good features in plants; also in cut flowers, baskets of roses, sweet peas and calendulas.

Charles H. Brown, 2366 Broadway, always has an attractive store. The large cibotium in his show window is in itself a decoration. In plants, he had good begonias, solanums and azaleas.

A public market is a good place to sell flowers and plants at a holiday season. In the Astor market, Broadway and 95th street, the United Floral Co. has large space which they utilized to good advantage with flowering and foliage plants.

P. Velotas, 2445 Broadway, was well stocked with a variety of plants and also had a good business in cut flowers.

Although D. J. Pappas is now in the wholesale business, the store at Broadway and 106th street still bears his name and is conducted by a capable man. Many fine plants were noticed, such as heathers, begonias, cyclamens and crotons.

The Cathedral Florist (Pappageles), 2840 Broadway, had a fine stock of cut flowers and plants, noteworthy among the latter being Pandanus Veitchii.

Christatos & Koster, 717 Madison avenue, had many good features, noteworthy being their Japanese miniature gardens.

G. E. M. Stumpp, Fifth avenue and 58th street, usually has the best the market affords and was not behind for Thanksgiving. Exceptionally fine Otaheite oranges, poinsettias, begonias and other plants were noticed. He also carries a very attractive stock of vases, baskets, bowls and various decorative features.

At the C. A. Dards store, Madison avenue and 44th street, clever window arrangement was noticed in heather, poinsettias, crotons, bougainvilleas, cibotiums and other ferns. Pompon chrysanthemums were very tastefully arranged. Manager Perry stated that business was good.

Ralph Armstrong, Madison avenue and 47th street, had very clever features in baskets of begonias, orchids, roses and pansies.

There is a fine display at Alexander McConnell's, Fifth avenue and 49th street, all the year round, but when a holiday arrives they always add new features. There was an exceptionally fine display of poinsettias and many other plants, with an exceptionally fine stock of cut flowers.

Alfred Kottmiller, 426 Madison avenue, had his store finely decorated during the past summer and added new and pleasing features, one being a miniature fountain. For Thanksgiving he had hanging baskets of begonias and other fine pot plants.

Ferdinand Fleischman, Inc., Fifth avenue and 42d street, always has an attractive store, and takes pride in dressing it up for the holidays. He had a splendid lot of well colored poinsettias and tall and well fruited plants of Otaheite oranges, with many other good features.

Hugo Jahn, Nostrand avenue and Prospect place, Brooklyn, keeps a fine store and his Thanksgiving features were attractive. His window was finely arranged, a good stock of Adiantum Farleyense being reinforced by foliage and flowering plants.

The Callas Brothers, 656 Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, have recently taken the second story, over their original store, which also has fine show windows. They have fitted it up in good shape and put in a large stock of palms and other foliage plants, thus having two stories, which make a fine display. For Thanksgiving they added an extra stock of fine cut flowers.

Thanksgiving in Chicago Retail Stores.

The Thanksgiving trade was very good, according to the majority of the local florists, who disposed of practically all the stock they had to offer at satisfactory prices. The demand started in very late this year but there was a whirlwind finish and what at first appeared to be one of the poorest Thanksgivings turned out to be one of the best in years and helped considerably in offsetting the poor sales during the early part of November. Stock of all kinds sold well, especially colored flowers, there being very little demand for white only where funeral orders were booked. Pompons sold surprisingly well and there was a good demand for pink and yellow chrysanthemums. Roses, especially American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Milady, Richmond, Hadley, Rhea Reid and Hoosier Beauty, sold quickly and so did Opheelia and the other newer varieties. Orchids, lily of the valley, sweet peas, violets and gardenias were in brisk demand and in short supply. Freesias, Paper White narcissus and some Mrs. Francis King gladioli, were to be had and sold well. Cyclamens, begonias and azaleas had a good call and sold out early. Prices were much higher than last year, and, taking everything into consideration, everyone is more than satisfied with the Thanksgiving trade, which, from every point, was the most satisfactory in years.

Salzer Seed Co.'s Thanksgiving Publicity.

In a recent issue of the La Crosse, Wis., Tribune a splendidly illustrated full page advertisement of the greenhouse department of the John A. Salzer Seed Co. of that city, presented a forceful reminder of the appropriateness of flowers in the observance of Thanksgiving. In another section of the same edition, several illustrations of the company's extensive plant were shown, together with an interesting account of the rapid growth of the business from a modest beginning in 1866 to its present enviable position in the seed trade.

Jones-Russell Co. Adds Floor Space.

The Jones-Russell Co., 1284-1300 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, O., has solved a problem which confronts many florists located in the high-rent districts of large cities, where floor space is limited. This firm's store proper is located on a triangular shaped corner, which, though offering opportunity for fine window displays on three streets, left limited space for the conduct of its business, the display of a handsome line of baskets, of which they make a specialty, together with the extensive line of novelties usually carried by all first-class florists. Underneath this store, however, is an unusually large basement extending to the curb of the street on three sides (and the Euclid avenue sidewalks are exceptionally wide), which is now being utilized for offices, large store-rooms, a work-room, where funeral designs and similar orders are filled and a basket-making room, a wide ornamental stairway connecting with the main floor store, which is now used as a salesroom exclusively.

The basement addition, which adds about three times the original floor space, presents a very attractive appearance. The room is well lighted,

WITH THE GROWERS

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.

It looks very Christmassy at the "Plant A" section of this wonderful cutflower and plant growing establishment, at Morton Grove, 14 miles from Chicago. A few years ago the ranges now occupied by palms, ferns and other foliage and flowering pot plants were filled with carnations.

CHRISTMAS BEGONIAS AT POEHLMANN BROS. CO., MORTON GROVE, ILL.

comfortable easy chairs give it a homey look, while displayed on stands, tables and on the walls are baskets, novelties, etc. The company is well pleased with the new arrangement and claims it is giving the best possible return for the investment. C. F. B.

Greenhouse Heating by Wood Stove.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Would it be advisable to use a wood stove in a little greenhouse 10x20 feet, running the stove pipe under one of the benches? I use the house for geraniums and other summer bedding plants.

Michigan.

C. B.

Very good results may be obtained in heating greenhouses, even larger than the one described, with wood stoves. However, it will be found much more satisfactory, and the care needed will be greatly reduced, if a hot water system is put in.

There are on the market several inexpensive hot water heaters, and for the house described, a heater rated for 80 to 100 square feet of radiation will be amply large. In the way of heating surface, it will only be necessary to run a 1½-inch flow pipe on each side-wall and connect each of them with two 1½-inch returns underneath. L. R. T.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—A. M. & A. T. Spies have leased the Morning View Greenhouses.

PAULDING, O.—Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hawkins of this city celebrated their golden wedding Monday, December 4. Mrs. Hawkins is 73 years of age and the genial florist is 86 years young. Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins are well known in this vicinity and received many valuable tokens from their many friends in honor of the occasion, including a beautiful shipment of cut flowers from Bassett & Washburn, Chicago.

A constant demand for foliage and flowering plants by their customers, much of which stock had to be brought from eastern centers, induced the company to add this new department, and it now carries everything in plants and flowers, particularly such stock as is sold in the stores who depend on them for cut flowers. This department has grown very rapidly, more space having to be added each year. Although grown in large quantities, the quality is vigorously maintained; cyclamens are just as fine here as with a specialist, because men with special training have charge; plants in six-inch pots with 12 to 14 flowers are plentiful, the foliage is well marked and hard. The entire stock, filling two large houses, has all been sold, most of it for holiday delivery. The plants ranged in size from four to eight-inch pots, the six to eight inch sizes being the short azalea pots. Two large houses were filled with Begonias Cinnamati and Mrs. J. A. Peterson, all very full of bloom. Poinsettias were a feature; a good stock from three-inch pots up to large made-up pans, ferns and asparagus were added in the larger sizes. Thousands of azaleas were commencing to show color—Vervaeanea, Simon Mardner and Mme. Petrick were the varieties. They have carried very well. Already many orders have been taken for this stock, and Thos. Conlon, foreman of the plant department, is to be congratulated upon the excellent condition of all the stock.

The various palm ranges hold a great variety of stock in all sizes. H. M. Oeser, the foreman in this department, says the trade is growing so fast that they appear never to have enough of a size to meet the demand. Big blocks of the larger sized kentias are imported, while house after house is filled with plants from two-inch pots on up to four and six-inch, in the endeavor to grow all sizes here. One hundred and twenty bushels of kentia seed in the two varieties was sown last year. One hundred thousand areca seed was last season's planting. This palm is hard to get up, as the seed is apt to arrive in bad condition, if not handled carefully at every stage from gathering to delivery. All areca seed is planted in two-inch palm pots, four seeds together, which are grown on as one plant, finally making a beautiful specimen. Nearly 4,000 Phoenix Roebelii have an added value from the fact that no seed arrived last year, nor is there any for this season. Livistonia rotundifolia is a feature, there being 10,000 of this scarce palm. Probably the largest stock of Pandanus Veitchii in the country is seen here; several large houses in various sizes are filled with this useful—decorative plant. Dracenas in variety are also a feature. Crotons have a house and will soon be one of their quantity plants.

Ferns, so necessary for the retail trade, are largely grown; a range of houses is filled with stock, planted out for runners and to grow on. There are also blocks of the finished product, which find a ready sale. The value of the Cibotium is recognized here in a house full; it is difficult to get a stock of large plants, because of the demand, which is so constant for this great fern. The Glory fern and Farleyense, the former planted out for cutting, have a generous space. White Adiantum hybridum and California are grown in pots for fronds. Two-inch table ferns are seen in large numbers. The fern and orchid section are in charge of A. K. Anderson, who is an orchid enthusiast. A recent importation of phalaenopsis direct from the Philippines, had suffered considerably on the trip, but was recovering nicely under his care. There were about 3,000 plants in this lot.

A section of six 125-foot houses were filled with cattleyas. Trianae is full of buds that will furnish a good crop for the holidays.

An interesting feature was Gigan-teum lilies just planted for Easter—40,000 in a block that filled several houses. These were all in six-inch pots, the bulb set in the bottom on an inch of soil, with just enough additional to cover it, filling about one-third of the pot. When later, the shoot is well above the rim, another third of soil is added, when about a foot in height, the filling is completed. The extra work entailed is more than repaid by the results. There is never too much water. The stem sends out roots to the surface of the soil, which in addition to those of the bulb, are a great addition to the plant.

Chrysanthemums are the crop before the lilies. They are grown like everything else here, in quantity; 17,000 of Bonnaillon gives an idea. A table of short stock Bonnaillon, planted as late as July 20, were just right for Thanksgiving. A lot of late pompons in narrow boxes, to fit side by side across tables, were grown outside and brought in just before frost, taking the place of Boston ferns that had just been lifted. Two long propagating tables were filled with many thousands of chrysanthemum cuttings. Stevia is also grown in boxes outside and fills the space when the early chrysanthemums are cut out. Sweet peas also follow the early chrysanthemums, several large houses being planted to them, from which the first flowers were expected the middle of January. White cotton strings, six inches apart, running to a height of six feet, criss-crossed either side of a row, formed a double lattice to support the vines.

One might fill a book with the many features that presented themselves on every side. Each section foreman is a specialist in his line. Tony Gabel is the efficient man in charge of carnations and chrysanthemums. There are something over 200,000 carnations. Leading varieties were: White Wonder, White Perfection and Matchless, white; Mrs. Ward, Akehurst and Enchantress, pink, and Beacon, red. Akehurst was not thought free enough and Matchless became blotched with pink in late winter and spring, but sold just as well. Enchantress was still one of the best. A new pink snapdragon, called Janesville, a short grower, but a fine color and very free, with spikes 24 inches in length was their best variety.

In plant B, the Killarney range, 13 houses each 30x250, ridge and furrow plan contained 50,000 Killarneys, three houses of White, four of Brilliant, and six of Pink; they were all being groomed for the holidays. The American Beauty range of nine houses, 500 feet in length, seemed ready for a record holiday crop. The plants, grown on cement tables about a foot from the ground, were strong and vigorous, with a wealth of heavy dark green foliage, topped with a fine showing of the much desired buds. A section of plant "A," a large range, was filled with Russell, which was carrying a lot of flowers and looked very promising. Plant C, devoted entirely to roses, is worth another day. No one interested in the business, can visit this wonderful establishment without getting much valuable information and an inspiration that will awaken a new life and interest in his work.

J. A. Budlong, Chicago.

There is something over 250,000 feet of glass in this establishment, all planted with roses, with the exception of chrysanthemums, which fill the propagating houses during the summer and fall. The treatment of the stock here is somewhat different from that of other growers, in that the plants are given a higher temperature and watered much more frequently. Albert Collatz, the foreman, who seems to know every little wrinkle in rose growing, but who is still experimenting, holds that many growers water too sparingly. Some beds were pointed out that had been flooded with water four days in succession, well syringed the fifth, and had another copious watering the next day. Asked about black spot, he said it did not worry them—a double dosing of water and a trifle higher temperature soon fixed the spot. Dull days made no difference in watering or syringing; it was always cloudy when it rained and they watered or syringed whenever they thought it necessary, regardless of the weather. The houses are all built on the ridge and furrow plan; one block of seven houses, 47x200 feet; one of nine houses, 47x300 feet, and one of nine houses, 20x300 feet, all heated by eight boilers of 160-horse power each. The stock was planted, some in ground beds and others grown on low benches, about 12 inches from the ground. Table bottoms had spaces between the boards to allow drainage; a layer of cinders prevents soil from coming through.

in some ranges a half crop had been taken, the balance coming on for the holiday trade. All the plants looked strong and vigorous, in splendid condition for the winter campaign. Quite a number of the houses had been kept straight on without rest for two and in some cases three years, and appeared to do equally as well as those which were cut back and rested. In pruning some varieties, the practice is to leave all bottom wood, cutting the plants back to about 18 inches with hedge shears, the lower leaves developed being a great addition to the strength of the plant.

Grafted stock here gave more flowers, when forced, than own root. Some varieties did not take well to the stock. Sunburst would often jump or break off at the junction. Russell is a winner with them—as good as any rose they had. Milady is also a good one and Lady Alice Stanley looked very promising, although all varieties appeared to be at their best.

Interesting experiments with manures and some beds entirely without stimulants were seen side by side, with but little apparent difference. The Russell, however, appeared much happier under well fed conditions, the starved section looking very hungry. Lily of the valley is forced in quantity. Some pips, the last of a lot two years old, were producing fair flowers.

Frank Oechsli, Chicago.

A splendid line of flowering and foliage plants is to be seen in quantity at the establishment of Frank Oechsli, 4711 West Quincy street, his range extending to Jackson boulevard and from Forty-seventh to Forty-ninth avenues, where 85,000 feet of glass is filled at all times with choice, seasonable stock. A large section of this range contains kentias in various sizes; also Dracenas Massangeana and fragrans in from six to eight-inch pots, a very even lot of vigorous growth, with the Massangeana showing splendid color. A lot in tubs on pedestals were fine specimens. Aspidistras are handled in quantities and several houses of Scottii and ele-

The varieties grown in quantity are: Killarney Brilliant, 16,000; White Killarney, 22,000; Pink Killarney, 8,000; Russell, 37,000; Ophelia, 24,000; Sunburst, 12,000; Milady, 5,000; Lady Alice Stanley, 2,600, and Hoosier Beauty, 3,000—about 131,000 plants in all. The stock was in various productive stages; gantissima are being finished on a skeleton board staging just above the benches.

Ficus is grown here in quantity, old elastica being favored; this variety is grown outside during summer, they were very robust looking. Single and branched plants. Araucaria robusta, quite a block of plants, were done well. Table ferns for dishes, mostly two-inch stock, filled several houses. Mossed baskets of Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, also earthenware hanging baskets filled with tradescantia in assorted variegations, appeared very saleable.

Several houses, recently filled with pot chrysanthemums, now hold azaleas, some for Christmas and others for later delivery. Poinsettias, cyclamens of his stock for Christmas. He was always successful with ericas or heather, but as good wine improves with age, so does he; therefore, we think his ericas are, if there is any difference, a little better than ever before. There is a great and wonderfully well fruited and ripened stock of solanums or Jerusalem cherries. Otaheite orange are prominent. Azaleas, cyclamens, daisies, dracenas, camelias and ferns are all well represented, and there are many other varieties of plants. He forces great quantities of lily of the valley, and the lilies, Formosum and rubrum. Florists visiting New York in search of Christmas plants should take the Long Island railroad at the Pennsylvania terminal, with a ticket for College Point. Just across the tracks from the College Point station, there is a large range—that's Schultheis'.

Hill's Window Box Evergreens.

The outside, winter decoration of the city or suburban dwelling with hardy ornamental evergreens is rapidly becoming the custom in all the large cities. Boxes are fitted to the windows and balconies, and filled with dwarf or young stock of the proper size for the location.

Evergreens in selected single specimens, planted in terra cotta or vitrified clay pots or vases, make very acceptable ornaments for the stoop and in the vestibule. There are other vantage points as on the landings and along the steps leading up to some of the large residences. Porch boxes, which are such a feature of the summer decorations, are filled with the hardy evergreens and add much in their decorative appearance.

Hotels now consider these evergreens as an important part of their winter decoration, so that every available window ledge is fitted with boxes to conform to the architectural appearance of the building and filled with the varieties that will make the best appearance. The large clubs have also adopted this form of beautifying their structures, all of which features, collectively, add much to the appearance of the city.

and primulas are largely grown. Thousands of poinsettias in various sizes, from three-inch pots up to large made-up pans, filled several houses, all quality stock, leaved to the soil.

Several houses are devoted to cyclamens, set for the most part on a skeleton staging over the benches, which admits of more light and air. The bench proper was then filled with freshly potted Easter lilies, which double use of space is a feature with Mr. Oechslin, there being a number of sub-benches or shelves wherever it was possible to place them. The cyclamen were very strong and vigorous, well set with buds. They are grown inside all summer.

Primula obconica, select strains, occupied two houses—timed to be just right for the holidays. A house of celestial peppers, were full of their red and bluish green pods—a good Christmas plant. A large frame outside held Jerusalem cherries. There was also a house of Begonia Cincinnati in fine color.

Mr. Oechslin, who imports considerable stock from Europe, had, in common with others, great difficulty in getting much of it through—some things had carried well, while others had arrived somewhat damaged. He is a great economist and keeps a close rotation of plants in all the houses. Immediately after Easter, a large line of bedding plants as far forward as possible, fill the space. Ferns, cyclamens and other plants are brought along when the bedding stock is sold. In the foliage plant range, young stock is always waiting to be shifted on as soon as the finished plants are moved. Several large auto trucks are required for deliveries to keep up with the quick service now demanded.

Anton Schultheis, College Point, N. Y.

Anton Schultheis always has something interesting to show visitors, as with particular reference to plant growing, he is "a fellow of infinite variety." He has had a great stock of chrysanthemums in pots, but they were well cleaned out for Thanksgiving, and his next big drive is for Christmas. As usual, his stock of Christmas plants is very fine and orders are already coming in. He has a particularly fine stock of poinsettias, some of which were sold at Thanksgiving, but he managed to keep a part

POINSETTIAS AT FRANK OECHSLIN'S, CHICAGO.

The D. Hill Nursery Co., Inc., Dundee, Ill., whose nursery was established over 50 years ago, and who grow the largest collection of hardy evergreens in this country, have of late years devoted their attention to the selection of the varieties that are best suited for window boxes, urns and vases.

There are types of all the evergreens in the various species that assume a compact, dwarf symmetrical growth; such stock is especially fitted for this work. Norway spruce, Austrian pine, Mugho pine, white pine, American arbor vitae and boxwood, are all available, and by reason of their short, bushy growth, may be worked into any decorative scheme.

There are a number of ways of filling boxes. Placed closely together, all of the same height, gives a hedge-like appearance; high at the ends and low in the center, affords with a little clipping, a graceful curved effect. A standard box tree, with its ball-like head coming up to the height of the ends and placed in the center of this curved box line, gives a very pretty affect. High trimmed plants at the ends, with a lower compact line straight across between, present a good appearance. Each alternate plant, six inches higher than the others, and all trimmed square, make an attractive box. Each tree planted so as to show its individuality is another plan, while some bushy stock, such as boxwood, can be trimmed or squared to cubes, standing two inches apart, which are well suited for some locations. A box filled with a number of varieties, gives a shaded color effect that is quite attractive.

Junipers in variety, yews, arbor vitae, hemlock and Norway spruce, are all good as individual specimens, which add very much as decorative features on door steps, in vestibules and other like situations.

A feature at the Hill nursery is Norway spruce, two to three feet, very shapely plants, which are largely used by florists to be potted up and sold as Christmas trees for decoration or for table use. These and all specimen evergreens are delivered in green tubs or with roots covered with burlap, as desired.

THANKSGIVING BUSINESS GOOD.

The wholesale and retail business during the past week was better than expected by all concerned. Thanksgiving day cleaned up the entire market. Bonnaffons, white and yellow; Chadwick, white and yellow; Eatons, Niagara and pink varieties, sold at prices ranging from $10 to $25 per 100. The market was well supplied with Bonnaffons, but the larger varieties were a little scarce, the demand exceeding the supply. Roses were scarce. This can be especially said about American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell. Long stem American Beauties sold at $5 per dozen, shorter stemmed at $4, $3 and $2. Russells brought from $8 to $20 per 100. Ophelia, Killarneys and other varieties of hybrid tea roses were from $4 to $12.50 per 100. The supply of carnations was very good. The very best varieties of red and Ward sold at $4 per 100. Enchantress and white varieties sold at $20 to $30 per 1,000. Pompon chrysanthemums were plentiful and they were good. They had eager buyers and sold at $4 to $5 per 100 sprays. Violets were scarce. The supply could not satisfy the demand. They were sold at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1 per 100. Paper White narcissi were plentiful and they brought $2.50 and $3 per hundred. There was a great demand for lily of the valley and orchids. The former, steady in price at $6, sold out and orchids cleaned up at $7.50 and $9 per dozen. Harris lilies sold at $8 per 100. Greens sold well.

SHAW'S GARDEN BANQUET.

The large hall of the University Club was the scene, December 1, of the Shaw Garden annual dinner, covers being laid for 120 members and guests. Following the repast, Doctor Moore, who presided as toastmaster, introduced Professor White of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., who spoke very enthusiastically of the advancement in floriculture and horticulture in the United States. His address was very entertaining.

NOTES.

The flower show committee reports all arrangements for the spring flower show shaping up nicely. The chairmen of different sub-committees will meet December 6. The general public is taking a great interest in this show. Mr. Ohlweiler of the Missouri Botanical Garden is encouraging all visitors to become interested in the coming spring show.

At the west end flower shops, everybody was busy with weddings and parties for Thanksgiving. Especially good business is reported by F. H. Weber, Miss Neumann, Ayres Floral Co., F. C. Weber and Joseph Wittek.

All florists and their friends are making arrangements to attend the florists' dance December 6 at Westminster hall. The committee of this dance guarantee all a jolly good time.

Professor J. C. T. Uphof, formerly assistant professor of botany and plant breeding at the University of Arizona, has been appointed assistant at the Missouri Botanical Garden.

The Missouri Botanical Garden, during the last year, has shown great improvement and it can truly be said it is now one of the finest in the country.

A new flower store, "The Blossom Shop," will be open next week. I. Ericson, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., and Miss W. McCleaver, will have charge of the same.

J. F. Ammann of Edwardsville, who consigns his stock to C. A. Kuehn, is shipping some very fine orchids and roses.

The down-town florists, Mullanphy, Grimm & Gorly and F. Foster, enjoyed a very satisfactory Thanksgiving trade. Miss Rose Schoenle is a daily visitor to the market. She reports business as good as can be expected.

The first poinsettias and azaleas of the season were seen a few days ago at J. Bourdet's.

W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. reports a very satisfactory Thanksgiving trade.

Miss Bettie Carlson of the Mullanphy Florists, has resigned her position with that firm.

F. Windler & Co. had very fine Paper Whites and pompons, which sold rapidly.

Visitors: Frank Farney, with M. Rice Co.; Martin Reukopf, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., both of Philadelphia, Pa. X. Y. Z.

BEST THANKSGIVING DEMAND IN HISTORY.

From all reports 1916 Thanksgiving trade was the best ever. Every dealer cleaned up well, which is a good indication that all the stores had a large business. All the wholesale houses were practically sold out on Wednesday afternoon and by closing time had nothing more to offer. Yellow chrysanthemums were in great demand and sold at good prices. Pink and white were not so plentiful; in fact were very scarce. White had a heavy call, as one football team playing here had this for one of its colors. Short roses were in very limited supply and brought better money than was expected. American Beauties took quite a jump the first two days of the week, selling as high as $7.50 per dozen. The advance came on too sudden and most of the buyers did without, buying long stem roses instead. There were some very fine carnations seen which brought good money, the best selling at $4 per 100. Sweet peas and violets were very scarce. It seems that no violets were shipped to this market at all. Yellow daisies and orchids were sold in their stead. Stevia is coming now, which is very good. Now that the chrysanthemum season is over, other stock will be selling much better. Lilies and Paper Whites will have a much better demand. Taking it all in all the season and the first holiday of the season was very satisfactory and indications are for a very large Christmas trade.

NOTES.

John Baldinger, one of the first and best known florists of this city, died at the home of his parents in Avalon, December 1. For many years he was employed by the B. L. Elliott Co., later with the Elliott & Ulam Co. Of late years he has been with the John Bader Co. He was well known by the florists of this city and very well liked by all who knew him. The sympathy of the trade is extended to the family.

Edw. McGrath, of the Blind Floral Co., says their business is increasing more and more each year. Their new Ford delivery car was received by them in time for the rush. It is one of the most attractive cars in the city.

Annie Garrity had large orders for fancy roses for the opening of the Third National Bank, now occupying new quarters.

Charles Patton, of Sewickley, is cutting some very fine stevia, which he consigns to this market.

J. B. Murdock Co. is cutting some very fine pink, white and yellow chrysanthemums.

E. B. Maxwell, of Wilkinsburg, has a handsome new delivery car.

COMPLETE THANKSGIVING CLEANUP.

The Thanksgiving trade surpassed all expectations. Business started with a rush on Wednesday and continued through Thanksgiving morning, the result being a complete cleanup. Chrysanthemums as usual were the leaders in popularity and the supply was heavy, especially in the larger blooms, many of which sold as high as $1 each. American Beauty roses were good sellers as long as they lasted, but the supply ran short early. There was a big increase in the supply of fancy baskets and corsages as compared with a year ago. Begonia Lorraine made its appearance and sold at sight as the supply was very limited. Roses of all varieties, carnations, sweet peas, violets, orchids, lilies and narcissi were all good stock.

NOTES.

The Alpha Floral Co., as usual, prepared for the greatest Thanksgiving trade in its history, but in spite of the immense amount of stock on hand, they were soon cleaned out. This firm is installing one of the finest as well as the largest show cases for ribbons and chiffons in this city.

W. J. Barnes reports a splendid trade and sold out to the last flower. He had an exceptionally large cut of chrysanthemums as well as carnations, white and yellow narcissi and orchids. Pot plants were in heavy demand and the supply was much short of the call.

T. J. Noll & Co. report Thanksgiving business double that of last year.

The shipping trade here was enormous. Their large supply of chrysanthemums sold out early, including 8,000 Bonnaffon received from a St. Louis grower November 29.

H. Kusik & Co. handled about 14,000 fine blooms in chrysanthemums alone and cleaned up early. A fine line of roses, carnations and violets were also fast movers. The shipping trade was the heaviest since this firm has been in business.

Biederman & Son report business was better than they expected and they had to make several trips to the market for additional stock. They have also had numerous orders for funeral work.

Ed. Humfeld had a splendid business, but did not have enough chrysanthemums to meet the demand. He reports his azaleas are in fine shape and will be on hand for the Christmas trade.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had a big increase in sales compared with those of a year ago. Chrysanthemums were in great demand and their large supply was exhausted early.

A. F. Barbe cleaned up well on cut stock and says he wished he had 10,000 more chrysanthemums coming on. Last week he cut 5,000 fine carnations and a great many excellent roses.

Arthur Newell reports prices better than last year with an increase in volume of business fully 30 per cent. Fine Eaton and Chadwick were features here in quantity.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. sold out completely. They had a large supply of chrysanthemums, fancy baskets, corsages, etc. Trade was exceptionally heavy.

John Stevens was the "chrysanthemum king" in this city this year. His Eaton and Chadwick could not have been better grown and met with ready sale.

Fred Fromholdt had a very heavy call for corsage work. His business was much larger than he anticipated and used up every available flower.

The Peterson Floral Co. report A1 business with heavy call for chrysanthemums and Lorraine begonias in seven and eight-inch pots.

Thousands of chrysanthemums were disposed of in this city to autoists who attended the Missouri-Kansas football game at Lawrence.

A. Mohr moved in a few perfectly grown Lorraine begonias and found a ready market for them.

Visitors: H. P. Zweltsloot, representing Driehuizen Bros., Lisse, Holland; W. P. Ward, of D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill.; A. P. Pannevis, with Koster & Co., Boskoop, Holland.

THANKSGIVING TRADE SATISFACTORY.

The ideal weather conditions the past week, especially on Thanksgiving, had their good effects, for the wholesale houses report a clean up at moderate prices. There still was a large supply of chrysanthemums, but they cleared nicely. The receipts of both roses and carnations were just about equal to the demand. Both single and double violets and good stevias were quickly disposed of. While in pot plants there was not a great variety, the quality was good and all moved well. All in all, business fully came up to expectations.

NOTES.

Otto Speidel, wife and family, of Oconomowoc, Wis., will remove to Lake Forest, Ill., this week, where Mr. Speidel will execute the landscape architecture on the new country residence of Philip D. Armour. Mr. Speidel, who has lived in Oconomowoc for many years, having had charge of "Danforth Lodge," owned by Mr. Armour, is favorably known among the local craft, having officiated as judge at several of our local flower shows.

Hans Heine, for many years decorator for the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., has joined the A. F. Kellner & Co.'s force, due to the fact that the former firm has dropped this line of work.

On December 7 the annual charity ball takes place in the auditorium, and, as in former years, there ought to be a brisk demand for corsage bouquets and table decorations.

Two members of the florists' club will be on the programme with papers at the annual meeting of Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, to be held in Madison, December 12-14.

TRADE HIGHLY SATISFACTORY.

Thanksgiving day business was highly satisfactory and exceeded in volume the trade of any previous year upon this festive occasion so important to the trade. Chrysanthemums of both the pompon and standard types were used in great quantities, and though many of the larger ones were soft, being held back for the event, they nevertheless sold readily, as did the ever-popular anemone and pompon types, and when the business of the day was over there was practically no more to be had, except perhaps some very inferior stock. Roses, too, sold well and the market was caught short of enough of the better grades to meet the unusual demand. Violets sold surprisingly well and the stock was, for the season, unusually fine and many more could have been sold had they been available. The supply of carnations was about equal to the demand and the quality fairly good and both the supply and quality of these is daily improving, though a decided shortage is expected for Christmas trade. The coal question is still serious with many growers, though some improvement is noted in both the supply and price, but not sufficient to dispel the apprehension of the larger consumers. Shipments of azaleas are still arriving, and frequently the stock is found in very bad condition and much loss will be suffered by shippers of these and the consignees which will be difficult to properly adjust. Belated shipments of Dutch bulbs, too, are still coming to further distress an already overloaded market.

J. F. S.

Kerr to Built New Range.

The Robt. C. Kerr Floral Co., Houston, Tex., has acquired 10 acres of land four miles from that city, upon which will be erected 24 houses, 12 of which will be of canvas, an invention of R. C. Kerr's, the result of 20 years' experimenting to secure a cheap yet suitable substitute for glass, and which idea he intends to patent, according to the Houston Post of November 26, 1916. It is proposed to raise as much as possible of the stock that is disposed of by the company in Houston and vicinity. Orchid growing will be a feature at the new range and there will be houses devoted to chrysanthemums, carnations, bluebells, azaleas, cyclamens, ferns, palms, etc. The houses will be 125x150 feet each and the establishment will be equipped with modern systems of heating, lighting and watering. The estimated cost is in the neighborhood of $60,000.

WOODLAND, CALIF.—George H. Hecke, of this city, has been appointed state horticultural commissioner to succeed Dr. A. J. Cook, deceased.

OBITUARY.

Fred Newell Strail.

Fred Newell Strail, well known Chicago florist, died suddenly at his residence, 4147 Gladys avenue, in that city, November 30. He was 47 years old and spent the greater part of his life in the florist business and worked for many of the leading Chicago retail florists, and at one time, had a store of his own in the Wellington Hotel. He was at one time manager of A. Lange's East Madison street store, and later was connected with the Bohannon Floral Co., Briggs Floral Co. and other establishments. Mr. Strail was one of the best all around florists in the city and had a host of friends in the trade here as well as elsewhere. He has been in ill health for some time and has not been connected with the trade for about a year, but was just making arrangements with one of the downtown florists to return when everyone was shocked to hear of his sudden death. The funeral was held Sunday, December 3, at 2:30 p. m., from the Central Masonic temple, 912 North LaSalle street, Kilwinning lodge No. 311, A. F. & A. M., in charge of services. Burial was at Rosehill. He is survived by a wife, Sarah A. Strail, nee Chandler; mother, Mrs. Mahala Strail, and brother, Chester A. Strail.

James Anderson.

James Anderson, of Chicago, better known as "Jimmy," died suddenly at the Stock Exchange Hotel, Saturday evening, about 11 o'clock, from blood poisoning, at the age of 38 years. He was born in Sparta, Greece, and came to Chicago at an early age and for a time worked at Peter Reinberg's wholesale store and later started in business for himself. He was interested in retail stores at Terre Haute, Ind., Uniontown, Pa., and Dayton, O., and devoted the greater part of his time in the Chicago wholesale market in buying stock to supply these three stores. He was well and favorably known to the trade and had a host of friends who were greatly surprised to hear of his sudden death. The funeral was held from the Western Undertaking establishment, Wednesday, December 6, and the remains were laid to rest in Elmwood cemetery.

F. Charles Herms.

F. Charles Herms, for the past 16 years actively connected with the Herms Floral Co., Portsmouth, O., died at his home in that city November 16, following one week's illness, aged 81 years. Mr. Herms was born in Westphalia, Prussia, and came to America when he was 18 years old. The greater part of his early life was spent in the mercantile business in Portsmouth.

Bayard Thayer.

Bayard Thayer, widely known as one of the most liberal patrons of horticulture, whose extensive estate at South Lancaster, Mass., is recognized as one of the finest in the United States, died November 29 at the age of 54 years.

CORFU, N. Y.—David J. Scott has added one house to his range, 36x126 feet, which will be planted with sweet peas.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The W. F. Kasting Co. is busy in its new building. Secretary Eliss finds the cut flower supply rather below demand. The receiving, storing, and shipping conveniences are ideal in the new place, not the least being its own refrigerating plant.—M. Bloy, Detroit, Mich., was a visitor.

THE date of Easter next year is April 8, about two weeks earlier than in 1916.

THE next meeting of the American Genetic Association will be held at New York, December 26-January 1.

PAPER famine has hit department stores hard, many of heavy grades of paper used for wrapping, and of tissue paper used for inside wrapping, having advanced from 300 to 400 per cent in the last year. Paper bills of some of the larger stores will be from $50,000 to $100,000 more than last year.

Personal.

John S. Carter, president of the Nicotine Mfg. Co., St. Louis, Mo., is attending the druggists' convention at Chicago this week.

Orchid Fly.

Chas. Bond, the well known orchid specialist of Naperville, Ill., says free ventilation which will permit the fly to escape is one of the best remedies and that another good plan in cold weather is to let the temperature fall to about 38 degrees occasionally, the fly being unable to withstand this low temperature.

Potash From Kelp.

In 1911 the Bureau of Soils was authorized by the Congress to make a survey of the nation's resources in fertilizer materials, particularly in potash, for which this country was entirely dependent upon the German mines. As a result of this reconnaissance, it became evident that the largest and most immediately available source of potash in this country was the giant kelps of the Pacific coast.

As a result of the department's investigations and the prohibition by Germany of the exportation of potash salts, American manufacturers have erected eight large plants in southern California for the extraction of potash from kelp. On September 1, 1916, about 125,000 tons of raw kelp had been harvested and treated, yielding approximately 10 per cent of dry kelp.

The plants now in operation, owing to the present abnormal prices for potash, are devoting relatively little attention to the elaboration of processes for the recovery of by-products. If this situation continues, they probably will not be able to produce potash at a profit when conditions become normal. In the circumstances it seems desirable for the department to demonstrate the commercial feasibility of producing potash and by-products from kelp with a view to put the industry on a sound economic basis. Plans have been formulated for erecting and operating, at some advantageous point on the coast of southern California, a plant with a daily capacity of not less than 200 tons of raw kelp, in order that the necessary experiments may be conducted.

It is hoped that these experiments will result in the establishment of a potash industry which will prove profitable and permanent and render this country independent of foreign sources in normal times.—Secretary of Agriculture Report for 1916.

Bulbs and Other British Imports.

At the meeting of the council of the Horticultural Trades Association of Great Britain and Ireland, October 10, the secretary reported that he had had a heavy correspondence the last few weeks on the subject of bulb imports. Rumors were flying about that extensive importations had come in, in spite of the prohibition, through the parcel post, and also that permits had been, or would be, granted for imports of bulbs for stock-growing purposes. Inquiries from the board of trade elicited that there was no truth in these reports and that the government had no intention whatever of granting any licenses for imports. He said that the president had written to one leading Dutch firm which had been soliciting orders lately, strongly protesting against its action, and pointing out that the letters sent out only gave rise to misunderstanding and could be of no service to anyone.

In view of the fact that the Royal Horticultural Society Parliamentary Sub-committee was meeting the same afternoon, to consider the conditions affecting the importation of horticultural products after the war, this question was then considered. The feeling of the meeting was unanimously in favor of action being taken to protect our trade against foreign dumping after the war. The resolution recently passed by the French Nursery Federation to discourage, or totally prohibit, imports from Germany and Austria, to treat neutrals somewhat more favorably, and to give the most favorable terms possible to our allies, was generally approved and recommended as a suggestion for the consideration of the Parliamentary Committee.—British Horticultural Advertiser.

Funeral Flowers.

The Idle-Hour Nurseries, Macon, Ga., send this clipping from the Macon News of December 1, 1916:

In a recent issue of the London Times the following advertisement appears:

"By the special desire of the late Clement Leigh Watson-Smith, friends are requested not to send flowers at his funeral, but in lieu thereof a donation to the Faversham Cottage hospital would be appreciated by his family."

The obvious comment which the average person would be inclined to make with regard to this unusual request would be that the money undoubtedly would do more good if donated to the hospital instead of being spent for flowers. But is there not another side to the question? Are we becoming so utilitarian in these latter days that our criteria of values are to be thus weighed and measured with such nice calculation?

The custom of bringing a few flowers to the bier of our beloved dead is one which, whatever its origin, expresses a sentiment which finds echo deep in the common heart of man. The parting from a loved one through death is a universal experience, one which sooner or later brings us face to face with the one insoluble mystery of life. Faith alone solves it in keeping with the longings of the human heart. Faith upholds and strengthens the fragile and tender hopes of love when love faces the cold and lifeless form of one beloved. Somehow there is an involuntary groping after some tangible expression of all this, and what more beautiful and appropriate form could it take than the bringing of an offering of a few fragrant blossoms to his grave? And why should such an perfect expression of love be marred by the utilitarian consideration as to whether the pittance spent might not be put to better use?

So, in spite of the apparent good sense of the gentleman's "special desire," we shall bring to the bier of each departing friend, as in turn they leave us through the coming years, an offering in keeping with the tender sentiment which prompts it—whether it be good sense or not.

THANKSGIVING RELIEVES GLUTTED MARKET.

The market is well supplied with stock, but the demand is better than it was for the several weeks preceding Thanksgiving, consequently stock is bringing better prices. Thanksgiving business was good and helped to clean up a glutted market. Roses are in excellent supply with American Beauty receipts sufficient for present needs. Carnations are in good supply and find a good market. Some excellent late chrysanthemums and pompons may be had. Easter lily and calla lily receipts are large enough to take care of every present demand for them. Double and single violets are coming in in good quantities and generally meet with a good call. Stevia is excellent and has become plentiful. Paper White narcissus receipts, too, have become larger. Other offerings include orchids, lily of the valley and sweet peas.

NOTES.

Oliver Pherson, brother of Mrs. Gus Adrian, Jr., and associated with the Wm. Murphy Co. for the past five years, died suddenly, December 4, after a brief illness. His many friends mourn his untimely death.

Rooted Carnation Cuttings Immediate Delivery.

We are now booking orders for our New Seedling SUPERB—$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

SUPERB is a sport of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink, and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full, and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

GRATIFYING BUSINESS CONDITIONS.

Business in general seems very satisfactory. There is plenty of money in circulation and the florists are getting their share. The weather has been ideal. Chrysanthemums have about seen the end of their season, but roses and carnations are arriving in fine condition, the former commanding prices ranging from $1 to $2 per dozen, while the latter are quoted at 75 cents. Double violets move well at $1 per bunch of 50. Poinsettias are beginning to arrive and are sold at prices ranging from $2 to $4 per dozen. The Thanksgiving trade was the best ever known in this city, everything selling well at good prices.

NOTES.

Cowan Bros. & Co., Thomas Stevenson and the Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co. have all received shipments of azaleas, but in each case damaged condition is reported.

The Davis Gardens Co. has just completed another house. This makes a total of five house 72x600 feet and one house 30x150 feet.

The Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co. has just completed a new garage and storage building.

Fred Wunker & Sons disposed of a house of Lynwood Hall for the Thanksgiving trade.

Fred G. Heintz has moved into his new house at the Davis Gardens.

THANKSGIVING TRADE BEST IN YEARS.

A fine Thanksgiving trade, exceeding that of any previous year, is the general report of local florists. One concern showed an increase in sales of about 35 per cent. Business kept up strong all of Thanksgiving day, practically cleaning out stocks. Chrysanthemums were somewhat short of demand, and brought fancy prices, wholesale and retail. They are now out of stock. Roses now have the call, and are coming in plentifully. The variety being shown is unusually large. Prices range from $1.50 to $5, aside from American Beauties, which bring $6 to $10. Violets, sweet peas and other corsage flowers exclusive of lily of the valley, are in ample supply and in good demand. Cuttings of carnations leave little margin over consumption. The crop is of fine quality, but below the average yield, and florists anticipate a scarcity. The Paper White narcissus is now a popular feature of stock, at from 75 cents to $1. There is a shortage of small pot plants, although this condition promises to be remedied in the near future. Stock peculiar to the

We import the raw material and dye it a CHRISTMAS RED.

Our importation consisted of the best EE quality and the same standard of second quality ruscus which is shorter and very suitable for wreaths and basket work.

Our EE Ruscus is worthy of due consideration as it is positively devoid of any black spots acquired through imperfect growth. Economically it is the best simply because we have not used chemicals in the preparation of it that would tend to increase the weight.

THANKSGIVING TRADE VERY GOOD.

The Thanksgiving trade was very good and considerably better than last year with a grand cleanup in practically all lines with the exception of a few white chrysanthemums, carnations, roses, lilies and Paper White narcissus. American Beauty roses had a splendid call and cleaned up early every day at high prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell, Milady, Richmond, Rhea Reid, Hoosier Beauty and Hadley also sold well and there was no surplus when the store closed at night. Ophelia, Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Lady Alice Stanley, Francis Scott Key, Mrs. Moorfield Storey and Bayard Thayer were good sellers and were in short supply. Roses, in general, cleaned up almost completely with the exception of a few White Killarney. Chrysanthemums were in good demand, especially yellow and pink, which cleaned up, but there was practically no call whatever for white. Pompons never sold better for Thanksgiving than did they this year especially in the colored varieties which brought satisfactory prices. Orchids and gardenias were good property and all the stock offered sold quickly at good figures. Violets were in brisk demand and cleaned up at surprisingly good prices compared to former years. Sweet peas were none too plentiful but what stock was offered was disposed of almost as soon as it reached the store. Carnations did not move any too well and there was no demand to speak of outside of the colored varieties, which brought fairly good prices but nowhere near the advertised quotations. Miscellaneous flowers were in good demand and certain items were in extra good call, especially calendulas and snapdragons. Considering the large supply of stock offered this Thanksgiving and the cleanup that was experienced in almost all lines everyone seems to be pretty well satisfied with the result and in nearly all instances report about a twenty per cent increase in sales over last year. Prices were not as high in some items as last year but taking everything into consideration the Thanksgiving trade was one of the best in years. The shipping trade was exceptionally good and the city demand was very satisfactory and from all reports the retail florists in general all had good business and disposed of what stock they had to offer. The out-of-town florists in most all instances also must have enjoyed good business for the demand immediately after Thanksgiving was surprisingly good and what little stock there was available was disposed of quickly at very satisfactory prices.

This means that we are equipped to handle all of your orders to your entire satisfaction.

NOTES.

Joseph Michal has leased the John Michal store at Seventy-first street and Stony Island avenue, taking possession December 1.

CHICAGO

Seventy-two years ago Michael Lochner, driving an ox team, used to ford the Chicago river at Morton Grove on his way to the city. November 28 he helped to dedicate the Scott bridge, on the site of the ford. The bridge, which cost $20,000, is intended to facilitate the heavy automobile traffic in that region. Mrs. A. F. Poehlmann broke a bottle of champagne on the abutment by way of christening the structure. Then a celebration was held at the Wayside Inn. Among those present were Peter Reinberg, president of the county board; Commissioners Owen O'Malley, Bartley Burg, Thomas Kasperski and William Busse; A. F. Poehlmann, A. H. Poehlmann, Henry Loutsch, George Harrer, Louis Reimer, Henry Fink, Henry Zender, and August Geweke, president of the Cook County Truck Gardeners' Association.

Wietor Bros. had a tremendous call for pompons for Thanksgiving, especially for the two late pink varieties, Billy Primrose and E. D. Godfrey, which sold like hot cakes. These two varieties will be offered the coming season and will be in good demand, for they made a big hit with the city buyers who took all the cut stock available all through the season. This firm is cutting an exceptionally fine supply of American Beauty and Ophelia roses and the outlook never was more encouraging for a banner crop for the holidays.

The late William L. Kroeschell, who died November 23, left an estate valued at $11,000, according to papers filed in the probate court. In Mr. Kroeschell's will executed April 8, 1882, all of his property is bequeathed to his widow, Mrs. Iola Kroeschell, who is named executrix.

The John Kruchten Co. is pleasing its customers with a fancy grade of orchids and lily of the valley. Another Joseph Ziska & Sons have leased the entire second floor, 60x120 feet, in the Durand building, at 169 North Wabash avenue, for ten years starting January 1, 1917. This is a good move for the Ziskas, who are crowded for room in their present store at 151 North Wabash avenue and whose ever-increasing supply business has made it necessary for them to secure larger quarters. Their new place is directly over the E. C. Amling Co.'s new store and right across the street from the LeMoynes building, in which the A. L. Randall Co., J. A. Budlong, Chicago Flower Growers' Association, E. C. Amling Co., Bassett & Washburn and the American Bulb Company, are now located. Joseph Ziska has been in business for thirty-five years and is well and favorably known to the trade. Three sons, John, Joseph, Jr., and Raymond, are now associated with him in business.

Miss Christina Pearson, who was formerly employed as stenographer at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store, will leave soon for her native home in Sweden. Her many friends in the trade regret to hear of her departure, but sincerely hope that she will reach home safely.

C. Frauenfelder, 3343 West Madison street, has a nice supply of Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissus of his own to supply his trade with. He expects to have a large number of French grown miniature hyacinths ready for delivery at Christmas.

Percy Jones is handling a good supply of Mrs. Frances King gladioli and freesias in addition to a large and complete supply of all other seasonable cut flowers. The Thanksgiving trade at this house was very satisfactory compared to former years.

Sinner Bros. are going to have the best crop of roses for Christmas that they have had for years, which accounts for the smile that John is wearing nowadays. Their Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are particularly fine.

Wille-Douglass, 3954 West Harrison street, had a splendid Thanksgiving trade, which is the result of careful attention to their customers' orders in the past.

C. B. LeMer, of Simpson's, says that the Thanksgiving trade was fine at both the 3656 Ogden avenue and Austin stores.

D. E. Freres is handling a fine supply of roses and carnations in all the leading varieties.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has added a seven-ton Sterling truck to its delivery service, which, at present, is being used to haul coal from the tracks to Plant B at Morton Grove, and marks another step toward efficiency at their modern plant, and does away with the old team and wagon style of transporting the fuel from one point to another. August Poehlmann timed the unloading of a car of coal at Plant A last Saturday, December 2, and was somewhat surprised to find that it only took twelve minutes to haul the car up the incline and drop the coal in the bin and return the empty car back to where it originally stood. He is a firm believer in modern methods of doing things, which accounts for the splendid condition that the stock is in at the greenhouses, especially the Christmas azaleas, begonias and cyclamens, of which they have an unusually large supply.

W. H. Amling, of Maywood, has a reputation of growing high grade cut flowers and it was just called to the writer's attention in a rather amusing way, that he is also producing some unusually large lemons on the few trees that he has in his greenhouses. He gave a friend one to take home the other day, who prized it most highly and intended to place it on exhibition at his store, but when he went to the ice-box the next morning to get it he found that it had disappeared, and upon investigation, learned that his mother had mistaken it for a grapefruit and eaten it for breakfast. She remarked at the time that it was simply splendid but somewhat sour. Naturally the son, who is going to celebrate a birthday in the very near future, is having a glorious time at her expense.

Allie Zech says that Zech & Mann's Thanksgiving trade was great and helped make the month the best No-

A large number of flowers were sent to the eight new county officials and the state's attorney, Monday, December 4, by their friends and acquaintances, when formal inauguration ceremonies were held in the county building and state's attorney's office. The offerings were many and beautiful and represented a large quantity of stock.

T. E. Waters, manager of Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply department, is to be congratulated for the splendid supply of ruscus, Japanese frieze, baskets and Italian grasses that he has on hand for the Christmas trade. The last shipment of Italian grasses that was unpacked last week is the finest that the firm ever received.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is offering a large quantity of late pink chrysanthemums, which are in brisk demand, in addition to a splendid supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell, Milady, Ophelia and Killarney Brilliant roses. The Thanksgiving trade was very good at this establishment and exceeded all expectations.

Miss Doris Clamage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Clamage, 1745 West Polk street, and Louis R. Finnerman, will be married Sunday evening, December 17. The ceremony will be held at five-thirty o'clock at Likuse's hall, 2039 West Twelfth street. Mr. Finnerman is with A. Henderson & Co.

John Michelsen says that the E. C. Amling Co.'s Thanksgiving business was fine and the best in years. This house is handling a large supply of choice Mrs. Chas. Russell, Milady and American Beauty roses.

N. P. Miller, of Miller & Musser, says that the latest reports from the Michigan red winter berry dealers are that they will be scarce for the holidays and much higher in price than was at first expected.

Peter Reinberg had the best Thanksgiving business in the history of the firm, according to Felix Reichling, who adds that stock of all kinds cleaned up early at very satisfactory prices. The outlook for a large supply of roses for the holidays never was better, especially as far as American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Richmond are concerned.

Word was received here this week from Melbourne, Florida, of the death of Mrs. Andrew McAdams, wife of the well-known retail florist, and mother of Miss Mae McAdams. The McAdams formerly made their home in this city and have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their loving wife and mother.

Vera Alice, 14-year-old daughter of Charles and Grace G. Neighlich, died after a lingering illness this week. Services were held in Grace M. E. Church, corner of Locust and North LaSalle streets, Tuesday, December 5, at 2 p. m., with interment in Rosehill cemetery.

The A. L. Randall Co. is booking a nice lot of orders for rooted cuttings of the new carnation Thenanthos, of which they are exclusive distributors, and which will be grown on a large scale by many of the leading growers in this vicinity next season.

J. A. Budlong had a very satisfactory Thanksgiving trade and business has been brisk ever since then, especially in the shipping line. This firm is cutting a fine grade of roses and will be in splendid crop, as usual, for the holidays.

Kyle & Foerster are having a good demand for gardenias, which they are receiving regularly in addition to a complete line of all other seasonable cut flowers. A fine grade of stevia is included in the regular shipments.

Erne & Klingel had their share of the Thanksgiving business and cleaned up almost completely before the rush was over. They are handicapped to a certain extent for lack of room and could use more floor space to good advantage.

Bassett & Washburn report business as very good, especially as far as the shipping trade is concerned. They are cutting a fine grade of roses, especially American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell, which are in exceptionally brisk demand.

Gus Pappas, who sold out his interests in the Alpha Floral Co.'s store at Des Moines, Ia., recently, is visiting friends here. He is planning on locating in South America and will leave for Buenos Aires in the near future, where he expects to embark in the real estate business. His health has not been any too good of late, but a change of climate no doubt will do him a world of good.

Vaughan's Seed Store received another carload of hardy lily bulbs this week; also lily of the valley clumps and pips and three carloads of Dutch and Belgian greenhouse stocks for both in and out-door trade.

THANKSGIVING TRADE EXCELLENT.

Thanksgiving has come and gone and it certainly was a very prosperous one—far better than last year, with general conditions on the two days following much better than usual after a holiday, everything worth while being taken. The chrysanthemum supply, while not large was very good, the later varieties helping out and the better quality bringing good prices that gave the growers cause for thanksgiving. Roses advanced in price and showed improvement in quality. The supply was short. American Beauty sold as high as $6 per dozen. Fancy Russell was in good demand as were also Sunburst, Ophelia, While Killarney and Prima Donna. Carnations were in large supply, the quality being good and the demand strong. Orchids were exceedingly scarce, the supply being inadequate for requirements and found a ready sale at 75 cents each, with the better grades bringing $1. Lilies, though selling more freely, still moved slowly, the supply being plentiful. Violets were very scarce and the better grades easily brought $1.50 per 100. The lily of the valley supply continued short with a brisk demand, quality stock bringing $8 per 100. Sweet peas had a good call and found a ready sale at $1 and $1.50 per 100 sprays. Antirrhinums, bouvardias, callas, Paper Whites and stevias, were plentiful and brought good prices. The demand for cyclamen and begonia plants was especially good and a liberal supply of greens moved well.

CLUB MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the florists' club was held December 5, the feature of the evening being a splendid talk on "Co-operation and Organization," by Bartley J. Doyle, vice-president of the World's Salesmanship Congress. There was a good attendance and the speaker was listened to with much interest. He enumerated the good qualities that enter into the making of a successful businessman, and from the florists' point of view, showed the value of organized co-operation. Eugene Bernheimer, for the Florex Gardens, exhibited a vase of the new rose, September Morn.

NOTES.

A meeting of the local committee of the American Rose Society was held December 5 and various matters pertaining to exhibits thoroughly discussed. The schedule has not been arranged as yet and nothing definite will be done in this regard until after the meeting of the executive committee in New York, December 11, at which time a number of important matters will be settled which will give the local committee definite programmes to work out.

A. M. Campbell, of the Strafford Flower Farms, Strafford, Pa., is delighted with the sales of his new chrysanthemum, Strafford, the demand far exceeding the supply. Over 20,000 blooms were cut, all of which were sold and many orders could not be filled.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving a fine lot of gardenias from Robert Scott & Son. The quality is excellent and the supply good.

Edward Reid had a good supply of lily of the valley and orchids for Thanksgiving, which sold readily at good prices.

THANKSGIVING BUSINESS FAIR.

Although there were several deterrent features, it can be stated that the Thanksgiving business was very fair; what these features were will be noted. In the first instance, an impression had gone abroad that stock would be scarce, which was an error as there was plenty of stock, but a considerable quantity of it reached the market too late. Acting on the supposition of a scarcity, the wholesalers put up prices, November 28, to a high figure, and the leading men among them now acknowledge that prices were started too high. However, even with high prices, business was good until about noon of November 29 when a slump set in. Rain in the evening and on Thanksgiving day completed the breakdown. Carnations and violets in particular, went to pieces. Carnations, November 28 and forenoon of the following day sold for $4 and $5 per 100, whereas by Thanksgiving morning they could be bought for $2 and $3 and there were many that could not be moved at those figures. Violets shared the same fate. They were started at $1.50 and $1.75 with $2 for specials, but on the 29th, as one dealer put it, "they stopped buying," and on Thanksgiving morning they could be bought for 50 cents per 100, the bad weather having given them the finishing stroke. While the market held firm, prices were about as follows: American Beauties, specials, 75 cents each, the shorter grades in proportion; tea roses, such as Killarney, Ophelia, Sunburst and J. L. Mock, specials, 12 to 20 cents, No. 1's six to eight cents. Such roses as Hadley, Russell and Prima Donna brought higher prices, though we believe that but few Prima Donnas went above 20 cents. Hadley went to 50 and 60 cents, Russell 20 to 35 cents, according to quality. Special orchids were $1 and $1.25 each, lilies six and eight cents, lily of the valley five and eight cents, gardenias, most of which were poor stock, $3 and $4 per dozen. There was a great stock of chrysanthemums on the market, some of which was poor, but there was enough good stock to supply the demand at from $2 to $4 per dozen. Eaton, Jennie Noonan, Goldmine Bonaffon and several other varieties were in good form. The bronze variety, Glenview, which sold a year ago for $9 per dozen, came in, as a rule, this year in bad shape, the stems being weak at the neck. Some of them reached the market in "splints" and such stock is unsalable. Many Glenviews were disposed of at from $1.40 to $2.50 per dozen and many could not be sold even at these prices. Paper White was slow at from $2 to $3 per 100. Good sweet peas were not plentiful and the best brought $3 per 100. In pompon chrysanthemums and calendulas, there was considerable business at fair prices. Snapdragons seemed slow sellers but bouvardia moved freely. As is always the case the day after a holiday, business was light, December 1, the arrival of stock being correspondingly light. Some of the dealers had considerable stock left over from Thanksgiving on their hands, particularly in violets and carnations, and such of it that sold, went cheap. There was more life in the market on Saturday morning, December 2. The supply of roses in particular, was not large and prices were at near Thanksgiving figures. Violets were an exception, being hard to move at 50 to 75 cents per 100. High prices for roses and carnations may now be expected until Christmas. The chrysanthemums seem to be pretty well cut out and nobody, particularly the rose and carnation growers, will be sorry. It can be said, however, that they were a great boon to the Thanksgiving trade.

December 4.—With a very moderate supply of stock, business is normal. Roses are bringing good prices, though there is some stock of Hoosier Beauty on the market, with weak stems, that drag. Orchids are a little more plentiful, but firm. Lilies are moving freely, but lily of the valley is slow. Carnations are active. Violets, very uncertain, as some special stock brings $1 per 100, but what is left over goes cheap. Good chrysanthemums are scarce.

NOTES.

Henry Hart, 1000 Madison avenue, is back again, into what is practically a new store and a fine one at that, the interior being nearly all glass and

ARNOLD BOXES ARE BEST

CHICAGO, - ILLINOIS.

C. Sarris has bought the retail business at 3544 Broadway, formerly known as the Washington Heights Floral Co., from P. Velotas, who has another store at 2445 Broadway. He is a clever man and has had large experience as a retailer.

A new and neat retail store has recently been opened at 728 Madison avenue, by Daniels & Markellos. Mr. Daniels, who was formerly employed by Fleischman, has a brother, Thomas Daniels, who is a successful Brooklyn retailer.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held in the Grand Opera House building, Eighth avenue and 23rd street, on the night of December 11. As it will be election night, its is expected that there will be a full attendance.

Jack Trepel, who a few months ago, opened a retail store in the heart of the business district of Brooklyn, 480 Fulton street, to be exact, is doing a fine business and his store is very handsomely arranged.

Some of the finest carnations seen in the Thanksgiving trade were at Angelo Dentale's, 41 West 28th street. They were Enchantress of good size and color with two-foot stems, and they soon cleaned up.

The College Florist, who recently bought the retail business at 3064 Broadway, has a good store and keeps it well stocked with cut flowers and plants.

The Nippon Garden, Inc., has opened another good store at 2386 Broadway, miniature gardens and Japanese dwarf plants being prominent in their stock.

Exceptionally fine Russell roses were seen at J. J. Coan's, which were grown by August Doemling of Landsdowne, Pa. They sold for 35 cents each.

George Watson, of Philadelphia, the celebrated hayseed salesman, none other, blew into this city November 29, and doubtless bagged a lot of orders.

Peter Papagianis has opened a new store at 2578 Broadway, which bears the title of the Central Florist.

A. Rosen, a well known designer of Brooklyn, will be married, December 10, to Miss Rae Greenberg.

New York Notes.

It was stated in the Brooklyn Eagle Sunday, December 3, that on December 4 a warrant would be asked for the arrest of Charles Lenker, a florist of Freeport, L. I., and well known in this city, on the charge of insulting the American flag. The announcement was made on the authority of a committee representing the Freeport post of the Grand Army of the Republic, the lodges of Elks and Junior Order of American Mechanics, which has been investigating the charges against Lenker. The committee had sworn statements from eight prominent citizens that Lenker had said that, "The American flag was a dirty rag with which he would not wipe his hands," and that, "the United States never had a President who was fit to sweep the Kaiser's streets."

Joseph A. Millang, who sells the product of the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., advises us that the new pink carnation, Cottage Maid, brings more money than any other carnation, and though he is receiving a large stock, he does not get enough to supply the demand.

William P. Ford, 107 West 28th street, is receiving fine stock of the new rose, Canadian Queen. It is a fine pink, a good keeper and sells well. He is also receiving exceptionally fine stock of Hadley, which brings the price of special American Beauty.

In the past, Dailedouze Bros., Flatbush, have been noted for their fine carnations, and though they yet grow carnations, they are now very successful with such roses as Francis Scott Key, Hoosier Beauty and Ophelia.

G. Messeberg, Flatbush, grows a variety of cut flowers and plants. He has a fine stock of poinsettias coming on for Christmas; also, a variety of foliage plants.

A. Demusey, Flatbush, has a fine stock of carnations. Particularly noteworthy is his sport of Enchantress, which is a very fine color.

Reports from various sections of the city indicate that, as a rule the retailers had good Thanksgiving business.

Frank Pileski, of Whitestone, is erecting four houses, each 18x100 feet, for general stock.

One of Max Schling's staff has stated that at their store it was a "Little Christmas." A. F. F.

American Seed Trade Association.

Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., President; F. W. Bolzano, Washington, D. C., First Vice-President; L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer. Thirty-fifth annual convention, June, 1917.

PEA WEEVIL is said to have appeared in the Twin Falls, Idaho, district.

MANY French growers are demanding cash payment before planting the new seed crops.

LAZY WIFE is a leader among scarce pole beans. Some think it worth $25 per 100 pounds.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—S. Murata & Co. will shortly add a seed department to their business.

AN inch of welcome rain fell in the Santa Clara Valley seed-growing district December 1-2.

E. J. DEAL, of W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., Boston, Eng., is calling on the American trade.

A CORRESPONDENT of the London Gardeners' Chronicle suggests Vancouver Island as a good place for seed growing.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, December 6, were as follows: Timothy, $4.00 to $5.75 per 100 pounds.

BUT little is definitely known thus far regarding the supply of such Belgian products as tuberous begonias, gloxinias, etc.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association has been called for Saturday, December 9, at the Hotel Martin, Sioux City, Ia.

ARNOLD RINGIER, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is planning a California trip, starting after the holidays. Mrs. Ringier will accompany him.

THERE is a very great shortage of seed peas, both for canners and for the garden seed trade. Among peas ordinarily low in price Marrowfats are this year very scarce and worth probably $9 per cental.

ROGERS BROS., Alpena, Mich., the pea and bean growers, have worked out a profitable side line the past season, both in their Michigan and Idaho districts, harvesting 16,000 bushels of potatoes, which netted them $20,000.

THE contract onion set situation for next year is quite a good deal in the air and the growers and contractors so far are having trouble in getting together. The probabilities are that contract figures, even with the lower priced seed we have this year, will be about the same as last year.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. R. Kimberlin, of the Kimberlin Seed Co., Santa Clara, Calif.; H. A. Johns, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia.; C. R. Chesmore, of the Chesmore Eastlake Merc. Co., St. Joseph, Mo.; W. P. Stubbs, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, Ky.; L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif.; A. L. Rogers, Alpena, Mich.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., December 4.—James A. Everitt, former president of the American Society of Equity, and his son, Sibley F. Everitt, were sentenced to 18 months in the federal prison upon pleading guilty to a charge of using the mails to defraud, according to newspaper report.

Holly and Green.

The bouquet green supply at Chicago is very scant. Bulk green, a few crates, is selling at $12 to $15 or more. Wreathing is about double the usual price.

Ground pine is apparently scarce in all centers usually handling such Christmas greens.

Holly is coming along slowly and is scarcely up to the usual standard of quality.

Boxwood deliveries are likewise slow and must soon be expressed.

Paper Economies.

Movement to retrench in use of wrapping and other paper because of exorbitant prices is rapidly spreading to every industry. Increase in paper bill of Sears-Roebuck Co., of Chicago, will be $1,000,000 next year. This company uses an average of 20 tons of paper for its catalogues alone. All mail order houses are discontinuing fruitless circulation of catalogues and reducing the number of colored pages. National Cloak & Suit Co. has reduced its paper consumption greatly since beginning of the war. Department store men and other large users of wrapping paper are keenly interested in new methods of paper economy.

Law and Law Makers.

The following editorial appeared in the February 17 issue of the Price Current Grain Reporter:

It is most encouraging to see that in at least one address at Kansas City, that of A. L. Scott, discussing the injustice of the Kansas feed stuffs law, the speaker took occasion to protest against the injustice of a law that deliberately imposes a penalty, substantially a fine, on the Kansas man who in the course of a legitimate business elects to extend the service he offers the public as public wants appear, in return for which he expects to earn his living and a portion for his old age or his children.

It is a curious fact that such laws originate not so much in the mind of the average member of the legislature as with a class to whom most men are wont to look for wisdom and moderation—the college professors. Nearly all the pure feed laws originate with these men, who in their zeal to "protect" some one are so obsessed of the necessity of ideal quality, accuracy of as well as strict description, and purity from the academic standpoint, that laws of their writing are almost invariably arbitrary and unnecessarily exacting. This evil—for it is an evil—goes even farther; for it is, we think, a demonstrable fact that the scholastic reformer is responsible for many of those laws that really oppress business men and bleed them by merciless taxation.

It is high time that business men, as did this Kansas grain dealer, should begin to protest in their own states against the manifest tendency of the times to bawl about preserving the liberties of the people, as conceived in a state of ideal democracy, while at the same time idealism in legislative practice is literally robbing the people of personal liberties no autocracy would dream of interfering with.

Free Seeds Cost.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa made a talk in the senate recently leading the opposition to free seeds in the agricultural appropriation bill and asked to have inserted in the record the following statement showing the expenses for distribution of these seeds for four years:

Expense of distributing seeds for the years 1909-1910 to 1912-13, inclusive:

VEGETABLE AND FLOWER SEEDS.
Purchasing	$ 556,102.00
Packaging and mailing	383,459.00
Total cost	$ 939,561.00
Number of packages	48,204,521
Other miscellaneous seed purchased	$ 173,372.00
Total cost	$1,110,933.00
Total number of packages sent out through the mails	48,568,801
Cost of postage to the Government on the above amount of seed sent through the mails and for which no postage was collected	$ 467,759.04
"I think this congressional seed distribution brings congress into disrepute."

It is a joke throughout the country. A few little packages of garden seed are sent out, when you could go to the store and buy for five cents better garden seeds than are sent out by the government, because it is seldom that many of these garden seeds ever grow anyway."

Sweet Potato Day.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 1.—"Sweet Potato day" will be observed in Alabama. On that day everybody will cook and talk sweet potatoes. The governor has endorsed the movement and is to designate the day. The object of the movement is to prove that one of Alabama's largest crops should have a great effect in cutting down the high cost of living, as it is said that one can subsist on sweet potatoes alone.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Mushrooms, home grown, 20 to 30 cents per pound; lettuce, small cases, 10 and 15 cents; radishes, $1.50 per 100 bunches; celery, 75 to 90 cents, open crate; tomatoes, 10-lb. baskets, $1.00 to $1.40; cucumbers, per 2 dozen box, $2.75.

New York, Dec. 5.—Celery, per crate, $2.00 to $3.50; cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.75 per dozen; mushrooms, 75 cents to $1.75 per 4-lb. basket; tomatoes, per lb., 10 to 25 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00; lettuce, per box, $2.50 to $3.00.

Vegetable Prices at New York.

Though potatoes are arriving freely, there is not much change in prices on northern stock. Twenty-two cars, Virginia late crop, came in December 1. On the same date an Old Dominion steamer brought 2,000 barrels from the south; another, December 2, brought 1,000 barrels. Maine and New York potatoes are accumulating. There are few Bermudas on the market. Prices, December 2, were as follows: Bermudas No. 1, per bbl., $8.00; Bermuda No. 2, per bbl., $6.00; Long Island, 180 lbs., $5.25@5.50; Maine, 165 lbs., $4.50@4.75; Canadian, 180 lbs., $4.75@5.25; Southern late crop, 165 lbs., $3.75@4.00; Southern sweet, per bbl., $2.00@4.00.

Lima beans are scarce and high, Cuban bringing $4.00 and $5.00 per crate.

Onions, white, per crate, $2.00@2.25; onions, red, 100-lb. bag., $3.25@4.50.

Cauliflower, L. I. short, per bbl., $1.50@4.00; cauliflower, L. I. long, per bbl., 75c@1.75. A. F. F.

Wisconsin Potato Growers' Association.

The fifth annual convention of the Wisconsin Potato Growers' Association, which was held at La Crosse, November 21-24, was the most successful in the history of the organization, the county exhibits being more numerous than in previous years, and the stock, despite the fact that the season was a backward one, was of higher quality. Oneida county, with a score of 92 2/3, won the silver cup in the county competition.

An extensive programme of papers and discussions, all well handled by experts, was a feature of the meeting, among the number being the following: Dr. H. J. Wheeler of Detroit, Mich., who spoke on "Methods of Potato Culture," and later led discussions entered into by leading growers of the state on "Fitting Potato Land," "Summer Cultivation," "Seed Storage," and "Field Selection of Seed"; a paper by Prof. K. L. Hatch of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, read in his absence by E. L. Leuther, entitled "Potato Extension Work in Wisconsin"; an illustrated lecture by Lou D. Sweet, Denver, Colo., president of the Potato Association of America, a recognized authority on potato culture throughout the United States and Canada; an illustrated lecture by Dr. J. W. Henceroth of the Soil Improvement Committee, Chicago, showing methods of mixing fertilizers; an address on "Methods of Potato Culture," by Dr. H. J. Wheeler, Boston, Mass.; "Seed Standards Demanded by Colorado Growers," by W. R. McClelland, Greeley, Colo.; "A Discussion of Present Markets" and an address on "Wisconsin Warehouse Problems" by E. P. Miller, Chicago. In the boys' and girls' potato club sections there was a good representation and a keen interest was shown in their work. The entries were judged and awards made.

At the election of officers for the ensuing year, the present officers were unanimously re-elected. They are: J. W. Hicks, Prentice, president; O. C. Woodard, Weyauwega, vice-president; J. G. Milward, Madison, secretary-treasurer. The matter of choosing the convention city for 1917 was left to the executive committee.

New Hampshire College Flower Show.

The flower show held November 27, in the Agricultural Club's room of the college at Durham, marked another departure, it being the first held there. The show was under the auspices of the horticultural students and was a marked success. Music was furnished both afternoon and evening. Besides the flowers, palms, etc., from the college greenhouses, exhibits were donated by Harry Penn, and H. M. Robinson Co., of Boston, Mass., roses by John Elliott of the Madbury rose-houses, and a collection of chrysanthemums from Chas. H. Davis, florist, Dover, N. H. Short talks were given by John S. Elliott, J. B. Scherrer and James Macfarlane. Refreshments were served in the evening. The hope was generally expressed that the show might become an annual affair. J. M.

TOLEDO, O.—H. Anderson, formerly employed at the Harry Heintz range, is now manager of the flower store in the Crystal Maze on Adams street.

Fischer Chosen McCormick Estate Supt.

William E. Fischer, for a number of years forester of the park and recreation department of Boston, Mass., and for 30 years one of that city's oldest, ablest and most trustworthy employees, has resigned to take the position of superintendent of the Cyrus McCormick estate at Lake Forest, Ill.

Many prominent officials and citizens of Boston, numbered among Mr. Fischer's lost of friends, who, while regretting his departure, rejoice in the recognition of his accomplishments, tendered him a farewell banquet November 27 at the Hotel Brewster before his departure for his new field. William P. Glennon presided as toastmaster and many high tributes were paid to Mr. Fischer's work in the city's interests. Among those present were: Patrick Welch, past-president of the Society of American Florists; Mayor Curley, Secretary Power, Colonel W. L. Glaven, Thomas J. Shea, Martin Finn, David Briggs, Thomas F. Tilley, Michael Coughlin, James Walsh, Michael Daly, Edward Hayden, Judge Hoitt, Nashua, N. H.; Perry Dow, Postmaster Willis and Colonel John F. Sheehan of Manchester, N. H.; William Long, Richard Hayden, William Dowling, Senator Timilty, Frank Ewing, Thomas F. McCarthy, Joseph P. O'Connell, Frank J. Daley, William L. Dolan, Alfred Pitts, John F. McDonald, Thomas F. Minton, Fred J. Kneeland, District Attorney Corcoran of Middlesex, District Attorney Pelletier, Councilors McDonald and Collins, Hugh McGrath, James Donovan, John F. Dever, Sergeant Thornton of the Park Police, and Collector Billings.

Mr. Fischer assumed his duties December 1.

Montreal.

BUSINESS VERY SATISFACTORY.

Trade during the past two weeks has been excellent. The chrysanthemum crop this year was one of the best in history—the growth during the summer was not of the best, but they finished up fine during the fall months. There were no cheap flowers at any time—prices ruled higher than last season. Chrysanthemums are now in the passing and roses and carnations are now coming to the front, with prices also better than a year ago. The trade in general expect a very good Christmas demand and all are making active preparations to take care of it. The usual number of small shops which open at this time and close immediately after the holidays are beginning to make their appearance. Plants will be scarce this year, very few azaleas having been received. Fall business in plants has been excellent and many inquiries are being received by the growers for cyclamens and poinsettias. The deliveries of Duth bulbs are irregular. One grower received a shipment, in August, while another importation that came on the same steamer, was not delivered until six weeks later.

NOTES.

Local members of the Canadian Horticultural Association are training faithfully to be in condition to meet their fellow craftsmen in convention next August. If the western members want to have any show at all they will have to get busy. Geo. A. Robinson, E. J. Hayward, H. J. Eddy and R. Scott are all crack bowlers and are "knocking 'em down" to scores varying from 175 to 200.

Julius Luck has given up the position of private gardener, which he has held for the past eleven and one-half years, and has started growing and importing a general line of nursery stock and perennials.

C. A. Smith, of Lachine, has a splendid lot of commercial ferns. His many friends will be glad to hear that "Charlie" has recovered from a serious illness.

E. J. Hayward has a new house 25x100 feet completed, in which will be grown a general assortment of commercial ferns.

S. D. Bain, who opened a new store on St. Catherine street, is doing a nice business.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society.

The regular meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held in J. O. W. A. M. hall, Orange, November 10. The treasurer made his report on the dahlia exhibition which was held September 18, showing that event to be a financial success. Sam Zalensky was nominated for membership. Max Schneider, gardener to Peter Hauck, Jr., East Orange, received the following points in the monthly competition: Standard chrysanthemums, 90; carnations, 65; violets, 80; cut flowers, 75. Emil Panuska, gardener to Mrs. Wm. Barr, received certificates for seedling chrysanthemums, Bronze Bird and Yellow Bird, highly commended and certificates of merit for White Wonder. The judges were Eugene Blondin, S. F. Zalensky and Jos. A. Manda. GEORGE W. STRANGE, Sec'y.

CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS.

Getting Ready for Christmas.

The business of this winter holiday is most important. The cheerful Christmas-giving spirit is abroad in the land; all troubles are laid aside and forgotten in the "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year" to all. The florist, however, is not, as at Easter, the only beneficiary. Every trade is bidding and participating in the harvest, so that it behooves the entire craft to do their utmost in their various lines, the growers particularly, in working up novelties, or by special culture to old favorites, clothe them with an elegance and luster so beautiful and captivating as to insure their successful sale.

All growers, both of plants and cut flowers, have been working for months to get their stocks in the best condition and all their crops, roses, carnations, violets, etc., have been timed to bear their heaviest for the Christmas demand, which is looked forward to as a harvest when their careful and earnest efforts of the fall months will be rewarded.

The retail store is the final mart, and here it is that the last and greatest demonstration should be made. There are many skilled business men in this branch of the craft who rise to the occasion, in whose stores will be found "things as they ought to be." The stock is of the best, all the accessories novel and staple, plants and cut flowers in bewildering array, the whole establishment presenting a preparedness and readiness for the extensive business that is sure to crown their efforts. So much depends on this word, prepared; the business of one month or six weeks is crowded at this time into one, and most of it into the last three days. Great forethought and an effective system in the management of all the details is necessary. Carefully worked-out plans to add to and conserve the forces of the establishment will greatly relieve the strain and increase its efficiency. Doing everything possible in the selection of stock and supplies of all kinds fully two weeks before the event, will be found of the greatest assistance. The comparatively idle weeks of the dull summer season are, by those who look ahead, turned to good advantage in the preparation of much of the work that is seen being hurriedly gotten together in other stores at the last minute, taking vitality and efficiency from men when it is most needed.

Good extra help is hard to get at this time, but at most colleges in every large community there will be found bright young men who are willing to spend a few of their holiday vacation days in helping out. Such men have been found very efficient.

Making the most of available store space so that the stock can be advantageously displayed is very important. A fixing up, giving the interior a Christmassy appearance, can be done at slight expense, and makes a proper setting for the plants and other stock. Many of the wreaths and other accessories used in the decorative scheme can be utilized in filling orders or in outside decorations the last day. Everything offered for sale should be made to look its best. A well placed bow of ribbon with a little holly will oftentimes balance up a rather one-sided plant, while a basket of plants that has become a trifle passe, can be touched up with a few flowers in tubes of water concealed amongst the plants.

Great care should be taken with packing and delivery. A number of boxes, crated and lined with paper for out-of-town orders, should be in readiness. Getting express orders off early is of the utmost importance—one delayed shipment may mean a loss that would pay an extra hand for a week. Letters should always be sent to recipients notifying that goods have been shipped, for which they will be on the lookout. Mistakes in street or number addresses, occasioning delay, are often corrected in this way.

A great help in getting out orders at these rush times is system in the preparation of all the details. Orders taken on separate numbered sheets are turned in to the bookkeeper, who notes the flowers or plants required, together with date and hour of delivery on a slip about the size of the addressed shipping tag. An envelope marked "This envelope contains card to go with (package described)," contains the card. These three, first the slip with order and date, then the tag and card envelope, are fastened together with a wire clip and placed in a rack of boxes dated for the week.

When cutflower orders are to be put up, one competent man should select the stock, which, with the addressed tag and card, is given to others to arrange in the boxes. The tag is pinned on the box and passed along to the wrappers. With this system there is no hurried writing of tags or questioning about orders, all such details having been attended to by the bookkeeper or other person. Tag envelopes are best used in plant orders as they are eyeleted at one end and can be securely tied to the plant before the wrapping and are not so easily lost as when simply dropped or loosely laid on the pot as is often done.

So many orders are now taken over the telephone that their handling should be in the hands of a competent person. The larger stores are now generally equipped with a branch system, with a number of conveniently placed phones to save steps and booths to give privacy. The telephone is a great business bringer and no establishment worth while but should be properly equipped in this respect. To many impatient people, a reported "busy" phone means at once a call elsewhere, and to the house a lost opportunity.

Christmas Baskets, Wreaths and Greenery

There is nothing handled by the retailer at the Christmas holidays that will return more profit than the small basket of assorted evergreens and berries. There is a great variety of baskets of the tumbler size; every supply house is strong in this miniature department. All are fitted with tins, tumblers or paraffined cups that will hold water. In the stock will be found any color desired. While red is the Christmas color, silver, gilt, or shades of green will show a better contrast with the contents, and ribbon, which is always red, green and red, or of the holly pattern. The basket should stand without feet, tripod or other support, as when filled, with its rather bulky contents, if raised even a few inches, it is apt to be caught and easily overturned. The handle should be high enough or of such width as to support the ribbon bow in a position to give it full effect. The tin should be filled with green clump moss, put in straight so as to offer the least resistance to the stems of the greens and holly; this should be made and kept soppy wet, adding much to the life and freshness of the contents.

Good, bright, fresh nursery evergreens should be used for the foundation work. Golden and silver retinisporea, golden arborvitae, several varieties of spruce, hemlock, Lawson's cypress, boxwood, cedar with berries, bright, well berried holly, etc., will form an assortment that can be worked up to the best advantage. If the stock is made ready, branches thinned out and trimmed to right size, a lot of the baskets can be run off in a short time. Holly works better if most of the foliage is cut away, showing the bright berries which, standing out against the already rather dense background of the other greens, is very effective. Statice, red and silvered ruscus, white minerva, small cones in the natural, or gilt and silvered, small thistles, etc., used sparingly, add color and variety, which, with the finish given by a neatly made bow of red ribbon, makes a very attractive and saleable article. These baskets if made immediately after the Thanksgiving trade is out of the way and packed in a cool place, protected from drafts, will keep in good condition and require but the ribbon to make them one of the most saleable and profitable articles in the shop.

A few hampers and larger baskets may also be prepared; if artistically arranged, with a good quality silk ribbon bow, such work will bring almost as much as a plant or cut flower arrangement. All ribbon used at the holidays should be silk, the cheap mercerized stock being dear at any price. All this work should be properly finished. A bedraggled half-made article of any kind scarcely gets a second look; it should be made good as soon as noticed or at once removed from stock.

Very much of the laborious and drudgery work of the holidays comes from the orders received in the last few days for wreaths and other forms of cemetery decorations. Wreaths and crosses, principally wreaths with a foundation of galax, magnolia or boxwood, decorated with flowers, or more often with holly, red ruscus, etc., are the conventional designs. Spruce and other evergreen wreaths, touched up with cones, statice and ruscus, are also much in vogue. A large stock of the prepared magnolia wreaths should now be on hand, the work of idle moments of the summer season; also, a large quantity of mossed wreaths of all sizes.

Boxwood and evergreens can be worked up with every spare moment after December 1, and if kept moist and from the air in a cool place, will easily retain their fresh appearance until after the holidays. The stock for all this work should be secured from the supply houses in ample time; to find out after a hurried call that they are out of anything desired, but a delayed shipment is expected every day, is very annoying and the dealer is blamed for the lack of forethought in his customer.

Holly.

Holly wreaths and crosses are best prepared by the men who make a business of their arrangement. A large, well made, full holly wreath is one of the most satisfactory of the Christmas greens, but to a novice or even an expert in cut flower work, it is one of the most difficult to get together. If ordered from the expert woodsman, and kept in his well packed boxes or barrels in a cool place until wanted, they will open up in fine condition. Nothing spoils quicker, however, than holly when exposed to heat and drafts and allowed to dry out.

CHRISTMAS BASKET BY G. E. M. STUMPP, NEW YORK.

Poinsettia, Skimmia and Adiantum Farleyense.

Holly is the great Christmas green, and a sufficient supply of the best grade should always be secured or engaged from the dealer whose stock has been found satisfactory. Cheap grades are nearly always disappointing. It should be packed in tight boxes, the open crates admitting air, which dries out the leaves. Upland holly, that cut from mountain sides or high banks, is generally better berried than that which grows in soft, swampy ground. The foliage of the upland is not good, but when trimmed out, leaves large bunches of berries, which are very useful for decorating baskets, wreaths, etc. One case of this upland variety will provide more berries than two cases of the lower green leaved stock.

Holly is handled much more economically if, when it arrives, or before the time comes to deliver orders, it is bunched in sizes that will show a good profit to each case and then repacked in the cases. At rush times, one man's dollar's worth of holly may be much more or less than the standard of the house, but if bunched beforehand by a competent person, there is a great saving in time; the customer gets full worth and the transaction is satisfactory every way.

Laurel and lycopodium wreathing are also good holiday stocks. These are also best secured from headquarters, or from men who make a specialty of this work. The stock that is sold by the market supply dealers on commission is generally very poorly wrapped and seldom satisfactory.

Well shaped, miniature spruce trees for table or house window decoration, are somewhat cumbersome to handle, but show a good profit. The best are supplied by local nurserymen with roots. These are planted in small, green tubs, which can be done at the nursery and stored under cover until wanted. Perfectly shaped stock, with tub and plant decorated with ribbon, will oftentimes bring a price that is well worth the trouble. A gay effect is produced with small wired pompons of red immortelle attached to the ends of most of the branches. Thus adorned, trees will sometimes bring two or three times the price of the plain green.

Preparedness is the word with all this class of the Christmas work; it relieves the great strain caused by the enforced night work so often necessary, and which could be avoided, or at least greatly eliminated, by careful planning in the comparatively quieter days of early December.

Sibley Wedding Decoration.

A wedding decoration that was most favorably commented upon by the press of Athol, Mass., was arranged recently by Chas. W. Sibley, the well-known florist of that city. Festoons of laurel entwined the balustrade in the hall, on the newel of which rested a wonderful bouquet of white chrysanthemums arranged with laurel. Southern smilax, arranged with fancy chrysanthemums, embellished the music room, while pink roses were used effectively with other flowers in the dining room.

Sceery's Elaborate Wedding Decoration.

Edward Sceery, who has a fine store at Paterson, N. J., and another at Passaic, arranged a very noteworthy decoration in the First Presbyterian church, Passaic, for the Bensen-Robenson wedding, which took place November 28. As a preliminary, 20 cases of southern smilax were used on the walls and galleries. Eight thousand Easter lilies were used in decorating the pews and about the altar. Three thousand chrysanthemums were appropriately placed, with palms on the platform. Outside, at the entrance to the church, the walk was lined with 72 bay trees.

The bridal bouquet was of orchids and lily of the valley; the maid of honor carried bouvardia and roses, the six bridesmaids, orchids and gardenias.

At the residence of W. S. Bensen, the bride's father, who is a prominent official of the Standard Oil Company, there were also lavish decorations. Four thousand roses of different varieties were used, 700 being American Beauties.

On the lawn, the decorator constructed a sunken garden for dancing, which was covered by a large tent. Here were magnificent chrysanthemums, the best the market afforded, palms, boxwood and bay trees. Taken throughout, it was the finest decoration ever seen in that part of the country, even some New Yorkers who saw it, thought that Paterson and Passaic had put one over on them.

Feared He'd Be Angry.

She was a muscular young Amazon from the wilds of Hoxton, and she was doing war work down at the old farm.

One morning the farmer's wife, passing a belt of trees, which the Amazon was learning to fell, found her in tears.

"What's the matter, Annie?"

Annie fingered the ax dolefully. "I've been and cut down the wrong tree, and I'm afraid the master'll be awful wild."

"Oh, that's all right, my girl. He understands that you're new to the work, and you've got to learn. We all make mistakes sometimes. I'll go and explain matters to him. Where is he—in the cowshed?"

"No, mum. 'E's under the tree!"—

THE ROSE.

Preparing for the Christmas Cut.

As the Christmas cut is only a couple of weeks away, there are many little details to look after in order to have the stock in an A No. 1 condition. The first important step will be to go over all of the plants and tie them carefully; very often it will be found necessary to tie the stems a few inches below the buds, the object being to keep the stems straight, and also to keep the growths from becoming entangled. We would suggest using sufficient time to do this work carefully, using several ties per plant if necessary, instead of merely running a loop around each plant.

After tying everything up ship shape, one can syringe more thoroughly, and the fumigating should be frequent enough to keep the plants absolutely clean. This is best accomplished by fumigating lightly and frequently; also keep the fumes of sulphur noticeable in the rose houses. This can also be overdone, but if one pipe is painted with sulphur, say a space three feet long to every length of this one pipe (one of the returns) daily, there is seldom any chance for mildew to get in. For good color and firm, well ripened stock, a little air carried on moderately warm nights, where there are no high winds, will help wonderfully in this respect; if only half an inch, it will do a great amount of good; also, carry as much air as possible through the day and try to avoid a stuffy, close atmosphere in the houses.

Do not mulch any of the beds at this time; a little dried blood alternating with the liquid manure will be far safer at this season, using a small handful of the blood to two square feet of soil surface distributed evenly over the beds. Dried blood is a very concentrated food and soluble, reaching the spot at once. The foliage will show the results often the day following the watering in of the blood; therefore, it would be rather risky to use more than the amount prescribed above. The liquid manure can be used full strength, from now on, letting the dried blood, if applied, take the place of the liquid manure for one watering, following the blood a week later with the manure water. It will not be advisable to do any feeding after the buds set their color strongly; it will also add to the color of the flowers to let up slightly on the watering if the house is being cropped.

Do not let the soil become dry by any means, but avoid "slopping" things during the heavy cutting. Usually heavy spraying will keep the soil in fine condition in the solid borders for a week at a time where there is not a great deal of, unusually heavy firing. Of course, on the raised benches, where there is bottom heat, one will have to water frequently; a good soaking when it is done is the safest, allowing the soil time enough to require a good application of water when you are about it. A light watering done quite frequently usually results in a soggy surface and a dry bottom soil. It also has a tendency to clog the drainage, and where liquid manure is used frequently, the clogged drainage will collect the salts from the manure and other fertilizers, causing a general setback to the plants. So the best plan, we think, as stated above, is to water less frequently and liberally when it is being done.

I have repeatedly warned the inexperienced grower about "pickling" or holding the cut stock for any great length of time for the Christmas holidays. It is extremely poor practice. The longest the writer held stock for the Christmas sales last year was 48 hours. Our stock was cleaned up to the last bud at "top notch" prices, to the entire satisfaction of the commission man, the stores and of course ourselves. Yet there was stock left over in the market that was at one time as good as the best when cut, but it had been held back for at least a week and much of it finally went to the fakers almost as a gift. Still they do it, and we wonder why.

Use plenty of jars and have them clean—do not crowd them, and water, being the cheapest thing this season the florist has on hand, do not be stingy in keeping a fresh supply in the said jars. A dry, cool atmosphere, with the temperature at 44 degrees, will be found ideal for the cut stock. This condition can be made in almost any good cellar, when the weather is cold enough outside, and is, we think, preferable to the ordinary ice box in winter, as the stock should not be held for more than two days at a time; its freshness will be assured if kept under the above conditions. Of course, there should be the usual amount of care taken in preparing to handle the cut safely and in an up-to-date manner; also, employing some system in the shipping and sales department, having the packing boxes lined to prevent freezing in any old weather; also labels, tags and the retail boxes, where one can find the proper size in its proper place. The small boxes should also be lined ready for the retail orders, from the half dozen size up. As the old saying goes, "Have a place for everything, and everything in its place." By the way, do not forget to be on the lookout for some good English or Irish manetti stocks if you haven't it already on hand. Be rather liberal in ordering enough to be assured of using only the best of the stock; there is always somewhere around 5 to 10 per cent loss. Look over the houses and decide just what you want to grow another year and stick to it.

Rose Diseases.

Report of Dr. L. M. Massey, Specialist on Rose Disease Investigations, Department of Plant Pathology at Cornell University.

A special and extensive investigation of the diseases of roses has been undertaken by the department of plant pathology, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. This work, which was begun August 1, 1916, is being conducted in co-operation with the American Rose Society, whose members have contributed towards the financial support of the undertaking.

During the past three months much time has been spent in visiting rose plantings in northeastern United States, making a survey of diseases. The gardens and greenhouses of some 35 rose growers have been visited. The number and extent of the diseases present have been noted and specimens taken for further study. Growers have also materially aided the work by sending in specimens. These specimens have been examined and the grower advised as to the cause and control of the disease so far as our present knowledge and experience allows.

Unfortunately, nothing is known concerning the control of many diseases of the rose, and but little concerning even some of the most common diseases; and what little is known is mostly of an academic rather than of a practical nature and not accessible to the average grower. Every grower who has endeavored to obtain much information upon any rose disease has been brought face to face with this unfortunate situation. It is for the correction of this condition that members of the American Rose Society have enlisted the services of a plant pathologist to investigate rose diseases and place the information before the growers.

The preliminary survey has shown that the two most common diseases of the rose are the powdery mildew and the black spot, both on indoor and outdoor plants. These diseases have received the most attention of growers and plant pathologists in the past. It has been proved beyond doubt that they are caused by fungi, the life-histories of the causal organisms have been partially worked out, and various suggestions for control offered. Considerable work remains to be done to determine the conditions which favor the development of these diseases and the best methods of treatment. It is the plan of the writer to publish a short article in the trade papers in the near future upon each of these diseases in which the known facts concerning them will be placed before the growers.

However, the survey has revealed the fact that other diseases besides mildew and black spot cause rose growers considerable losses. In fact, many greenhouse men claim that these two diseases cause them little worry.

Ophelia and American Beauty plants affected with a serious root or crown rot have been received from growers and observed by the writer, in visits to rose houses. The plant decays just below the surface of the soil, usually where the plant "breaks," the developing branches being encircled by the rot. Soon the parts of the plant above ground become yellow and of a sickly appearance as if starved for moisture or food, and die a more or less lingering death. Some growers have kindly furnished samples of plants so affected, and several organisms which may possibly be causing the disease have been isolated from diseased tissue. Inoculations will be made to determine which organism is the cause. The life-history of the pathogene will be studied and an attempt made to work out some method of control. This is necessarily a slow process, but will, we trust, result in the discovery of an effective means of controlling the trouble.

Other diseases which have been noted are: (1) crown gall, caused by a bacterial pathogene, affecting the roots and occasionally the stems of both indoor and outdoor roses; (2) Phyllosticta leaf-spot, affecting outdoor roses, chiefly ramblers; (3) other leaf spots and cane diseases of unknown causes. Work upon the cause of the diseases in this last group is now under way. Extensive experiments on the control of leaf-spot diseases of indoor and outdoor roses are being planned and will be tested out as quickly as possible. Reports of progress will be made from time to time.

WREATH OF WRAPPED MAGNOLIA LEAVES AND HOLLY.

Some misunderstanding seems to exist among growers in regard to sending specimens for examination. Where desirable a postal card will bring to the grower one or more franked tags which will carry specimens by mail postage free; or the grower may pay the postage if he so desires. The specimens will be examined and the sender furnished with all available information regarding the cause and control of the disease. Not only members of the American Rose Society, but rose growers in general may take advantage of this opportunity to obtain information relating to rose troubles. By sending specimens the grower will not only help himself but will be materially aiding the project. Specimens will always be appreciated, regardless of whether or not they are of a new or old disease, or of economic importance. It is especially desired at this time to obtain rose plants affected with root diseases.

Electricity and Plant Growth.

Evidence is accumulating that plants subjected to high tension electricity by means of overhead wires respond by increased vigor and yield. Thus in the experiments carried out by Miss E. C. Dudgeon in 1915 near Dumfries, oats grown on electrified and non-electrified areas each of 1½ acres, showed a marked response to electrification. The yield of grain in pounds from the electrified area was 1,309 as against 1,003 from the non-electrified control—an increase of grain of 30 per cent. The yield of straw was even more markedly in favor of the electrified plot, 2,476 pounds, as compared with 1,572 pounds, an increase of 58 per cent. We believe that similar and even more decisive results have been obtained at Dumfries this year, and that electrification again resulted in large increases both of grain and straw. On the contrary, as those who have visited the R. H. S. Gardens at Wisley may have observed, similar experiments which have been carried out by the R. H. S., in conjunction with the Imperial College of Science, have not so far yielded results in favor of electrification. We are informed, however, that these experiments are to be continued during the coming year. If they result in increases of yield of horticultural plants as large as those which appear to be consistently obtained with oats, we may yet live to see the overhead electric discharge in operation as an adjunct to intensive cultivation. The cost of the current used is but small, although that of the initial installation is by no means inconsiderable. Where cheap current is available, however, the method, if it prove to have a pronounced and positive effect on the crops, should have a bright future before it.—London Gardeners' Chronicle.

THE CARNATION.

General Winter Routine.

The general routine work in caring for the carnation plants should be followed up closely, giving the necessary daily detail parts of the work prompt attention, all of which are most important if the best results the plants can give during the next three months are to be obtained. We are now approaching the holiday season when every flower that can be cut is quite valuable, and though a fine showing for Christmas and New Year's is desirable, it is a poor policy to push the plants to the extreme to obtain it. The few extra flowers that can be cut by extra forcing often result in a weakened condition of the plants for the balance of the season.

When the plants are full up with buds showing color, three or four extra degrees higher temperature and slightly closer conditions in the houses during the daytime, will help the buds to open faster and do no harm to the plants, but unless the buds are well developed, it is a mistake to attempt any change from the regular even temperatures. Among the most important points of carnation culture during the winter season, is to maintain an even day and night temperature. At night, during very severe weather, the temperature in the houses should be held close to 50 degrees, and when the outside conditions are moderate, 52 degrees inside should be carried. The day temperature should also be governed by the weather conditions; on cloudy days the houses ought to be held at 56-58 degrees with a crack of ventilation on whenever possible, ideal conditions on such days for the steady growth of the plants being a temperature of 56-58 degrees with a pipe or two of steam on and a crack of air on at the ventilators. This insures a clear growing atmosphere. When the weather is bright during the day, the inside temperature can run up to between 60-65 degrees without doing any harm, providing there is very little, if any, steam on and the temperature is being regulated by the ventilation. Many days, though the sun may be very bright, there is a sharp, piercing air that will not allow for the ventilators to be opened more than a crack, or a cold draught will blow on to the plants, which must be guarded against at all times. It is also a good plan to have a thermometer on the cold side of the houses to see what the difference in the temperature is. Usually we find it necessary to keep a pipe of steam running along the north walls nearly all the time during severe weather.

Cutting the flowers is one of the important parts of the daily routine which should demand regular attention; every flower as it becomes ready ought to be cut and marketed. It is poor policy to resort to any pickling these days, whether it is done by allowing the flowers to remain on the plants after they are fit for cutting, or to hold them in water after they are cut until the freshness is gone from them. Another important point is to be particular about the grading, bunching and marketing. If the best of the flowers are worthy of being classed as fancy, take enough pains to select them, keep them by themselves, see that they are put on the market in good shape, and demand a fair price. The other grades can be sorted and sold according to their quality, but when the fancies are mixed with the average or ordinary grades, it is the ordinary price that is returned for them. Do not allow the flowers to be left laying around the greenhouse after being cut, but see that when a reasonable number is taken off, they are carried to the cut flower room and placed in water. The best place to keep carnation blooms after they are placed in water, is a cool basement where a temperature of 50 degrees can be maintained.

Directly after the holiday crop is taken from the plants, it is a good plan to give the houses a fumigating with the nicotine preparation; even though the green fly or other aphids may not be visible, it is far better to fumigate lightly as a preventive than to wait until the plants are badly infested and have to resort to extreme measures.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Geraniums at Lancaster, Pa.

Lancaster is noted as a center for rooted geranium cuttings, hundreds of thousands being sent out monthly, except during August and September. Albert M. Herr, who used to specialize in carnations, now devotes his houses almost entirely to geraniums for cuttings. The plants are grown in ground beds, where they make a luxuriant growth, providing thousands of cuttings. These beds run from three to five years without change. By care in watering, careful pruning, etc., there appears to be no difficulty to get large quantities of cuttings all the year round. Winter night temperature is about 50°. Late in the summer the surplus is potted into two-inch pots. Cuttings, if the wood is right, root in about three weeks. Four large houses, each 20x256 feet, are run as one range without division, all being planted to geraniums. He has some 60,000 feet in all. One hundred and fifty thousand cuttings are in the bed at one time in the propagating house, 22x175 feet. But four varieties, Buchner, Poitevine, Nutt and Ricard, are grown, they being the four standard bedding and pot varieties. A house of seedlings and young plants of herbaceous stock was in good shape; this stock is now to be a side line. Unfortunately Mr. Herr was not to be seen to exploit his specialty, being away on a fishing trip.

Peter Brown, whose compact and conveniently arranged place is on Ruby street, has the distinction of being the original rooted geranium cutting man, he being the first to offer them in quantity in this way. His business soon grew to large proportions, the success of which induced others to follow, and now there are quite a number of growers about this city who devote almost their entire places to this branch of the business. The method of procedure is much the same as described at the A. M. Herr houses. The large beds of geraniums looked very fine. All stock now ready was sold and more orders were coming ever day. Pansies are also a specialty at the Brown establishment. About an acre is seeded in beds in prepared soil. They appear to do especially well here. Young plants are sold in large quantities from the ground from September 1 until December 15, most of the stock going to the southern states. They are tied in bundles of 25 and stood straight in crated boxes.

Fred W. Ritchy, also on Ruby street, has large ranges of glass devoted exclusively to geranium cuttings. One hundred thousand rooted cuttings, his present stock, were all ordered, and as soon as room was made in the sand beds, more cuttings, keeping the beds constantly filled, will go in. Labor is very scarce and Mr. Ritchy is going to try female help. He has found the black river sand very satisfactory for his propagating beds. He keeps his stock plants well cut back, getting more and better shoots in this way. The plants are stimulated in winter with manure water and blood. He states that advertising in trade papers has been the greatest factor in building up the business, as the growers all over the country are constantly turning to these columns when in need of stock of any kind. He has a large trade in Canana, his first sales there being attributed entirely to his advertising. His varieties are Viaud, Buchner, Poitevine, Doyle, Castellaine and Ricard. He takes cuttings about every four weeks from the same plants. An occasional dusting with lime, he has found very beneficial.

CHRISTMAS BASKETS.

Ardisias and Statice, by J. T. Muir, Chicago.

R. S. Nagle, West End avenue, is also in the geranium cutting business, but makes a specialty at this season of chrysanthemums. A summer house with ridge and furrow roof of hot bed sash setup, six feet above the ground, is a novel structure. A few sash on the north side keep off the cold winds. The other sides are open. Very good chrysanthemum blooms are grown here in ground beds. They were subject, however, to grasshoppers and the tarnished bug had also spoiled a number of the buds, yet many fine flowers had been cut here and the stock still coming on looked very good. Inside several large houses some huge exhibition stock was noteworthy; one could almost see the blue ribbons, although the stock were hardly out of the bud state. Sweet peas and mignonette are to follow the chrysanthemums.

Greenhouse Heating.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

We are building a new range of three even-span houses, each 40x240 feet, connected on the north end by boiler room and packing shed. Our old range is piped for 40 degrees, gravity system, the heating surface comprising 8,000 feet, consisting of 3½-inch cast-iron and 2-inch and 3-inch wrought iron pipe. Owing to the high price of material we do not wish to pipe this range under the old gravity system. We have a No. 30-8 Lord & Burnham boiler heating the present range and wish to continue it if we use steam, as it is adapted to either. We use No. 1 buckwheat coal.

Will a horizontal steam boiler be more powerful and economical than cast iron? The boiler room, 20x40 feet, is opposite the center house and has a boiler pit 6 feet 6 inches deep. Owing to the ground grade, the side walls at the south end are about 5 feet; at the north end from 6 to 6½ feet, the slope of the houses being one inch in 10 feet toward the north. We have the west house devoted to cucumbers, working with four 3-inch flow pipes on the columns (1½x1¼) with four 2-inch and one 3-inch return on each side wall. Although this is giving good satisfaction we wish to change during the coming summer to either steam or hot water under pressure, and would like advice on the following points:

We wish to pipe the new range for 55 to 60 degrees. Can we use the 2-inch and 3-inch pipe in remodeling to put in steam, and how much more pipe will be required for hot water under pressure than for steam? How much more care will be required with steam than hot water in attending to the pet-cocks to let the air out?

We find the outside circumference of 3-inch pipe is only twice that of 1½-inch. Does that mean it will only take the place of two 1½-inch pipes in steam heating?

T. E. R.

The power and economy of a boiler depends upon the area of the grate, and the area and efficiency of the heating surface, rather than upon the materials of which it is constructed. As a rule, the fire surface of a horizontal tubular boiler is greater in proportion to the grate area than that of a cast iron boiler, and to that extent, may be considered more economical.

As a rule, only about one-half as much radiation is required for steam heating as with an open tank hot water system, and while it is possible to reduce the radiating surface with hot water under pressure to the amount required with steam, we prefer to use 25 to 50 per cent more. The care is about the same with steam as with hot water under pressure. While we prefer to use 1½-inch pipe in the steam coils for houses 240 feet long, a few 3-inch pipes might be used without seriously affecting the results. It would be possible to so arrange the piping that it may be used either with hot water, with open or closed tank, or with steam.

The use of the open tank in mild weather would be economical, both in fuel and care, while steam or hot water under pressure could be used in cold weather. Care should be taken to have the number and size of the flow pipes adapted for the open system, and then there should be valves upon about one-fourth of the returns, which would not be required in cold weather when steam is used.

The circumference of a 3-inch pipe is about twice that of a 1½-inch pipe, while that of a 1¼-inch pipe is about 13 per cent smaller than 1½-inch. The heating efficiency of wrought iron pipe is practically in proportion to its circumference.

TORONTO, ONT.—One of the finest decorations seen in this city this year was that arranged by H. G. Dilleuth on the occasion of the reception to the Duke of Devonshire, the new governor-general, at the Toronto club. Oak sprays, specimen chrysanthemums, palms and other plants, were used in profusion. The tables were decorated with orchids, roses and chrysanthemums.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late White.

One of the chrysanthemum varieties which under all conditions has proven easy to handle, and from which the average grower can cut nearly 100 per cent of perfect flowers, is Maud Dean and its sport, White Maud Dean. The latter however has years since we had so little damp, close weather, with fogs, during the time the blooms were developing. The growers did not realize the prices they should for their blooms, owing chiefly to the large amount of California grown stock shipped into the west and central western sections. The price was also kept down by the vast amount of white and yellow stock that was put on the market, many of the retail stores displaying these two colone fault, namely, it is not pure white, having more or less of a lavender tinge. Four years ago there was found among the stock of C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., a plant which produced a pure white flower. Cuttings were taken from this and the flowers maintained the same pure white color under all weather conditions. The keeping quality is excellent, and being somewhat fuller than the original Maud Dean, the flowers possess a gracefulness that cannot be surpassed. The variety has been grown for the past three years and almost every bud produces a good commercial bloom, and when taken on a late bud, will be in flower during all of December and the early part of January.

The variety, which is shown in the illustration herewith, will be called Hamburg Late White and will be disseminated in the spring of 1917 by the Wm. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

Planning for Another Season.

The chrysanthemum season of 1916 is now drawing to a close. It has been an unusual season in many ways; the terrific heat of the summer was very hard on the plants, in some sections causing considerable loss from red spider. It also prevented the application of fertilizers to any extent; in fact, the growers who were the most cautious in feeding their plants have reaped the best results, the highly fed plants having suffered considerably from hardening of the wood, loss of foliage or damping of the petals.

Though the summer was hard on the plants, the weather during October was ideal for the development of the blooms. The last week of the month and the first week of November was perhaps a little too warm and brought them out in a hurry, but it is many ors alone, so that a great many people have an idea that white and yellow are the only colors among the chrysanthemums and quickly get tired of them. We now have a number of the lighter bronze, red and some of the deeper pink colors that are desirable in every way and just as reliable to grow as the white and yellow, so that there is not any excuse to flood the market with so much of these two colors. What is true of the large blooms is also so with the pompons. The yellow, white and light pink varieties were in over-supply, but the autumn colors of bronze and red sold well and these facts should be borne in mind when figuring on the stock to grow for another season.

NEW VARIETIES.

There were not a large number of new introductions of 1916, but among them are some that are worthy of being added to the list of standard commercial and exhibition varieties. Among the commercial varieties we note the following:

Josephine Foley—A splendid white, either for commercial or exhibition purposes; a fine, incurved flower, full to the center, wide petals of purest white, a splendid keeper; stem and foliage of the best.

October Queen—Ready to cut about October 15; another splendid white variety, good keeper, easy to grow, stem and foliage ideal; a fine addition to the list of early whites.

Alice Day—Also a fine early white variety for commercial purposes, full double flower, nice grower, with good stem and foliage.

Autocrat—Pure white, ready to cut the early part of November; a fine incurved white, good grower, keeps well; a good commercial or exhibition variety.

Tiger—a fine yellow with close incurved form so much desired for commercial purposes; ready to cut October 20; looks to be one of the best commercial varieties of the season; not any better stem and foliage.

Early Rose—A very early pink variety, worthy of further trial because of its earliness; ready to cut the first week of October; fine stem and foliage.

Miss Elvia Scoville—White sport of Wells' Late Pink; a fine variety; later buds come tinged with pink. Those who are successful with Wells' Late Pink will want this one.

Mrs. M. R. Morgan—Golden sport of Yellow Eaton; different in color and form of flower from its parent. Most of the growers complain of a long neck on this variety, but this can be eliminated by taking a later bud. The color is a very deep golden yellow.

Blush Pattie, or White Pattie, as some growers have it—This is a fine white sport of the variety Pattie. A large percentage of blooms show a tinted pink color, which is not objectionable; a fine commercial variety.

The introductions of 1915 have shown up well this year, among the most promising for commercial purposes are the following:

Early Frost—An early white variety that is going to be planted in larger numbers next year. It is a splendid keeper, lasting as long as any variety we know of. The writer saw a block or two of this variety that, owing to the variation of the buds, had been doing service both as an early and late variety.

Golden Queen—If this variety was a grower's attention as a fancy commercial variety.

Ogontz is a light primrose, a fine, fancy variety that is well liked where known; a beautiful flower, petals whorling around, giving it a fine appearance.

Among the exhibition varieties disseminated in 1915, there are several that have come to the front.

Bob. Pulling—A large orange yellow is one of the best.

Mrs. G. G. Mason—A fine red with old gold reverse; a splendid flower of this color.

Dragon Vert—A large crimson with gold reverse; has proved to be one of the best of this color to grow on the benches for commercial purposes. It has fine color, keeps well, and is a good grower.

Wm. Vert is another fine crimson for commercial purposes, at its best about October 20; a variety that sold well this year.

As soon as the crop is off, the stock plants should be taken care of, it being just as important to take good care of the stock plants as it is the plants on the bench or in pots while in full growth. It is a mistake to stick them under the benches until required to produce cuttings in the spring. Oftentimes there are not enough of the plants left to produce cuttings when neglected in this way. Give them a good, light situation, where they will receive plenty of fresh air and a cool temperature all the time. Fifty degrees at night, with a very little increase during the day, is ample for chrysanthemum stock plants. Also, hold them a little to the dry side at the roots.

Bear Fishing.

We are accustomed to marvelous tales of the deeds of fishermen but the latest story is such as the mind of man has not dreamed of heretofore. Two men fishing from a gasoline launch in one of the lakes in northern Michigan caught a great black bear, not a cub, but full grown. The hero of this exploit is one Foley, already famous in the annals of fishermen, not the Foley who made 60 telegraph messages go over the wire which had taken only one before, not the Foley who started the Pennsylvania railroad, but Big Phil Foley, the Chicago greenhouse builder. A big man is needed in the telling of this story to properly demonstrate the bear's proportions, so you must ask Phil about it the next time you see him.

better grower during the summer, I would consider it the best of the early yellow sorts, but with us it is hard to handle early in the season, but after the extreme hot weather is over, it picks up and makes a nice growth. It is worthy of careful growing, because of its early season of maturing, which is about October 4.

Marigold—Those who followed the instructions of the introducers of this variety regarding the taking of the bud, were well repaid. When the buds are secured around August 25, this variety is the best of all yellows for cutting for the last week of October; a splendid golden yellow with good stem and foliage.

Tekonsha—A beautiful bronze variety for commercial purposes, fine large bloom of pleasing color, which shows up well under artificial light; good stem and foliage; one of the best 1915 varieties.

Modello—Golden amber, a color rare among chrysanthemums; when well done sells on sight; worthy of thorough trial; a fine variety in every respect.

White Chieftain—Whether it was due to the season or something else, most of the White Chieftain seen this year were well tinged with pink; some growers liked it, while others thought it gave the flower the appearance of being old.

EXHIBITION VARIETIES.

Among the introductions of 1916, we have two sports of very prominent exhibition varieties. One, the Yellow Turner, yellow sport of Wm. Turner, and the other Wm. Rigby, yellow sport of Mrs. Gilbert Drabble. These two sports are both fine and will be heard of more next year than this.

Mrs. J. Gibson is a fine light pink exhibition variety and worthy of the Calumet—A fine bronze; a little early for exhibition. At its best, around October 20, this variety did well this year for commercial purposes.

Mrs. R. C. Pulling—A fine exhibition yellow of the largest size.

Mrs. J. Purroy Mitchel—Clear snow white; a fine bold flower.

Earl Kitchener—A deep, rose pink with silver reverse to petals; a wonderful grower and a fine keeper.

A. S. Baldwin—A fancy incurved yellow, a grand exhibition variety.

FERNS AND PALMS AT THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO.'S, CHICAGO.

Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs.

An inspection of the large range of glass of Vaughan's Greenhouses, admirably located at Western Springs, a suburb of Chicago, is interesting as great preparations have been made to supply holiday plants for the Christmas trade. Several houses of azaleas in various sizes which have carried in good shape are coming along nicely, many showing color and should be gay with bloom in good season. Simon Mardner, white and pink, Vervaeana and Mme. Petrick are the leading varieties.

A house of cyclamen, a most useful and popular plant, is in readiness, with blossoms and the wreath of buds that makes it so salable. Another large house is filled with poinsettias in large and small pans and others grown singly. This is the greatest of all Christmas plants and these promise to be at their best for this season. A house of Begonias La Reine and Cincinnati in medium sizes suitable for making up in baskets with other plants looked very useful.

Crotons are a feature, several houses of these in from three and four-inch pots and larger are very well colored stock, fine for basket work. Dracenas Sanderii, terminalis and Godseffiana, in addition to a large assortment of ferns in all the popular varieties, are invaluable for adding variety to the plant baskets.

A house of solanums presented a very Christmassy appearance. Primula obconica was also seen in selected strains—a house of well-flowered plants.

Ferns in the larger sizes are especially popular at the holidays; they are "gifts that will grow." A large range of six houses is filled with Scottii and Boston in medium sizes with quantities being finished on stands raised above others. The smaller of these stands consists of a 12-inch drain pipe set on top of a six-inch pot, the larger size being a four-inch sewer pipe, 18-inches in height. These make useful and indestructible stands.

Large quantities of stock in great variety are grown here for catalogue sales and shipped to every part of the United States. Cannas are a feature in an immense storage house being filled with the roots. A house of the new and scarce varieties is being grown for propagating purposes.

Herbaceous plants are grown in quantity, several cold houses being filled with plants in pots for early delivery. Acres of frames outside hold stock of this character for spring sales. A cold storage cellar under the commodious packing shed, and conveniently arranged, is filled with roses, shrubbery and other dormant stock for early shipping.

George Wittbold Co., Chicago.

This is a growing establishment in every sense of the word, located at Edgewood, 15 miles from Chicago. They have an extensive range of houses built together with a large corridor shed into which all the houses open. These are all 27 feet wide by 400 feet in length, with 14 feet to the ridge pole. They have, altogether, about 165, 000 feet of glass, but more is going up, one house, 27x300 feet, now nearly completed, and two, 20x400 feet, which will probably be finished in time for use in the spring.

Christmas plants—azaleas, poinsettias, Primula obconica and cyclamens, were seen in quantity. The cyclamens presented a splendid, strong growth in well colored leaves, each plant showing a wealth of flowers and buds; over 35,000 of these had been sold in the early fall. The primulas were a selected, large flowered strain, grown from seed of their own saving. The feature here is the intensive cultivation or double use of space through most of the houses.

Palms and ferns are grown in large quantities. Most growers are satisfied with a good filling of the table space, and at times a border along the floor or on a shelf over head. The practice here is to use double deck tables; in some cases the bottom bench is on the level of the floor, or the earth itself, over which, about four feet in height, is the elevated table. In this case, the lower space is filled with palms and the upper with ferns, both of which crops appear to do equally well. A double decked cement table lower section, 12 inches high, the upper three to four feet higher, will hold seedling palms below and larger stocks or ferns above. In some cases, the upper bench consists of one-inch iron pipe, laid crossways, which supports 5-inch cement slabs six inches apart, running the length of the table. These when filled still admit quite a lot of light to the plants beneath. Four-inch zinc strips, with edges turned up, are also used in the same way as the slabs. On these are placed ferns.

Over all the walks in these palm houses is a raised pipe platform with strips of cement the full length, on which is coming along a crop of some kind, such as palms or ferns. In addition to this two or three rows of wire hanging-baskets, suspended from the roof, filled with Sprengeri, etc., are taking advantage of this light, airy space and making the most of it.

Some plants are done here on a large scale. Four hundred thousand Kentias Belmoreana and Forsteriana, from seedlings to two-inch pots, were coming on; many tables of four and also six-inch were seen. Even this latter size is considered all right for the lower spaces. Good sized seedling blocks of Areca lutescens and latanias were also in evidence. Two hundred thousand two-inch Bostons in their various kinds filled several large benches. Dracena indivisa is another quantity plant grown from seed, an immense number being used for filling vases and baskets.

Stock is grown here by contract; one order of 4,000 12-inch wire baskets, is for spring delivery. Each basket contains three Sprengeri, three Trailing Queen coleus, one Dracena indivisa or a Boston fern. These are all grown suspended from the roofs of the fern and palm houses. Forty thousand four-inch geraniums is another order, all going to the same party to be sold at retail. Bulbs are also largely handled for similar sales; 300,000 Dutch hyacinths, 100,000 daffodils, and the same quantity of tulips, all grown in from three, three and one-half and a few in four-inch pots, are now planted and plunged outside and covered with manure and straw. They are planted as late as possible and covered just deep enough to prevent too severe freezing, as too much covering is apt to make them leggy in the spring. When lifted, each has to have a stake. To handle this stock would give some men a nightmare, but it is a business here and moves without friction. Forty thousand Easter lilies, coming on for Easter, would also add worries for the timid ones.

Six large houses are filled with roses—Milady, the three Killarneys, Ophelia, Russell and Mrs. Ward. Milady is their star red. This rose must not be pinched, as only short stemmed buds will result. Black spot came easily with Russell on account of its persistent hybrid blood. Syringing when the bed was dry, is considered bad for black spot.

Over 50 hands are employed with additional help at busy seasons. When one considers the great amount of stock coming along here, it is all in very good condition. A noteworthy plant is Ficus nidita; the leaf is small like that of an orange and the habits of the plant similar. It is said to be an admirable window box plant.

Wm. Schuett, the foreman, appears quite equal to the job and handles the wide range of stock grown here in a masterly manner.

J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O.

Begonia Glory of Cincinnati placed this famous Ohio river city on the map horticulturally; incidentally, it also boosted the fame of Julius A. Peterson, one of the master gardeners of the country, whose skill in producing high grade plants won him first honors at all the important horticultural exhibitions of the past decade. In seeking to improve the winter flowering begonias, he produced not only the above named valuable variety, but also Melior, which in several important respects, is superior, being of more compact growth, with a greater abundance of bloom; also, a bronze leaved variety, with flowers of a deep cerise pink, which he named in honor of his wife, Mrs. J. A. Peterson. Both of these newer sorts have had unusual sale this season. As seen here, they are splendidly flowered, very well colored, making ideal Christmas plants.

The cyclamen is another specialty of this skilled grower. Others have had success with this great holiday plant, but nowhere is it done better than here. This season's stock filled six large houses, grown in from five to eight-inch pots. Such plants in their general excellence, it has never been my good fortune to see before. In the blocks of six-inch pots, just as they ran, most carried 10 to 12 flowers, while many were seen with from 15 to

Preparations for next season's Christmas stock are going on; 50,000 leaf begonia cuttings in the sand beds of two propagating houses, are for the most part rooted; these will soon be potted up and the space filled with another batch, most of which are sold as young plants to be grown on. Thirty thousand cyclamen plants, seedlings in flats, will soon be transplanted and given more room in other flats and from there to 2½-inch pots covered well with newspapers. Each plant, which has been wrapped with four ply of newspaper wound several times around and tied well at the top, is then packed with excelsior in the prepared box, which, when snugly placed, just holds the desired quantity. Excelsior is then placed on top, more thicknesses of newspaper, the ends of the lining sheets turned in, and a large sheet of the felt, with the edges tucked in, covers the top. The upper ends of the outside felt are now folded over and the whole paper casing tied down and around the sides with twine. The lid is now nailed on, tagged and addressed, packed as completely as in Mr. Peterson's experience is possible.

One each tag or label is a prominent sticker, which reads, "If shipments should be frozen or damaged, notify express company at once—they are responsible."

The firm of J. A. Peterson & Sons comprises Mr. Peterson and his three sons, Roger, Clarence and Jens, who have taken hold in a thorough and intelligent way that promises well for the future. An important factor is Mrs. J. A. Peterson, who has charge of the accounting and correspondence, her good judgment and counsel, having been, Mr. Peterson said, of the greatest assistance since the business was founded in 1891.

C. E. Critchell, Cincinnati, O.

One of the best fitted up of the wholesale supply houses in this city is that of C. E. Critchell at 15 East Third street. The store room is about 30 feet in width, by 80 in depth. A wide gallery on one side and across the rear, permitted by the high ceiling, is a most convenient addition. This is filled with wire designs and all kinds of supplies, of which a complete line is carried. All the latest in plant and cut flower baskets, ribbons, chiffons, artificial flowers, immortelles, chenille, ruscus, Minerva grass and other Christmas material is handled in quantity. Prepared oak and magnolia leaves are a specialty. This is headquarters for all kinds of southern greens, such as smilax, leucothoe, galax, fern leaves, and boxwood, of which latter carload lots have been handled for the Christmas trade. The basement, as large as the store, affords room for boxes, moss and many other bulky articles 18, and lots of buds coming. The spread of foliage was from 12 to 15 inches. The five-inch were relatively as fine, while the largest size, in eights, were sensational in their wealth of flowers and well marked foliage. The strain is Mr. Peterson's own selection, the best of his plants in all colors being set aside for seed each season. The quality of this stock is so well known that it was all sold before December 10 and thousands of dollars worth of orders had to be turned down.

There are other plants grown especially for the retail trade that are produced here with marked success. Adiantum Farleyense is not an easy plant to grow by any means, but here it stands, all in four-inch pots, as perfect specimens as one could wish for; it is not grown larger at this time for want of room. Pandanus Veitchii, another specialty, is also seen in smaller sizes for next fall delivery. Asplenium nidus avis, the bird's nest fern, is another success. Many good plantmen have had only moderate success with this novelty fern, if not indeed positive failure, but the houses filled with it here only call forth praise for its great vigor and the beauty of its lustrous, leathery-like fronds. There is not a dark spot or imperfection of any kind to be seen on these plants. Scarcely a vestige of this grand stock will be visible on January 1, at which time the vacant tables will be occupied by hydrangeas of the newer French varieties, which are now outside in frames. Easter lilies, giganteums, now being "ripened" in cold storage, will be potted up. A house will be filled with rambler roses in variety. Azaleas, in a cool sash covered pit, between two other houses, will, with all the other blooming plants, be brought on in good time for Easter.

and so on up to the finished, salable sizes. The blocks of stock set aside for seed are a wonderful sight in their great clouds of blossoms, some plants containing over 50 flowers. Spaces along the sides of houses are utilized with a foot wide shelf, on which cyclamens are grown on, but always half plunged in hops, so that they shall not dry out.

Packing is done scientifically; large quantities of boxes are crated and made ready. These, as packed, are first lined inside the crating with a continuous sheet of heavy felt paper, 36 inches wide, then four more sheets of newspaper line this on the inside with foldings over the outside to hold them up. Six inches of excelsior is then placed on the bottom of the box and that form an important part of the stock.

A large ice cooled room, or refrigerator, on the first floor, affords ample storage room for cut flowers, which is the principle feature of the business. American Beauties and other choice flowers are received from eastern growers, while high grade tea roses, carnations, violets, lily of the valley, and a general line, the product of the best growers within shipping distance of the city, is received daily. Mr. Critchell is a pushing, energetic man, one of the live wires of the middle west, with energy plus. He has been well grounded in the rudiments of the business and keeps in constant touch with very detail. A well organized force is on hand ready for any emergency.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Morrison, December 7, President Henderson in the chair. The principal business of the meeting was the election of officers for 1917, which resulted as follows: W. H. Amling, president; Paul Klingsporn, vice-president; Allie Zech, secretary; Otto H. Amling, treasurer, and W. J. Keimel trustee, the last named taking the place of George Asmus, whose term expires this year. The holdover trustees are C. L. Washburn and H. N. Bruns.

Chas. T. Johnson and John Torchiana were elected to membership and W. J. Baumer, Berwyn, Ill., and Thos. Heaven, Benton Harbor, Mich., were nominated for membership. A letter was read from R. E. Schiller asking for the support of the club in enforcing the law with regard to the numbering of alley entrances to residences in order to facilitate deliveries and the movement was endorsed by the club.

The exhibits included a fine vase of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses from French & Salm, Union Grove, Wis., which scored 92 points and was awarded the club certificate. Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis, Ind., exhibited Merry Christmas and Pollyanna carnations, both in fine form. As these varieties had already been scored by the club no action was taken upon them by the judges of exhibits. J. E. Matthewson, of Sheboygan, Wis., exhibited fine specimen begonias.

ciety, addressed the meeting and urged the members to attend the coming convention and exhibition of that society, to be held in that city January 31-February 2, with exhibits of carnations and such other stock as they may consider worthy. Other visitors in attendance included C. J. Watson, representing the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and Thos. Heaven of Benton Harbor, Mich., who also addressed the meeting.

Ed. Hunt rendered several solos, which were greatly appreciated.

PRESIDENT-ELECT AMLING.

W. H. Amling, president-elect of the Chicago Florists' Club, was born at Maywood, Ill., August 3, 1866, in which village he received his early education and later attended the normal school at Addison, Ill., after which he taught school at Defiance, O., Manitowoc, Wis., and for the greater length of time at Milwaukee. When 40 years of age he gave up teaching and entered the florist business, having purchased a small place at Maywood, at that time owned by Wm. Collatz, directly opposite the A. F. Amling range. Here he began the growing of carnations, and his efforts were crowned with success from the start. The varieties grown at that time were Genevieve Lord and Boston market, but as the business prospered, the capacity of the establishment was increased until it now embraces two ranges with over 75,000 square feet of glass, and roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, freesias and, most important of all, sweet peas of exceptional quality were added to the products of the establishment, all of which are readily disposed of in the wholesale market.

Mr. Amling, who has always been a most enthusiastic member of the Chicago Florists' Club, and is also a member of the Society of the American Florists, has three sons, Walter, Herbert and Martin, all of whom are members of the florists' club, and are actively identified with the growing end of their father's business.

OFFICERS-ELECT NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

G. E. M. Stumpp, President.

John Young, Secretary.

J. H. Fiesser, Vice-President.

New York Florists' Club.

At the meeting of the above organization, held in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building, December 11, the principal business was the election of officers, interest being largely centered on the presidency. The result was as follows: G. E. M. Stumpp, president; J. H. Fiesser, vice-president; John Young, secretary; Wm. C. Rickards, treasurer. Trustees to serve two years: Roman J. Irwin, John Canning and Alfred Kottmiller.

For the office of president, Henry Weston, present incumbent; F. R. Pierson and Thomas B. DeForest, all of whom were nominated, declined to stand for election, which left a straight contest between G. E. M. Stumpp and Charles Schenck. The number of votes cast was 182, of which Stumpp received 98 and Schenck 84. We believe that the size of the vote cast for Stumpp was a surprise, even to his strongest supporters.

Both Max Schling and W. G. Badgley, who had been nominated for the vice-presidency, declined to run, the contest being between J. H. Fiesser and P. W. Popp, superintendent of a private estate. The vote was Fiesser, 85; Popp, 83. As Popp has been a member of the club less than a year, his vote was certainly very complimentary. J. Harrison Dick and M. C. Ebel declined to run for secretary and John Young was re-elected without opposition. James McHutchison and Wallace R. Pierson declined to run for treasurer and C. Madsen and Victor Dorval declined to run for trustees. W. C. Rickards had no opposition for re-election. The usual motions "to make it unanimous," were made by the defeated candidates. All the officers-elect, but John Canning, trustee, who had left for home, made appropriate remarks.

Aside from John Young and Wm. C. Rickards, who seem to have made themselves so useful that we cannot do without them, it may be pointed out that all the officers-elect are young and active men. J. H. Fiesser, is, we believe, the oldest, and he is only 48, and as spry as he ever was. We believe that the new administration will be a successful one.

Charles L. Tricker, Arlington, N. J., and Henry H. Dreyer, Beechurst, L. I., N. Y., were elected members. Marshall Clarke of David Clarke's Sons, New York; Carl C. Reck, L. A. Dupuy and A. Van Praag were proposed for membership.

Roman J. Irwin, Director.

W. C. Rickards, Treasurer.

There were a number of meritorious exhibits. A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., showed the following carnations: Nancy, Enchantress shade of pink; Nebraska, light red; Arawanna, crimson. Badgley & Bishop, Inc., 34 West 28th street, exhibited yellow seedling rose, Little Gem, and yellow seedling rose, No. 108, grown by Edward Towill, Roslyn, Pa. George T. Schuneman Co., Rockville Centre, L. I., exhibited sweet peas. A large and late white chrysanthemum called Hamburg Late White, which will be disseminated by the W. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., and the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., was exhibited. Chas. W. Tricker, Arlington, N. J., exhibited winter flowering begonias. Alfred Demousey, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., staged a sport of the Enchantress carnation. Jas. Foster, Norton Hill, Stamford, Conn., exhibited a yellow seedling chrysanthemum (single).

Chairman Hildenbrand of the house committee, and his assistants, served refreshments. Relating to the spring show, Secretary Young wishes to report that 58 exhibitors have reserved over $12,000 worth of space. Under the direction of Chairman T. A. Havemeyer the many new features and attractions of the official souvenir programme and "guide to the show" are being rapidly "whipped into shape"; these changes and improvements have made the programme much more attractive to the advertiser and to date orders for space have been received from 55 leading establishments, for an amount of almost $2,000. And the work in this direction has hardly been begun. Requests for schedules are being received daily, showing an active interest being taken by those who intend to exhibit in the competitive sections.

PRESIDENT-ELECT STUMPP.

George E. M. Stumpp was born in New York City in 1881, the son of George M. and Mrs. Stumpp. His mother is now dead. His father, who for many years was one of the leading florists of the city, retired from business about two years ago. George E. M. received his early education in his native city, later spending two years in Germany with an uncle who was a florist. During his stay in Germany, he spent much of his time mastering the details of his uncle's business, also attending a school, where instructions in horticulture were given. After returning home, being of an adventurous turn of mind, he spent three years in traveling throughout the United States, visiting all the leading cities and working in many leading florist establishments. He eventually returned to New York and joined his father's staff. When his father, as has been noted, retired, he took over the business, located at Fifth avenue and 58th street, New York, and has since continued it with increasing success. He is a natural genius with a wonderful capacity for detail. Many of the artistic and mechanical features of his large store are the work of his own hands. He has a keen sense of humor and can appreciate a joke. He is a member and director of the Horticultural Society of New York; a member and director of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery; a life member of the Society of American Florists and a member of the Retail Florists' Association of New York. He is happily married.

A. F. F.

White Medal Award.

The trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society have awarded the George Robert White medal of honor for the year 1916, to William Robinson of Gravetye Manor, Sussex, England. This is the eighth award of this medal made by the society in recognition of eminent service in the advancement of horticulture. Previous awards have been made to Prof. C. S. Sargent of the Arnold Arboretum; Jackson T. Dawson, Victor Lemoine of Nancy, France; Michael H. Walsh, the rose specialist of Woods Hole, Mass.; park commission of the city of Rochester, N. Y.; Sir Harry J. Veitch of London, Eng., and Ernest H. Wilson.

William Robinson, to whom the medal is now awarded, has done much, especially through his writing in horticultural literature, as an exponent of the natural style of flower gardening as opposed to the formal carpet bedding and ribbon borders of former years. He founded the journals, Gardening Illustrated, and Flora and Sylva, and is the author of numerous volumes treating of many subjects of horticultural interest.

WM. P. RICH, Sec'y.

Minnesota State Florists' Association.

A very successful flower show under the auspices of the Minnesota State Florists' Association and the Minnesota State Horticultural Society was held in the West Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn., December 6-9, the arrangement of the displays being most excellent and the quality of the stock shown all that could be desired, the only drawback being due to the fact that quantity was lacking due to a shortage of supply following the Thanksgiving rush.

The display of Swanson, Florist, 619 Nicollet avenue, attracted much attention and he captured first honors for palms, ferns, basket arrangement, Russell roses and blooming plants.

J. A. Weber was awarded first prize for a fine showing of Dolly Dimple chrysanthemums, while John A. Sten also took first honors for a fine vase of pink, Andrew Herzog capturing the second prize for the same color.

In the class for ferns and blooming plants, the Merriam Park Floral Co. staged an excellent display which was given second place.

N. Neilson, of Mankato, made a fine display of roses, and was easily first for his white and red varieties.

W. H. BOFFERDING, Sec'y.

National Association of Gardeners.

The annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners was held in Washington, D. C., December 5-6, with headquarters at the New Ebbitt House. The first business session was called to order at nine o'clock Tuesday morning, by William F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F. and ex-president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, who acted as temporary chairman. Mr. Gude welcomed the visitors to the nation's capital and assured his audience that it was not simply his own home but the home of every American citizen and therefore all must be truly "at home." Referring to the fact that he and his brother, although not professing to have as much or as varied scientific knowledge of flowers and plants as a gardener, were still trying in a humble way to grow flowers commercially of a standard of the very highest possible, he stated that he understood the gardeners' meeting to be for the interchange of ideas, for the uplift of horticulture in general. He then detailed the entertainment that the Washington hosts expected to give the visitors. Mr. Gude spoke as representing the Washington Chamber of Commerce and the florists generally of the city. His remarks were enthusiastically received. He then introduced President William N. Craig, who extended the thanks of the association to Mr. Gude, who he characterized as "the silver-tongued orator of the capital city."

PRESIDENT CRAIG'S ADDRESS.

I am very glad that we have an opportunity to meet in the city of Washington, a city dear to the heart of every true American. Entirely apart from what we will find here of horticultural interest, there is so much that appeals to the eye, that I presume most of you would, like myself, prefer to make our business session as short as circumstances will permit, in order that we may have more time to enjoy the architectural and other features of interest so abundantly spread before us. Having these things in mind, I will not weary you with any tedious remarks.

Since our convention in Boston a year ago, which proved to be quite a successful one, in spite of the fact that we were meeting on ground largely untilld, so far as our association was concerned, progress has been steady and satisfactory; and while the addition of new members has hardly reached my expectations, all things considered, we have done very well, and I anticipate a healthy growth during the coming year, for the better we become known, the more additions we will make to our ranks. We are still a young society and have a big field ahead of us. I trust members will individually do what they can to bring in additions to our ranks; it is a simple matter to carry one or two of our small application blanks in your pocket, and just as easy to hand them to the right parties when suitable opportunities present themselves.

It is very gratifying to know that our membership grows more truly national each year. At one time we were looked upon as a purely New York society; that time has passed and members are now being added from all parts of our country; in fact, of late the west, thanks to energetic work done by our vice-president, Theodore Wirth, and one of our directors, Thomas W. Head, has been adding more members than the east, and with our next convention in the west, we are bound to add many more members in that section. Our membership being truly national in character, we should spare no pains to preserve it as such. As our conventions are held only annually, there must naturally be long lapses between the visits to the various centers, and I think some plan might be evolved for the holding of occasional gatherings of members of the association in the various centers of horticultural activity. A local secretary might be selected in each of the sections where we are the strongest, who would call quarterly or semi-annual meetings of the local members, and where matters pertaining to the welfare of the association could be discussed, short reports of each being sent to the official organ. These local secretaries could perhaps collect dues as well as enroll new members, and in this way relieve our hard-worked secretary in some small measure. These meetings need not in any way conflict with the activities of the local clubs and horticultural societies.

We have during the present year been furnishing practical papers for discussion among the 35 or more local societies co-operating with us. We would be glad to know from members how far these papers have filled local wants. If they have proven helpful, we should continue them, and in that case we must ask your aid in helping to furnish the necessary quota of practical papers to carry the work along for another year. Every latitude would be given in the preparation of such papers, and if we need them, I hope you will assist us in securing the necessary number.

The service bureau of the association as it becomes better known is being more largely patronized. We cannot, unfortunately, secure positions for all applicants, but our good secretary has placed a good number and would gladly have helped every one had it been in his power to do so. While there is no charge for this, we need a special fund to work more effectively, and I want to say that if those whom the bureau has benefited would each make a small contribution, it would materially aid us. All are not unappreciative; one good member not long ago donated $50 for services rendered. Is it too much to hope that others will contribute for similar reasons to this fund?

Our annual dues are small, and seem particularly so when our monthly organ is included. I want to recommend our magazine to all members of the association. It is one of the strong links which helps to bind us together. Our secretary, hard worked as he is, and with physical disabilities to handicap him, has labored steadfastly to make our organ helpful and attractive, and has succeeded very well. What he needs, however, and would I am sure appreciate, is a little more aid from our members in the way of short practical articles, reports of gardens visited, and other matters of interest. We may not all have literary ability, but surely there are a goodly number, especially among our younger men, who could help to make our magazine more valuable.

In conclusion, I am sorry that I have not been able to accomplish more for the interest of the National Association of Gardeners during my tenure of office, but I have done my best to work up an interest in it in New England, and I pledge my unstinted support to my successor, and will continue to give the association all possible publicity. I ask the co-operation of every member in making 1917 our most successful year, and the National Association of Gardeners one worthy of our noble profession, and one which will command the respect of both gardeners and their employers.

WHITE MEDAL OF HONOR.

TUESDAY'S PROGRAMME.

The minutes of the last annual convention held at Boston, Mass., were read and on motion duly approved.

Mr. Gude at this time announced that he had made arrangements that the convention visitors go by boat to Mt. Vernon, Washington's home, on Wednesday as the guests of the Mt. Vernon authorities, also that he had secured a pass for each attendant on the convention to the Senate and House of Representative galleries, signed by the vice-president and speaker of the house. On motion it was ordered that the officers of the association procure and have placed on the tomb of George Washington, at Mt. Vernon, a suitable floral offering commemorative of the association's visit.

Secretary Ebel read and moved the adoption of the following resolutions, proposed by L. P. Jensen, of St. Louis, Mo.:

Whereas, The United States has recently concluded a treaty with Canada for the protection of migratory wild birds, and

Whereas, It will be necessary to enact further legislation by congress to give effect to the terms of the treaty and to appropriate funds to carry out its provisions, and

Whereas, We, the members of the National Association of Gardeners, are strongly in favor of the protection of wild birds as provided in said treaty, therefore be it

Resolved: That we strongly urge our representatives and senators in congress to vigorously support any measure proposed to carry out the provisions of such treaty, and to support the necessary appropriations for the department of agriculture, so that the department can enforce same.

The resolution was adopted by unanimous vote.

Secretary Ebel referred to the necessity for suitable representation at the national capital in case any legislation came up affecting ornamental horticulture or anything pertaining to the interest of the gardener and suggested that George W. Hess, superintendent of the national botanic gardens, and a director of the association, would prove a most capable representative. On motion of Secretary Ebel, Mr. Hess was unanimously elected Washington representative of the National Association of Gardeners and it was generally acknowledged that no better selection could have been made.

CHICAGO MEETING PLACE IN 1917.

Thomas W. Head, superintendent of the J. Ogden Armour estate, Lake Forest, Ill., next made a strong plea for the holding of the convention in Chicago next year. Mr. Head gave full credit to the east for the work done in organizing the association, but declared that the west had now become interested in its affairs and that he knew of no better way of extending the usefulness of the association than by coming west next year with the convention. He stated that his own employer, Mr. Armour, had expressed to him the warmest interest in the matter of securing the meeting for 1917 in Chicago and had personally offered to interest himself in aid of the convention if held there. Mr. Head spoke of the great opportunities that are opening up in the west for the younger men in the profession and that the older western gardeners are ready to extend a helping hand to them. Favorable action on his invitation to come to Chicago, he said, would not only be appreciated by himself personally, but by Mr. Armour as well. Mr. Head's remarks were loudly applauded and on motion the executive committee's previous decision to hold the convention in Chicago in 1917 was endorsed. J. Barnett, of Sewickley, Pa., announced that Pittsburgh would be a candidate for the 1918 convention.

On a motion made by William Kleinheinz it was unanimously voted to elect William F. Gude an honorary member of the association in appreciation of the many courtesies extended the visiting gardeners to Washington through his efforts.

To enable the convention party to make an automobile tour of the interesting points about Washington at eleven o'clock as was planned by the local hosts, it was voted to suspend the regular order of business until the evening session so as to permit Dr. F. L. Mulford, of the United States department of agriculture, to address the morning meeting before its adjournment. Dr. Mulford spoke of the experimental work which is being conducted at the Arlington experimental farm and referred to some of the experiments with hardy chrysanthemums to improve them so as to give a greater variety that may be successfully grown in more northern sections. He also spoke of the rose test garden, conducted in co-operation with the American Rose Society, where some 700 varieties of roses are now growing and of the large collection of peonies that have been gathered through co-operation with the American Peony Society. Dr. Mulford stated that the department of agriculture also sought the co-operation of the gardeners as they could be of great assistance to it as the department wants specific information from different sections of the country at times that would be of greatest use in its researches.

Following the address by Dr. Mulford, the session adjourned to meet again at eight o'clock in the evening, and the visitors entered the waiting automobiles, in which they were conveyed through Potomac park, around the Lincoln memorial, and across the river to Arlington cemetery and to the old Lee mansion, which is of much historic interest. The Arlington farm of the department of agriculture was next visited, where the various matters referred to by Dr. Mulford at the morning session were pointed out. Fort Meyer was then visited and on back through Georgetown and out to the bureau of standards, where a highly interesting demonstration of liquid air was witnessed, which proved most entertaining to all. The automobile party then proceeded to Rock Creek park and to the National Soldier's home, returning to the hotel at three o'clock where they became luncheon guests of William F. Gude. At the conclusion of the luncheon, the party re-entered the automobiles and visited some of the large commercial growing establishments near Washington, returning to headquarters at dusk.

TUESDAY EVENING SESSION.

The evening session was called to order by William Kleinheinz, who occupied the chair in the absence of President Craig, who was recalled to Massachusetts in the afternoon. The secretary's report, showing an increase in the membership of nearly three hundred and the suspension of one hundred and thirty-two delinquent members for non-payment of dues, was read and approved. The treasurer's report, showing a balance in bank of $2,094, was well received. Reports were submitted by the national co-operative committee, William N. Craig, chairman; committee on meritorious exhibits, William Kleinheinz, chairman; committee on bird protection and propagation, L. P. Jensen, chairman, all indicating activity within the association and containing many recommendations, some of which were adopted.

The election of officers was next in order, which resulted as follows: Thomas W. Head, president, Lake Forest, Ill.; Theodore Wirth, vice-president, Minneapolis, Minn.; M. C. Ebel, secretary, Madison, N. J.; James Stuart, treasurer, Mamaroneck, N. Y. Trustees for the year 1917: William Kleinheinz, John F. Huss, William Turner, William Duckham, Peter Duff. Following the election of officers a general discussion occurred on the adoption of a button for the association. It was voted to defer action until a future time. The printing of the proceedings of the annual meeting, yearly reports of committees, etc., in special pamphlet form was moved, but owing to the present high cost of publication, it was decided to defer action on it.

The lack of interest in the essay contests, which necessitated postponing both the 1915 and 1916 contest, was discussed at length and it was suggested that if future contests were conducted on similar lines to those of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, interest in them would be increased. The matter was referred to the committee on essays and horticultural instruction.

Dr. F. L. Mulford again addressed the evening session with an entertaining account of the work of the department of plant industry and extended an invitation to the members to visit the various departments and greenhouses of the department of agriculture. The invitation was accepted with thanks.

Following the appointment of Thomas W. Head, John W. Everitt and Anton Bauer, a committee on final resolutions, the meeting adjourned.

WEDNESDAY'S PROGRAM.

On Wednesday morning the convention party visited the United States botanic gardens, where they were received by George W. Hess, superintendent, and escorted through the grounds and conservatories. After the inspection of the botanic garden the party proceeded to the dock of the Mt. Vernon Steamboat Company and boarded a steamer for Mt. Vernon. Arriving at Mt. Vernon, the wreath was placed on Washington's tomb with a few fitting remarks by Ex-President Kleinheinz, who officiated in the absence of President Craig. The home of Washington was next visited, where the party was photographed, and after an inspection of the grounds, the steamer was boarded for the return trip to Washington. Arriving at Washington, the capitol was visited and the senate, the house of representatives and the United States supreme court were each in turn seen in session. Following a visit to the congressional library, the party proceeded to the department of agriculture, where an inspection of the greenhouses and other departments proved of much interest.

The general interest in the business sessions, the cordial hospitality of William F. Gude, George W. Hess, and their colleagues among the florists and other business men of Washington, together with the ideal weather, made the 1916 convention of the National Association of Gardeners a pronounced success.

Boston.

GOOD SALES AT HIGH PRICES.

Business during the past week has been very good. Prices on all lines of stock have been at a high figure, and flowers are by no means scarce, but the business each day consumes the supply and very little is left over from day to day. Roses have been going at good prices; the average seems to be from two cents to 16 cents, but an average of around four cents for the daily cut, which is being realized, is very good. Carnations are rather scarce as a whole, although some growers are in heavy crop; $4 per 100 is the average price, although fancy varieties bring more. Chrysanthemums have passed their season and are scarce, selling at good prices. Bonnaffon and White Bonnaffon are the leading varieties. There is a good demand for pompons, but there are but few growers fortunate enough to have them. Paper White narcissus is seen in small quantities and finds a good market. Stevia also is going well at satisfactory price. Yellow marguerites are scarce and sell well at from $1 to $4 per 100. Greens is the only line of stock for which the demand has not increased to such a marked degree, as stevia is used to a great extent in their place. The florist supply houses report exceptionally brisk trade on Christmas goods. From the general aspect of the business, market and greenhouse conditions of crops, it may be assumed that for the next three or four months there will be a good market for flowers.

NOTES.

J. A. Nelson of Framingham starts on December 18 for Florida, where he will remain for a three-months' visit. His carnations are of very high quality at present and he is cutting a large amount of blooms. One of the features of his place is the sweet peas, which he trains up the pipe posts in his carnation house. They are among the best seen in the city.

P. Welch is receiving a fine assortment of cut flowers. His American Beauties are exceptionally fine. All of his stock seems to be in prime condition. His supply of lily of the valley, which has been so regular throughout the season, has gained him the reputation of being headquarters for this scarce article.

John Barr, of South Natick, is cutting a heavy crop of exceptionally fine carnations at present. He shipped about 12,000 blooms during the past week. His Pink Delight, Ward, Good Cheer and Matchless are especially worthy of note. He also has Nancy, which is looking very fine.

The Worcester Conservatories, which are conducted by L. A. Midgely, have 6,000 feet of glass devoted to Christmas White chrysanthemums, which will be just right for the holiday trade.

R. P. Peterson, of Saxonville, has a very fine strain of wallflowers from which he is making regular shipments. His snapdragons are looking well and he soon will be cutting a good crop.

A. Walsh, Wm. McAlpin and J. Gehren have been in New Hampshire deer hunting for a few days. At the present writing no report of their luck is at hand.

Alexander Porter, of Woburn, has started cutting on a house of Bonnaffon and expects to have a good crop for Christmas.

SUPPLY BUSINESS GOOD.

Business in Christmas decorative material and holiday supplies is good, but at the time of this writing, there is not the firmness to the flower business that there might be. Stock is plentiful and fully able to take care of all present needs. Heavy advance orders for Christmas are coming in rapidly. Roses, particularly choice ones, are in a heavy supply. Carnations are plentiful. Enough Easter lilies and callas may be had to satisfy all present needs. Double and single violets, orchids, lily of the valley and sweet peas are all in a fair supply. Other offerings include a fair crop of Paper White narcissus and stevia and some chrysanthemums. The first poinsettias are expected this week.

NOTES.

J. A. Peterson & Sons have an excellent assortment of plants for their Christmas trade. Their Cyclamen giganteum plants are well sold up at the time of this writing, while their begonias, including Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Mellor and Glory of Cincinnati, are in excellent condition and enjoy the good demand their quality merits. Besides this, they are shipping quite a few Asplenium nidus avis and Adiantum Farleyense.

E. A. Forter has put his new violet-colored delivery truck into commission. As it travels the streets it presents a very attractive appearance and should prove a good advertisement to its owner.

C. E. Critchell has been booking many large orders for green and bronze leucothoe for Christmas and holiday trade.

P. J. Olinger has as his guest Fred Funk of Emerado, N. D.

Visitors: Fred Brueggemann, manager of P. J. Olinger's greenhouses, New Castle, Ind.; William Gardner, Richmond, Ind.; C. P. Brunner, Springfield, Ohio; Jos. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; L. F. Benson and wife, Indianapolis, Ind.; E. J. Lampert, Xenia, O.; Mrs. J. J. Lambert, Xenia, O.; W. G. Kieffner, Dayton, O.; Ike Bayersdorfer of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., New York.

Holyoke and Northampton Club.

The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held at Gallivan Bros. greenhouses, Smith's Ferry, December 5, President Butler in the chair. There was a good attendance and the meeting was a lively one, several interesting matters coming up for discussion. Chief interest centered in the election of officers, which resulted as follows: George Strugnell, president; H. E. Downer, vice-president; James Whiting, secretary (re-elected for the fourth time). The secretary's report showed the club to be in a flourishing condition, with steady progress from year to year. K. B. Ullman, F. D. Keyes and D. J. Gallivan were elected to the executive board. Three new names were also added to the membership list.

New York Notes.

Hanft Brothers, 692 Madison avenue, are showing excellent features, both in cut flowers and plants, and report good business. Though, as a matter of course, the personnel of this firm has changed, it is the oldest in the city, having been established in 1848.

At the store of the Boulevard Floral Co., 2391 Broadway, we have recently noticed a fine arrangement of plants in variety, in baskets and hampers.

Albert Roethke, a designer and decorator, formerly with Thomas Young, Jr., is now with A. T. Bunyard, 413 Madison avenue.

John Waibel, buyer for Fred Stewig, 940 Sixth avenue, is rejoicing over a third boy that has joined his family.

Riedel & Meyer, Inc., 49 West 28th street, are handling a fine quality of pink and white snapdragon.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Members of the florists' club were present in considerable numbers at the December meeting on account of the annual election taking place. Those chosen to direct the affairs of the club through 1917 are: Charles Sanders, president; John J. Hagerty, vice president; Robert Davidson, secretary-treasurer; R. W. Bilson, Alfred Jenkins, and Frank Williams, trustees for two years. William Newport, chairman of the committee on exhibits, presented a schedule for a flower show to be held by the club in its rooms on the night of February 1, the date of the regular meeting. The schedule provides for eight classes of rose exhibits and nine of carnations. The members having other plants or flowers that they believe meritorious were asked to bring them for exhibition. It was announced that the new officers will be installed on the evening of January 4. The business meeting will be followed by a dinner at Keeler's restaurant, State street. The arrangements were left in the hands of the entertainment committee. Three visitors present spoke briefly on trade conditions: Ralph M. Ward of New York, the lily specialist; Julius Berg, a ribbon salesman, and H. P. Hodgkins, who travels this territory for Fottler, Fiske & Rawson Co., of Boston. The three reported the outlook for the holidays excellent and advised the local retailers, that on account of the increasing prices of materials and supplies, they will have to advance their prices. Mr. Hodgkins pointed out that the Boston Thanksgiving market showed a decided increase in prices over those prevailing a year ago.

Louisville, Ky.

H. G. Walker has returned from Montgomery, Ala., where he called upon the proprietors of the Rosemont Gardens, and reports cuttings of carnations going on at the rate of 2,000 to 3,000 per day. Mock roses seen here are in fine condition. While the local trade was reported slow, shipping business to points in Texas and Florida within a radius of 700 miles was said to be exceptionally good.

The death of Professor Ernest Walker, at Bolling, Ala., which is recorded in our obituary column this week, caused profound regret among a wide circle of friends in this city, where he was well known.

The electrical exposition in this city called for quite a number of plants and some cut flowers which were used in the decorations for the booths.

The delivery auto of the Wm. Walker Co. was nearly demolished recently when the chauffeur tried to avoid running over a pedestrian.

Several shipments of azaleas were found to be frozen upon arrival. Some bay trees were also found in bad condition.

There has been a good demand for specimen evergreens for planting in this city and vicinity.

Holly is being received in this city but the quality is only poor or medium.

SUPPLY LIMITED AND PRICES HIGHER.

Local florists are anticipating a big Christmas trade. All indications point to a shorter supply than in former years and prices are expected to be higher in proportion. Great preparations have been made by both wholesalers and retailers and much interest is being taken in the plant section. Although azaleas are short of supply many other varieties have been grown to take their place. Cyclamens are plentiful and fine in quality and the same can be said regarding poinsettias. Ferns have sold well this fall but there still seems an ample supply.

CLUB MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club was largely attended. The several reports submitted showed the organization to be in a flourishing condition financially and otherwise. The present officers were re-elected. They are W. C. Cotter, president; R. Scott and J. J. Trevis, vice-presidents; W. H. Horobin, secretary-treasurer; J. Luck, assistant. Executive committee: E. J. Hayward, D. McDonald, H. J. Eddy, A. J. Bowles, G. A. Robinson and W. J. Smith. Sick visitation committee: W. R. Whiting, J. Walsh and W. S. Watts.

The annual dinner was held December 9 at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, about 66 being in attendance, among the out-of-town guests being I. Cassidy of Georgetown and J. McKee of Ottawa. Wm. Cotter officiated as toastmaster. Among the speakers were Ald. St. Germaine, E. J. Hayward, A. J. Bowles, W. C. Hall and C. A. Smith. There was quite an array of talent on hand, the menu was excellent and the dinner was a splendid success in every way. Much credit is due President Cotter and the dinner committee, who worked untiringly.

TRADE BETTER THAN IN FORMER YEARS.

Thanksgiving business was better this year than it has been for several years past. All florists in this city report an excellent demand and the supply has been plentiful. There has been an ample supply of carnations in addition to a big stock of poinsettias, something unusual at this time of the year. Orchids were in good supply, but lily of the valley was few and far between. There is a feeling of genuine prosperity abroad. This was noticeable both among dealers and customers.

NOTES.

Wright's Flower Shop, Inc., has been loaded down with excellent stock. The roses have been superb and the American Beauties were all that could be desired. Gardenias, and about the only lily of the valley to be seen, were in evidence here. Business was very good.

S. Murata & Co. did an excellent Thanksgiving business. This firm is soon to add a seed department, their object being to supply clover and other seeds, fertilizers and a general line of supplies to the trade only.

The Redondo Floral Co. is one of the busy places in the city. A nice general stock is seen here and some especially fine Appleton chrysanthemums were featured. Sales in all lines have been good.

O. C. Saakes reports business good in all departments. A 10-foot horse-shoe of red and white carnations and red and blue cornflowers was designed by his force recently for the Ascot park auto races.

The establishment of the Broadway Florists was one of the busiest in the city, six salesmen being kept constantly on the jump. The location of this store, on Broadway, is quite an asset.

J. W. Wolters went after his share of the Thanksgiving business and got it, no doubt. He is always well to the front with something attractive in the way of novelties.

Wolfskill Bros. & Morris Goldenson had a clever window decoration, a large horn-of-plenty being filled almost to bursting with a large variety of floral offerings.

The Germain Seed & Plant Co. reports an excellent trade in bulbs, although part of the imports were late in arriving, some of which were in poor condition.

Seki Bros. & Co. have been busy with decorations. They had a fine stock of poinsettias and chrysanthemums and report very good business.

The supply of chrysanthemums and outdoor carnations at Seki Bros. & Co. is diminishing, but they have several greenhouses to draw from.

Howard & Smith had an attractively arranged salesroom and appeared to be getting their full share of the Thanksgiving trade.

The California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co. has opened a retail store at 433 West Seventh street and are doing a nice business.

The Germain Seed & Plant Co. is busy in all departments.

Theodore Payne is now driving his own car.

The Late Professor Ernest Walker.

Professor Ernest Walker, former horticulturist of the state of Alabama, noted botanist and writer, died at Bolling, Ala., December 5, following a short illness. He was 54 years of age.

Professor Walker was born at Brownstown, Ind., in 1862. He attended De Pauw University, did graduate work at Harvard and Cornell, and was later associated with Dr. L. H. Bailey at the latter institution, where he began as a teacher. For several years he was superintendent of the F. Walker Co., Louisville, Ky., before he took the chair of horticulture at Clemson College, S. C. In 1893, he took the chair of horticulture at Auburn, Ala., and was also state horticulturist until September of the present year at which time he resigned to become associated with development work at Bolling. He was also secretary of the Arkansas Horticultural Society for a number of years. He made a close study of plant diseases, insects and soils, one of his discoveries being a method of eliminating smut on rice. During his residence in Arkansas he put many orchards on a paying basis through his advice and maintained an experimental orchard near Fayetteville, that state, to show proper methods of culture.

Professor Walker is survived by his widow, two sons and one daughter, his mother, Mrs. Mary E. Walker, of New Albany, Ind.; and the following brothers and sisters: F. I. Walker, of Chicago; Ferd G. Walker and Herbert G. Walker, of Louisville, Ky.; Rev. J. M. Walker, Clarence Walker and Earl C. Walker, and the Misses Annie and Harriett Walker, of New Albany, Ind. The remains were laid to rest at Auburn, Ala., December 9. Many handsome floral tributes bore evidence of the high respect in which he was held far and near.

THE FLORISTS' TELEGRAPH DELIVERY has issued a very attractive new show card for the use of its members.

ALL students at the Massachusetts Agricultural College are being placed in retail stores for the holiday season.

FLORISTS are beginning to learn that Paper White narcissus as small as 11-centimeters have been delivered to them on their orders for 13-centimeters and up. Care should be exercised in checking such scarce stocks on arrival.

Personal.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., left December 8 on a two weeks' tour of the south.

American Gladiolus Society.

The members of the American Gladiolus Society, by a large majority vote, have chosen New York as the place for holding the annual show in 1917, the date to be the same as that of the annual convention of the Society of American Florists, namely, August 21-24. The exhibition will be held in the Museum building of the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park. The premium list will be the largest ever offered by the society. Secretary Henry Youell, 538 Cedar street, Syracuse, N. Y., hopes to issue the preliminary schedule in January.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

The following new anemone chrysanthemums have been registered by Mrs. Frances G. Lloyd, Bernardsville, N. J.:

Mrs. Frances G. Lloyd—Pure white anemone on the order of Garza, but a larger flower, wider petals and considerably taller in growth.

Mrs. Owen Winston—Clear yellow with bright orange center, outer petals perfectly straight; plant a strong grower, tall and healthy habit.

Mrs. Charles S. Whitman—Lavender pink with center of light cream yellow; an exceptionally fine quality.

REPORTS OF EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

Cincinnati, Ohio, December 2, 1916.
—December Queen, yellow, shaded bronze, Jap incurved, scored 89 points commercial; The Crest, white anemone, scored 85 points. Exhibited by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.
CHAS. W. JOHNSON, Sec'y.

Hail Reminiscences.

Immediately following the incorporation of the Florists' Hail Association in 1887, the writer was rather unfortunate with a noted Pittsburgh, Pa. florist to obtain insurance upon his glass, believing the prestige of the use of his name would be of value to the then struggling association. The reply invariably was, "There has not been a hail storm at Pittsburgh in 35 years." Yet within a few years thereafter the Florists' Hail Association paid three losses on a Pittsburgh risk in one year, and in one of the storms the gentleman referred to above, had to use an empty box to protect himself from falling glass until he reached a place of safety.

Another florist who was frequently solicited to aid the Florists' Hail Association was the late J. L. Dillon of Bloomsburg, Pa. Mr. Dillon insisted on carrying his own risk, and on two occasions sustained heavy loss. After his death, the estate insured their greenhouses, and hail has not been heard of at Bloomsburg since. The moral of the latter incident is—insure your glass before the storm catches you.
JOHN G. ESLER.

Control of Plant Diseases.

The following is taken from Report of the Secretary of Agriculture for 1916:

"It is very clear that fuller knowledge of the distribution and the nature and methods of control of crop diseases is essential. In some seasons, when unusual climatic conditions prevail at critical periods, diseases greatly lessen or practically destroy particular crops throughout important producing districts. Progress has been made in determining their exact character and in developing methods of control, but the destructiveness of certain diseases under climatic conditions favorable to their spread necessitates still more energetic inquiry. It has been estimated that in years when cereal rusts are epidemic the losses from them alone amount at least to $180,000,000. No effective remedies have yet been found for these diseases. It seems probable, however, that through the development of suitable resistant varieties their eventual control in large part can be effected. Distinct headway has been made in the study of diseases of fruits and vegetables. Many of them have proved amenable to spray control, especially when combined with rational field practice to prevent infection."

Paper White Cut Flower Prices.

Prices on cut flowers of Paper White narcissus are reported as follows, December 10:

St. Louis, Mo.—Not selling as well as last year. Were compelled to cut prices from $2.50 and $3 to $2. Other stock fairly plentiful which reduces demand for narcissus.

Cincinnati, O.—Supply above normal. Price $2 to $3, mostly at the lower rate. Booking for Christmas at $3 to $4.

Chicago.—Supply large, fancy stock bringing $1 to $2 per 100.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Normal supply at $2.50 to $3.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Scarce, bringing $4 to date.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Three dollars, yellows $4.

New York.—About $2 per 100.

Air Mail Service.

Tentatively under consideration, in connection with the proposed appropriation of $100,000 for experimental aerial mail service by the Government, is a plan for regular aeroplane mail service between New York and Chicago. Officers of the postoffice department have discussed the present possibilities of aerial mail transportation with American representatives of the science of aerial navigation and are assured that New York-Chicago service is practicable. It is estimated that the trips can be made in from six to 14 hours, depending upon the wind and that the average running time for the 720 miles (air line) between the two largest American cities would be eight hours.

Benjamin Hammond Mayoralty Nominee.

The Fishkill Standard of December 2, announces that Benjamin Hammond, the well-known insecticide and paint manufacturer, of Beacon, N. Y., has consented to enter the mayoralty race in that city and will be the republican nominee at the February primaries. The Standard pays high compliment to Mr. Hammond's qualifications to see that the city has an economical and efficient administration.

Lord & Burnham Changes.

M. C. Wright, for the past six years manager for the Lord & Burnham Co.'s Philadelphia and southern territory, will go to Chicago, January 1, 1917, as manager of sales. C. C. McDermott, for the past three years manager of the company's Canadian sales, will succeed Mr. Wright at Philadelphia.

BUSINESS GENERALLY GOOD.

There is nothing exciting to report in regard to market conditions for the past week. Business locally was good, while the shipping trade continued brisk. The supply in roses and carnations was about equal to the demand at moderate prices. The warm weather conditions, which prevailed up to December 7, were ushered out by a severe rain and a thunder storm had its bad effects, making all the cut stock soft; since then we have had snow and much colder weather. This was beneficial in so much that a clean-up was the rule by Saturday evening. The few chrysanthemums that still come in do not cut much of a figure. From present indications the rose and carnation supply will be, with favorable weather, about normal. There is plenty of good stevia now to meet all demands.

NOTES.

The color effect at the auditorium for the charity ball was, for a change, green only. The stage represented a woods, where suppers were served. On the main floor, directly in front of the stage, a large space set aside for the musicians, was surrounded by a formal cedar hedge about seven feet high. The ceiling decoration consisted of a large star, which measured 88 feet from tip to tip, composed of green cheese cloth and wild smilax interspersed by shaded electric globes. The balcony was also festooned with wild smilax. It took about a half ton of cedar clippings to carry out the plans.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. again has its usual fine lot of pot plants for the Christmas trade, but with a brisk demand they expect to be cleaned up before the final rush is over. They, like the Holton & Hunkel Co., are having their troubles with the arrival of imported stock, some of which is far late, and secondly, damaged by frost, etc. We predict it will take some time and trouble to get these matters adjusted satisfactorily.

From a reliable source we are informed that the supply locally of Pochontas coal, which is largely used by greenhouse men in this vicinity, is not very large, prices quoted now being $7.00 per ton, against $3.75 to $4.00 paid in the last few years. Do and will the price of cut flowers and plants help to offset this one item in the higher cost of production?

Owing to the inclement weather the attendance at the florists' club meeting on December 7 was not largely attended. The following were elected to serve during 1917: Wm. Kennedy, president; Henry W. Kummer, vice-president; James Livingston, treasurer; Eugene Oestreicher, secretary. Trustee for three years, Wm. R. Schroeder.

Alfred Schiller, who underwent a serious operation for stomach trouble, just about a year ago, on November 27, again had to undergo the same ordeal at St. Joseph's hospital. Reports at the time of writing are that he is getting along nicely.

At Gust Rusch & Co.'s, they report shipping trade better than local sales. The Cudahy Floral Co., who consigns to them, expect to have a nice cut of roses in variety for the holidays. Their Killarney look especially promising at this time.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports that it has a choice lot of pot plants, consisting of poinsettias, cyclamens, azaleas, begonias, etc., ready for the Christmas trade; they are somewhat better than they ever had them before.

Hugo Lockner & Sons, at Wauwatosa, Wis., are consigning choice sweet peas and snapdragons to the local market daily.

SUPPLY SHORT AND PRICES ADVANCE.

The prices of nearly all kinds of stock continue on the up-grade. Business is excellent, but there is quite a shortage of a lot of stock. Roses have dropped into line and are now very scarce with prices rather high, Russell and American Beauty being especially scarce. From present indications it will be two weeks before the supply becomes normal again, if it ever does. The only rose that seems to be in ample supply is Cecil Brunner. Lily of the valley is not to be had in any quantity. What little stock arrives is snapped up eagerly. Orchids, too, are very scarce with not nearly enough to go around. In fact, it has been a long time since the supply of the above mentioned flowers has been so short. Carnations, in common with other flowers, have advanced sharply, with the demand steady. There is also quite a good call for them from the shippers. Some splendid Pink Perfection and Gorgeous are arriving. Matchless is also improving in length of stem and is proving a fine seller. With the decline in the supply of other stock, violets have leaped into favor and enormous quantities are now being shipped out of the city. Gardenias are scarce and hard to locate. A very few good chrysanthemums, chiefly Nonin and Bonnafon, are arriving and are quickly disposed of. These come from a few isolated spots where the frost did not hit. The chief supply of chrysanthemums is now coming from the Chinese growers along the peninsula. This is usually the cheapest stock on the market, but this year it is all that is to be had, and consequently the oriental growers are reaping a harvest. As a rule the stock is all short stemmed and the blooms are very small. The heavy frosts still continue without abatement. All sorts of pot plants are much more eagerly sought for now that flowers are so scarce. Some grand looking cyclamens and begonias are coming in regularly and are moving well. There is every indication that the Thanksgiving business will be away head of former years. The supply will be the only difficulty with which the florists will have to contend. There are enough of greens of all kinds to supply the demand, but nothing is in over supply.

NOTES.

Stanford University Arboretum has just come into possession of the finest and most complete collection of botanical specimens of southern California in existence. This is the collection of S. B. Parish, the noted authority and collector of San Bernardino. Mr. Parish, who is now 77 years old, has been collecting the plants of the southern part of the state during his whole adult life, and since he was eager that his collection should remain in California, the Stanford Arboretum was enabled to acquire it for a good sum. The collection comprises about 50,000 specimens gathered and identified by this recognized authority of southern California flora. The arboretum already has a very fine collection in the "Dudley Herbarium," which has been enlarged and supplemented by the members of the botany department, and this will enrich the representation of southern California plant life contained in the new acquisition. The actual work of planting the different units of the arboretum is progressing rapidly.

The California State Floral Society held a large meeting November 17 at Red Men's hall. Various horticultural subjects were discussed at length and the matter of holding a show next spring was also under consideration.

One remarkable feature of the recent killing frosts which disposed of the chrysanthemums so early in the season was the behavior of that grand new chrysanthemum, Marigold. The writer has noticed that while every other variety was killed, this variety has come through absolutely unharmed. This occurred among a number of growers. Can it be that this variety is the forerunner of a race of chrysanthemums that will withstand a hard freeze? This fact is surely going to add to its well entrenched popularity.

Publication of a complete and authoritative work of "The Flora of the Pacific Coast" has been authorized by the Stanford University trustees, and a fund has been established to enable Prof. Leroy Abrams of the botanical department to make this the best work of its kind ever published. Prof. Abrams will work with the co-operation of Dr. Nathaniel Lord Britton, the eminent botanist. It is expected that the undertaking will occupy probably 10 years.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, who is a frequent visitor, was in town several days during the week. He says the recent flower show was a splendid success and promises a great show next year. He reports the cold wave as having disastrous effects on all outdoor stock, chrysanthemums being the worst sufferers. A. Navlet reports a loss of over $1,000 worth of chrysanthemums alone.

Carl Horn, of the landscape department of the University of Nevada, at Reno, was a visitor during the early part of the week. He reports that our old friend, Jake Michon, is now in charge of the range of glass at the university and has everything looking in splendid shape.

Growers who depend upon Utah and Colorado for their coal supply are experiencing much difficulty in getting their orders filled. In one instance, seven cars ordered last May have not put in appearance as yet.

Chas. A. Stappenback, on Polk street, reports business as being very good in his section of town, the only difficulty being to get sufficient stock. He has a splendid line of pot plants for Thanksgiving trade.

Manager J. A. Axell, of the E. N. McLellan Co., reports that the large daily cut of roses cleans up well. He reports also that the shipping demand is fully up to the standard of former seasons.

John McLaren is preparing plans for the planting of the esplanade at the ocean beach. When finally completed this will be one of the finest pieces of work of its kind in this country.

President Craig, of the National Association of Gardeners, has appointed Percy Ellings, of Menlo Park, on the publicity committee for the coming convention at Washington, D. C.

The Hillsborough Nurseries are sending in a fine cut of American Beauties. All the rose houses of this concern are in the best of shape and a heavy cut is looked for from now on.

A. Thorsted, of the Thorsted Floral Co., of Oakland, slipped quietly away and was married a few days ago. He is spending a honeymoon in the southern part of the state.

PREPARED FOR BIG HOLIDAY TRADE.

Thanksgiving has past leaving behind the memory of a fine trade in which the chrysanthemums played an important part, but they are now about to see their finish. All thoughts are now for the coming holiday season and extensive preparations are being made. The supply will be both beautiful and abundant and each and every grower is prepared to meet all demands. Trade during the past few weeks has been very satisfactory, there being the usual quota of debuts, receptions, weddings and funerals, with the result that each day's supply is well taken up by the demand. Shipments of azaleas which have been in transit since September 26 have been received by local growers and have been found to be much damaged in consequence. To have them in for the Christmas trade is entirely out of the question. But there will be plenty of fine plants as substitutes and there is little doubt that everything in the way of plants will sell at good figures. The stock of fancy baskets and ornamental pots and pans will be unusually good. While roses are coming on in good shape there will be no surplus of American Beauty. The quality, however, will be fine.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. have a fine stock coming on that will be just right for the holiday trade—as fine a variety of both cut flowers and plants as has ever been seen in this market. Business has been very good with them in general and they anticipate a record breaking holiday trade. They have made some improvements that add to the attractiveness of their store.

McIntyre Bros., as usual, have fine stock for the holiday season. Among other choice offerings they will have as a feature some splendid orchids. Their up-town greenhouse is proving a great convenience in handling stock for sale and for storage of holiday plants. The display feature also brings about many sales.

Harold Joy, who has had much experience in greenhouse management under his father, the late Thomas C. Joy, whose assistant he was, as well as in some of the largest growing establishments in the north, has taken charge of the Joy Floral Co.'s range and will direct the management of this end of the business.

The Joy Floral Co. has a tremendous stock this year and the large orders being booked in advance indicate a large volume of trade coming their way. In addition to an abundance of cut flowers they will be well supplied with pot plants.

Haury & Sons have good flowers of all the seasonal varieties. Their windows are always attractive and they are enjoying a good business.

BUSINESS VERY SATISFACTORY.

Trade conditions in this city are very good at this time. While no very big business is expected before the first of the year, there is a feeling of expectancy and a condition of preparedness. Many of the florists here have arranged for new stocks of baskets for the holiday trade but there has been more or less disappointment in the failure of azaleas to arrive, in many cases the orders not being filled. Cyclamen and other plants are in good supply.

NOTES.

Plans for the greatest rose tournament ever held in this city are being made and the public is looking forward to a wonderful floral display.

Eldred's Flower Shop has changed its location, having moved to 260 East Colorado avenue, opposite the new postoffice. The new location is an improvement in every way. A varied assortment of fancy baskets and vases has been added to the stock. Business is good.

Thomas Chisholm of the Pasadena Nursery Co., has returned from a visit to Portland and Seattle, Wash., and reports business at both places very good this season. This firm does a big business in Christmas trees. Stock at this establishment looks very good.

Siebrecht's House of Flowers recently had its formal opening in the Hotel Maryland annex, and is now ready for business. If there is anything in location, this establishment should enjoy a good trade.

The store force at the Orchid Flower Shop are in good spirits. They have a new stock of baskets just received for the holiday trade. Some fine orchid seedlings were seen here; also fine foliage plants.

DETROIT, MICH.—The range of Jerome K. Stock, 518 West Warren street, escaped serious damage by fire, December 4, due to quick work on the part of the fire department. Part of the shed was destroyed but no damage was done to greenhouses or stock.

Los Angeles County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held in its new quarters in the Times assembly rooms, First street and Broadway, December 6, the feature of the evening being a lecture on "Landscape Gardening for the Moderate Home," by James M. Grant, who handled his subject in a most entertaining manner, showing conscientiousness and earnestness in his work. Questions were asked and liberally answered and discussed. The attendance was above the average and many new faces were seen, which shows continued interest in the society and its efforts.

Our meetings in the past few months have been unfortunately marred by having a member who will persist in hackling the speakers. Officers of the society have tried to eliminate this but have been unsuccessful and would be glad to hear from other organizations who have had the same problem to solve and if they were successful how they managed to accomplish same. While no doubt there is bound to be a difference in opinion in the matter of proper methods of cultivation of plants, etc., and the exchange of views is a splendid advantage, but useless hackling is a detriment to the welfare of our cause and we are very anxious to eradicate this.

At a recent meeting of the executive committee, a vigorous campaign was decided upon to interest the owner of the moderate home and a series of subjects selected to offer at the regular meetings which will be handled by capable speakers and the outlook is for a most successful winter season. All who attend are sure to profit.

FRANK LEWIN, Chairman.

PLACE YOUR CHRISTMAS ORDERS EARLY.

Business the past week has been fairly good, with plenty of stock of all kinds to go around. The shipping trade particularly, has been unusually brisk, but the city demand has been nothing to speak of. The chrysanthemum season is about done and while there is some stock still being offered, the supply as a whole is not very large. Lily of the valley and orchids are having a good call and the same applies to gardenias and American Beauty roses, which are none too plentiful. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are reaching the market in splendid condition and are cleaning up nicely at satisfactory prices, considering the general market conditions. The demand for stock in general the past week has been principally for red, with pink next and no call to speak of for white except for funeral orders. Everybody is now devoting their attention to the Christmas business and the supply houses in particular are very enthusiastic over the outlook for the holidays and have had an unusually busy week looking after the mail orders and taking care of the wants of the many visitors who have called the last few days. The wholesale plantmen are having a very heavy call for stock and many of the larger dealers have already sold out their entire supply of begonias, cyclamens and poinsettias and have only a few azaleas left to offer. The demand for foliage plants has been good, owing to the scarcity of blooming stock, and it is seldom that the local dealers have sold out Christmas plants so early in the season as they have this year. Azaleas are not as plentiful as they were in other years for Christmas, which accounts for the cleanup in begonias, cyclamens and poinsettias. With the greater part of the plants already disposed of there promises to be a heavy demand for cut flowers and this seems to hold good for the territory in general that depends upon the Chicago market for its supply for many large advance orders from out-of-town have been placed and there have been numerous inquiries for price lists, which all points to good business. The Christmas supply of cut flowers will be as large, if not larger, than ever this year, but the warm weather the past few weeks has hurried along some of the stock and a visit to the leading greenhouse establishments finds the outlook for large crops very promising, but with favorable weather and the usual demand, a cleanup in all lines can be expected. Those who took advantage of the tip that was given in the market report in this paper for Thanksgiving found it to be to their advantage and the result was exactly as predicted and that was a grand cleanup in all lines. Everyone will do well to place their orders as early as possible, so as to secure their Christmas supply, for stock of all kinds, with possibly one or two exceptions, promises to be scarce, so look over the advertisements in this week's issue of THE AMERICAN FLORIST and send in your orders as early as possible. The prices quoted on stock in general are very reasonable, compared to former years, and nothing will be gained by holding off until the last minute, unless a lot of stock is shipped in here from other markets to be disposed of, which is not likely, with the exception of American Beauty roses from the east, which will not cut much figure compared to the fine home grown stock there will be offered. Here's hoping for the best and most satisfactory Christmas that was ever experienced.

NOTES.

Wietor Bros. will be in fine crop with both carnations and roses for Christmas, especially Richmond, Ophelia, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Sunburst, Killarney and Killarney Brilliant. In speaking of the holiday supply of American Beauty roses, N. J. Wietor says that his firm will have a large crop, but not as many flowers as he at first expected there would be. Orders are numerous for Christmas and he expects to witness a grand clean-up before the big rush is over.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is handling a large quantity of late chrysanthemums which are in good demand and are cleaning up nicely every day. Increasing business has forced Manager Klingsporn to put on additional help in the person of Fred Ottenbacher, who has been employed in the local market for a great many years.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. have a large quantity of California holly to supply their customers with for Christmas, which is in heavy demand for basket work. This firm will also be strong in all other stock, particularly American Beauty roses, cut poinsettias and orchids. Green goods of all kinds are also handled in quantity, including wild smilax.

At Percy Jones' store the stage is all set for a brisk Christmas business, and in addition to the regular line of stock a fancy grade of Mrs. Francis King gladioli and freesias will be offered. Carnations especially will be in large supply and so will all green goods, which are leaders here.

J. A. Budlong's store received a new coat of calcimine this week and everything at this establishment now presents a most inviting appearance. This firm is handling a large supply of choice red winterberries and will have its usual large supply of cut flowers to offer for the holidays.

Wm. Bluedorn, son of Herman Bluedorn, Eau Claire, Wis., who has been with the Third Wisconsin regiment as sergeant on the Mexican border since June 23, left for home this week to help out during the holiday rush. His regiment was mustered out of service December 14.

The A. L. Randall Co.'s supply department was very busy this week and the force had about all that it could do to handle the many orders that were booked. This firm's electric store fountain continues to be in brisk demand and many new styles are now carried in stock.

Zech & Mann report business as good, with the outlook very encouraging for Christmas. Stock of all kinds will be in large supply with them and a large number of orders have already been booked. Jack Byers joined the sales force at this establishment this week.

Kennicott Bros. Co. have already booked a nice lot of orders for Christmas and new ones are arriving in almost every mail. The shipping trade started off with a rush at this house this week when several new customers were added to the list.

M. C. Gunterberg expects to have her usual supply of double violets for Christmas if the weather is at all favorable from now on, for her growers report that the plants are covered with buds and all that is needed now is a little sunshine.

H. Munson, 1353 North Clark street, sold 72 second-hand boiler flues 18 feet long for $324 this week, which is about half of what a new set would cost and gives one some idea of the high cost of materials at present.

H. N. Bruns has returned from a trip to New York, where he inspected a large importation of valley pips which arrived in good condition and insures his supply for the coming season.

Sinner Bros. are cutting a nice supply of roses and carnations and will have plenty to supply their customers with for the holidays.

E. C. Pruner and wife celebrated their seventh wedding anniversary at their home at 2414 North Mozart street, Saturday evening, December 9, and it is needless to add that everyone present had a most enjoyable time. Among those present in the trade were W. D. Desmond, Minneapolis, Minn.; Ed. Goldenstein, Allie Zech, Fred Longren, T. E. Waters, E. A. Ollinger, Chas. Erne, George Mohn and J. Westpahl, Elizabeth. It was after midnight when the jolly party broke up and everyone agreed that Mr. and Mrs. Pruner are "some entertainers."

Kyle, is also an automobile fan and has a car of his own. Both gentlemen pay strict attention to business and are on the job early and late, and about the only recreation they have is when they take their families out for a spin on the boulevards after the store closes for the day.

The Raedlein Basket Co. has sixty basket makers turning out stock for the holidays, which will enable the firm to fill every order in full that may be booked for Christmas delivery. This firm has an unusually large supply of all styles in stock, particularly the popular holly, ruscus and boxwood basket. Increasing business has demanded the addition of a large basement space, 50x50 feet.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. will have a large supply of roses and carnations for Christmas, especially American Beauty, which will be in splendid crop with them. The supply department is having a heavy call for red and green frieze, waterproof crepe paper and Porto Rican mats, and have shipped considerable stock to eastern points the past week. The plant department at Morton Grove never had such a big demand for holiday plants and never experienced such a complete cleanup so early in the season as it has this year.

John Michelsen, George Asmus, Matt Mann, E. F. Kurowski and Fred. Lautenschlager visited the French & Salm greenhouses at Union Grove, Wis., Friday, December 9, and report the stock in excellent condition, with a large crop in right for Christmas. French & Salm's range is devoted exclusively to the growing of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses and their entire output is consigned to the E. C. Amling Co.

Peter Reinberg will be in full crop with Richmond roses for Christmas, according to Felix Reichling, who visited the greenhouses last week. Mrs. Chas. Russell and American Beauty roses will also be in large supply and so will all the other roses, but a grand cleanup in all lines is expected before the rush is over, for many orders have already been booked and more inquiries are arriving every day.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. will have a large supply of all seasonable stock for the holidays, especially roses and carnations, which are their leaders. The shipping trade promises to be exceptionally good, for many advance orders have already been booked. Mr. Pyfer says that H. E. Philpott will be here from Winnipeg to help out during the rush.

The George Witthold Co. will spend its first Christmas in its new retail store this year, which is, without question, the finest in the west. Everything is being rushed along and as soon as the conservatories are completed a grand showing of plants will be made from the firm's Edgebrook greenhouses.

F. M. Button and wife, of Lake Geneva, Wis., were in the city last week, doing their Christmas buying. Mr. Button has a new double pink and a new double red begonia, which he will have registered and probably exhibit at the January meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are showing yellow narcissus and will have a large quantity to supply their trade with at Christmas in addition to their regular line of other stock. The supply department is having a good call for holiday goods, particularly baskets and ruscus.

Miss Sadie Meyer, of Denver, Colo., and Marvin William Fisher were married in this city December 10 and are spending their honeymoon in Michigan. Mr. Fisher's many friends in the trade here wish him and his bride a long and safe journey on the sea of matrimony.

Bassett & Washburn are well pleased with the outlook for Christmas and will have a large quantity of stock to supply their customers with. This firm's new red carnation, Belle Washburn, is making a big hit at the store and will be in heavy demand for the holidays.

Fred Dietsch says that enquiries for greenhouse materials are numerous at A. Dietsch Company's office, but that the outlook for this coming season is very encouraging. This firm is preparing a new catalogue which will be ready for mailing in the near future.

Meyer & Dramm are cutting a fine supply of Hoosier Beauty roses and will be in good crop for the holidays. The E. C. Amling Co. handles their entire output and is finding a ready demand for them.

Erne & Klingel are handling regular shipments of orchids in addition to a large supply of choice roses and carnations. Everything points to a banner Christmas trade at this establishment.

Fritz Bahr has had eight men busy for some time planting shrubbery on Ed. Winterson's new property at Highland Park, and the work is pretty well along now.

It is rumored that John Evert will join the ranks of the benedicts in the near future, and probably before Christmas. Congratulations are in order.

BUSINESS SHOWS INCREASE OVER 1915.

Thanksgiving day business was up to the mark; in fact, showed a fair increase over last year's figures. The weather was ideal, mild and sunny, which filled the streets with buyers—and flowers sell best when people feel good. Chrysanthemums had first call, with roses and carnations about even for second place. The supply was generally adequate and quality good and prices were not advanced.

NOTES.

Business for November probably exceeded November, 1915, and the florists are thankful in these days of high cost of living and consequent conservative buying.

W. H. Culp & Co. found good sale for a nice lot of chrysanthemums in pots. They had a house of these come in just right for cutting for the week's trade.

Chas. P. Mueller showed some very nicely finished Begonia Cincinnati, and poinsettias.

C.

HAMLET, N. C.—H. D. Martin is looking for prices of greenhouse building materials with a view to engaging in commercial floriculture.

A LULL BEFORE CHRISTMAS RUSH.

The market has slowed up considerably in some lines but what stock is on hand is of good quality. Chrysanthemums are still seen, and the quality is good considering the late season, Bonnaffons especially, and wholesale from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Roses are quite plentiful and are priced from $4 per 100 up, with American Beauty moving at $4 and better per dozen. There are some very fine carnations and the quality is improving daily. Lilies are seen in large numbers. The supply of pot plants is getting larger day by day and good cyclamens, poinsettias, primroses and begonias, will from all reports be plentiful for the Christmas trade.

NOTES.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. has an excellent supply of pot plants, especially some well flowered azaleas. The cut flower stock at the greenhouses looks very promising. Manager Parker was hunting at Pleasant Hill last week and returned with 125 rabbits, one squirrel and a number of quail. We know they came from Pleasant Hill because the city market is at the opposite end of this city.

W. J. Barnes conducted a sale of baskets during the past week which was very successful. He will have a fine line of pot plants from his own range for the holidays; also, carnations, white and yellow narcissi and a good line of orchids and stevia. His begonias are showing very fine form. The force has been very busy preparing a large supply of wreaths in many varieties.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. was never before in such a state of perfect preparedness for the Christmas rush. At this establishment a full line of pot plants in all seasonable varieties are featured and a fine showing of fancy made up baskets is noteworthy.

H. Kusik & Co. report Christmas supplies are moving off with a rush and large quantities of ruscus and frieze have already been disposed of. This firm is handling 500 chrysanthemums daily in addition to roses, carnations and lilies in quantity.

The Rosery has been very busy with funeral work and some very good decorations. Manager Ellsworth will be prepared to supply his Christmas trade with some very fine cyclamens, azaleas, poinsettias, begonias and Dutch hyacinths.

Arthur Newell reports a drop in sales during the past week, but it has given him an excellent opportunity to complete preparations for his Christmas business which he anticipates will be the best in his history.

The Stuppy Floral Co., of St. Joseph, Mo., is shipping to this city some of the best cyclamens in large sizes that have been seen here for some time. Needless to say they sell readily.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a shortening in the supply of stock, especially carnations. This firm reports a record breaking business in Christmas supplies.

Samuel Murray is attracting attention to his artistic store with a splendid showing of Christmas novelties of which he has a large supply.

GOOD SUPPLY AT MODERATE PRICES.

The market, during the past week, was well supplied with stock of all seasonable varieties and prices have weakened somewhat. Chrysanthemums are still to be had at from 10 to 12½ cents. American Beauty is a scarce item and the price has steadily advanced from $2 to $5 per dozen. The market is well supplied with Russell, Ophelia, Aaron Ward and Killarneys, but Richmond, Hoosier Beauty and Milady are scarce. It appears as if the growers are holding back for Christmas. The carnation supply is good and the price does not exceed $3 per 100 for the best. Paper Whites are plentiful at from $1.50 to $2. Sweet peas are scarce—only a few Spencers can be seen on the market. Violets are coming in steadily and are priced at 50 cents for the best with inferior grades down to 25 cents per 100. All greens clean up well.

NOTES.

At numerous greenhouse establishments in this vicinity we recently noticed fine stocks of poinsettias, solanums and cyclamens. Azaleas are scarce and few good begonias are to be had. Jules Bourdet and Richard Frow have excellent stocks of fine blooming plants however.

Grimm & Gorly and Mullanphy Florists had elaborate decorations for the opening of the Franklin bank, December 11. There were many fine baskets and vases of choice roses.

Business in the retail stores has been better during the past week than is usual before a holiday season. The demand for funeral work was also heavy.

The formal opening of the Blossom Flower Shop took place December 9. A big crowd visited the store and enjoyed the flowers and music.

The florists in the south end of the city are looking forward to a flourishing holiday trade. Their windows are very attractive.

Decorative supplies are now a big feature in the wholesale trade and the retailers are also busy with holiday preparations.

STOCK PLENTIFUL AND PRICES FIRM.

Stock at present is plentiful, although a little advanced in price. Carnations are very good in quality and are bringing $5 per 100. Roses, such as Killarney, My Maryland, Ophelia, Hillingdon, Sunburst, Shawyer, Hadley and Hoosier Beauty, are quoted at from $4 to $12 per 100. American Beauty is priced at from $3 to $5 per dozen. Lily of the valley sells at from $6 to $8. Other offerings include orchids, gardenias, bouvardia and chrysanthemums, the latter bringing from $12 to $30 per 100. Flowering plants seem to be plentiful—cyclamens, begonias, bougainvilleas, poinsettias and a few good azaleas.

NOTES.

George W. Hess, superintendent of the botanic garden, opened to the public, December 9, the first poinsettia show ever held in any garden under control of the United States government. As a success it vied with the annual chrysanthemum exhibitions of the department of agriculture.

Albert Schnell, manager of the Leo Niessen Co.'s local branch, predicts a fine supply of carnations for the holiday trade, with prices lower than a year ago.

HOLIDAY INDICATIONS PROMISING.

Trade during the past week has been quiet following a very satisfactory business. Stock has been plentiful, the supply including some very fine chrysanthemums and roses in excellent variety and of splendid quality. Carnations have also been plentiful. Several Thanksgiving weddings created a demand for choice stock and there was the usual football game that made a market for many white and yellow chrysanthemums. Stock for the holiday trade looks promising, but indications point to a shortage in blooming plants.

NOTES.

The florists' club held its regular meeting December 2 at A. J. Lanternier's store, with Miss Rhoda Doswell, president, in the chair. The report on the flower show held in November was approved and it was decided to make this affair an annual event. A general discussion was entered into regarding the manner of handling the Christmas trade. It was decided to hold the annual banquet in the Hotel Anthony, January 5. The next meeting will be held in the store of Markey Bros.

The Flick Floral Co. had decorations for several large weddings during Thanksgiving week, in which were used quantities of southern smilax, Golden Wedding chrysanthemums and Sunburst and Ophelia roses.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey cut 400 orchids for Thanksgiving shipments. They also had excellent Chrysolora and Dolly Dimple chrysanthemums.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. had a big Thanksgiving business in chrysanthemums, roses and violets.

Markey Bros. had excellent Thanksgiving orders. Wm. Turner and Bonaffon chrysanthemums were features at their establishment.

The Doswell Floral Co. report excellent business with heavy demand for chrysanthemums, both cut blooms and plants. H. K.

Oklahoma City.

HEAVY THANKSGIVING DEMAND.

Thanksgiving day, with its attendant foot-ball game, brought a tremendous business for the florists. Stores were kept open all day and almost everything salable was disposed of. The demand for decorative plants was not so very heavy, but there was a good call for chrysanthemums. Prices for cut-flowers did not seem to vary much from the prices of other years. The best American Beauty roses reached $10 and $12 per dozen; of the tea roses, the variety Mrs. Russell was the most expensive, $8 per dozen being asked for these. Chrysanthemums sold for prices ranging from $4 to $8 per dozen; carnations from $1 to $1.25 per dozen.

NOTES.

John Furrow was a visitor this week. He says the chrysanthemum crop is entirely finished and that azaleas are now being forced for Christmas. These have been somewhat slow in arriving this year. It took 16 days for them to come from New York here by freight, rather slow traveling for such an up-to-date country as the United States is supposed to be.

The state teachers' convention has been in session for three days. This brought some two or three thousand school ma'ms to town and a lot of transient flower and bulb business has resulted. S. S. B.

Rochester, N. Y.

INDICATIONS OF GOOD HOLIDAY TRADE.

Business is increasing day by day as the holidays approach. Decorations in department stores and other retail establishment have been in place for some time and additional advance orders are being booked. Chrysanthemums now are of poor quality and the demand is very light, but carnations are excellent and the price is high. Roses are not very plentiful but the quality is unusually good, especially as regards Milady, Ward, Maryland and Ophelia. Cattleyas and cypripediums are selling well. Pompons have gone but snapdragon and stevia have come to take their place. There is good bouvardia on the market. Lily of the valley has advanced greatly in price during the past two weeks.

NOTES.

Edwin C. Kaebler reports good business during November. Fancy vases, bowls and other novelties have been selling well with him for the holiday trade. Brown Watson is now employed at the South Clinton street store.

Geo. B. Hart is on the committee to arrange for the supervisors' banquet to take place December 28. Cecil Lester of this firm has just returned from an extended business trip. He reports excellent trade.

Arthur Elder and Edwin C. Armbrust were energetic workers for the Y. M. C. A. membership campaign last week.

The Rochester Floral Co. is showing a fine assortment of baskets in a well arranged window display.

George Kramer is doing special basket work for S. A. Anderson of Buffalo. CHESTER.

BUSINESS VERY SATISFACTORY.

Straightening up and rearranging after the Thanksgiving trade is now very much in order and active preparations with pine and laurel for Christmas is always the first sign of the approach of the holiday season and these decorations have kept the florists busy. Trade during the past week has been unusually active, funeral work being a big feature. The death of three prominent residents of this city gave S. A. Anderson orders for three casket covers, which is somewhat unusual for one week, in addition to numerous other smaller orders. The other florists were also busy at the same time and several dinners and debutante teas added their quota to the general sales. Chrysanthemums are, or should be, counted out. Roses are scarce, but will in all probability be in good crop for Christmas. Carnations are also in limited supply, leaving only narcissi, lilies, violets and a few other flowers to supply the unusual demand. Everything in the plant line looks very promising—poinsettias, begonias, cyclamens and also azaleas. The local growers in this vicinity are very optimistic and look forward to good sales of their stock.

NOTES.

There is some talk of having a room in the Kasting building for the Busy Club—Ben Stafford, president; Chas. Schoenhut, sergeant-at-arms. War, politics and who has the largest supply of stock will be the principal subjects of discussion.

Stroh's Quality Shop is removing from 354 Main street to No. 377 on the same thoroughfare. The formal opening will not take place until after improvements are completed, but they will occupy both stores until after the holidays.

A large sign in front of two stores on Delaware avenue, in what is called the "Fifth avenue section," announces the occupancy by W. J. Palmer & Sons

GOOD SUPPLY WITH SATISFACTORY SALES.

With demand good, stock not overplentiful and prices firm, trade conditions can be said to be altogether satisfactory, some varieties cleaning up regularly. Roses are in good supply, but are not moving quite as well as usual, with the result that prices have dropped. Carnations are firmer and the supply is increasing, the choice varieties, especially Mrs. Ward and Matchless, bringing $5 per 100. Chrysanthemums are practically over, a few Jennie Nonin and Major Bonaffon arriving and which finds ready sale. Sweet peas are more plentiful and move fairly well at prices ranging from $1 to $2 per 100, the latter price being for fancy orchid varieties. Lily of the valley is more plentiful, but the demand not being active, the price is not as high as it has been during the past few weeks. There is a larger supply of orchids and as the demand is only fair, prices are lower. With the chrysanthemums practically over, lilies are meeting with better demand. Violets are beginning to arrive and move well. Stevia is plentiful and enjoys a good call.

NOTES.

The Bickmore Greenhouses of Wallingford, Pa., M. H. Bickley, proprietor, are showing marked improvement under the management of Joseph Goetter. Splendid stock from this establishment is being shipped to Berger Bros., where it finds ready sale.

Burton & Rone are meeting with a good demand for their new primula in four, five and six-inch pots. Begonia luminosa is selling well as is also Asparagus plumosus nanus of which they also have a fine house.

Zieger & Sons, Germantown, are adding two houses of King construction to their present 42-foot house. The dimensions of the new houses are 35x100 feet and 42x100 feet.

John W. White, of Morton, Pa., who makes a specialty of carnations, is shipping to this market some of the finest stock seen here. The variety is White Wonder.

Eugene Bernheimer is featuring some fine roses of the varieties September Morn, Prima Donna and Daily Mail, for all of which there is a ready market.

STOCK MOVES WELL AT GOOD PRICES.

While business was not exceptionally active during the past week, there was enough to keep the wholesale stores fairly well cleaned up at good prices. The supply of stock was not heavy; just about enough to supply the demand. American Beauties (special), brought 60 cents each, the first days of the week, but the demand was lighter toward the last and some sold for 50 cents. In tea roses, prices ranged from four and five cents for No. 2's, to 15 to 25 cents for specials, according to quality and variety. Our table of prices shows the variations. Orchids were more plentiful, but not much cheaper. Carnations gained. The best snapdragons went to $1.50 and $2 per dozen, but inferior stock was much cheaper. Violets have been dragging. While $1 per 100 has been paid for a little special stock, the left-overs have gone as low as forty cents. Lily of the valley has been slow, but lilies are up to 12 cents. Gardenias are more plentiful and cheaper. Just as soon as Thanksgiving was over the retailers began to visit the plantsmen in search of Christmas plants; in fact, we believe that most of them were spying out the lay of the land, long before Thanksgiving. So far as we have gone, and that is some distance, "all sold out" is the watchword of the plantsmen, and it looks that way. It is too early to say how all the azaleas will turn out, but it is a safe guess that there will be no surplus. Good ardisias seem to be scarce and some retailers are trying to get stock from other cities. There seems to be a fair crop of poinsettias in sight, but as Christmas usually brings a large demand for them, there will be no surplus. Comparing the demand in past years with what it is likely to be this Christmas, we believe that heather is more plentiful than the majority of other flowering plants, and there is a fine stock of it to be seen. Cyclamens, solanums, primroses, daisies, celestial peppers, and begonias seem to be only in moderate supply.

December 11.—Business is fairly active. In roses and carnations the supply is not heavy and prices are firm. Orchids, gardenias and Paper White narcissus are more plentiful and cheaper, particularly gardenias. Lilies are doing well, and violets are holding their own. There is no change in lily of the valley. There are a few chrysanthemums on the market, but their finish is at hand. There is a movement in calendulas, mignonette and various minor stocks.

NOTES.

For the funeral of Bayard Thayer, December 3, a prominent citizen of Lancaster, Mass., J. H. Small & Sons sent two designers, A. N. Hauser and Frank Deery, who with their assistants, made up many fine designs, including a casket pall of lilies of the valley and orchids. They used all the white orchids that could be procured in the New York and Boston markets, and many other choice blooms. For the funeral of George C. Boldt, proprietor of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, in this city and the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia, who died December 5, the same firm had a very large amount of work. For the New York City Hotel Men's Association, they arranged a standing wreath, which was 14 feet in height, the diameter being in proportion. It was filled with cattleyas, lily of the valley and violets, the base being American Beauties; for the New York State Hotel Men's Association, a large standing wreath of gardenias; for the head waiters and captains of the Waldorf-Astoria, a beautiful standing wreath of orchids and lilies; for the Waldorf-Astoria orchestra, a wreath of American Beauties; for the Geneva Society of America, a wreath of chrysanthemums. While the foregoing were among the most prominent designs, there were other very fine ones, the total being over one hundred. There were many wreaths of Easter lilies, also of L. rubrum; in fact, every flower that could be used in a design was noticed.

A. Ehmann, 2112 Broadway, arranged a magnificent decoration in the First Presbyterian Church of Passaic, N. J., recently, for the wedding of Miss Gertrude Bahnsen to Rudolph Zinsser. The platform was banked with palms and ferns, with large yellow chrysanthemums in the foreground. The windows were banked with chrysanthemums and foliage. Arches of smilax and chrysanthemums were arranged over the center aisle, under which the bridal party passed to the prie-dieu. The bride's bouquet was of white orchids and valley. The maid of honor carried an old fashioned bouquet containing a variety of flowers. The six bridesmaids carried bouquets of orchids and roses.

On the order of a business house, Craig Muir, 62 West 40th street, made up a fine design for the funeral of George C. Boldt. It was in the form of a pillar, being seven feet high, and entirely of white carnations. Around it a garland of cattleyas and adiantum was entwined. From the top, yellow roses drooped gracefully.

Albert A. Schanzer, formerly with Alexander Warendorff, is now with the Astoria Florist, 2188 Broadway, and is turning out good work. At this store we have recently noticed baskets, very handsomely made up with orchids and gardenias, others with yellow roses, yellow daisies and pansies.

Alexander Kupleman, who manages Fleischman's store in the Hudson terminal on Church street, reports good business. The Hudson terminal is a great thoroughfare for travelers on the Pennsylvania railroad and other lines, and Fleischman's flower store is a great attraction.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., First Vice-President; L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer. Thirty-fifth annual convention, June, 1917.

SUDAN GRASS seed is another scarce item, the asking price now being about double that of last year.

GEORGE R. PEDRICK & SON, Pedricktown, N. J., are mailing their customers a very handsome calendar.

GILROY, CALIF.—The Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co. is working 34 horses on its seed growing lands at the present time.

MUSCATINE, IA.—The many seed trade friends of J. E. Hoopes will be sorry to learn that he is seriously ill at his home here.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, December 13, were as follows: Timothy, $4.00 to $5.75 per 100 pounds.

PASADENA, CALIF.—Campbell Seed Store, Inc., reports very satisfactory trade, with increased business anticipated after January 1.

THE two first 1917 catalogues to reach us are those of J. N. Simon & Son, Philadelphia, Pa., and W. E. Marshall & Co., New York.

AMERICAN exporters of grass and clover seeds are giving the subject of future conditions after the close of the war a great deal of thought.

THE federal prison sentence passed on J. A. Everitt, Indianapolis, Ind., last week, is probably the first one ever given to an American seedsman.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The price of kafir corn seed dropped 30 cents, December 11, to about $2.10 per 100 pounds. It is reported that large buyers will go into the market at $2.

THE blue grass fields adjacent to Kansas City, Mo., were filled with volunteer growth of white clover the past wet spring. Much seed of this might have been saved but dealers could not get farmers interested.

KANSAS crops of potatoes, millet, kaffir and the like, except alfalfa seed, are short. Western Nebraska sold uncleaned millet as low as $1.50 per 100 pounds early. Some has gone into jobbers' hands, who are now taking a 50-cent advance.

VISITED CHICAGO: Edward Dungan and wife, Philadelphia, Pa.; H. G. Hastings, Atlanta, Ga.; W. B. Griswold, Lincoln, Neb.; F. C. Woodruff, New York; Thos. W. Chisholm, representing the Braslan Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Calif.

F. H. BRUNNING, PTY., LTD., Melbourne, Australia, say the stocks of peas, beans and Australian Brown onion seed are both large and good this year. This firm further states that American correspondents continue to mail Australian letters at the domestic rate of postage, the rate to Australia being five cents per ounce letter.

FITCHBURG, MASS.—Edmund D. Garfield, Washington representative of the Brown Bag-Filling Machine Co., of this city, and in charge of the firm's contract for congressional seed distribution, died at Washington, November 19, after an illness of three days. He was favorably known to the seed trade, and had been in charge of the firm's Washington branch for the past four years.

Western Seedsmen's Association.

A special meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association was held at the Hotel Martin, Sioux City, Ia., December 8. The members present or firms represented included H. A. Johns, president; M. L. Webster, secretary; G. H. Cummings and J. S. Michaels, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia.; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; Thos. Tobin, of the Missouri Seed Co., Kansas City, Mo.; J. C. Robinson, of the J. C. Robinson Seed Co., Waterloo, Neb.; C. P. Coy, of C. P. Coy & Son, Waterloo, Neb.; Henry Windheim, of the Nebraska Seed Co., Omaha, Neb.; Fred Mangelsdorf, of Mangelsdorf Bros. Co., Atchison, Kans.; Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago; Griswold Seed Co., Lincoln, Neb.; G. C. Thompson and Alex Bather, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn. Guests of the association were F. C. Woodruff, of S. D. Woodruff & Son, New York; J. C. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, and L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif.

A three-hour session was devoted to routine business. Those in attendance were mainly disposed to agree with the Wholesale Seedsmen's League as to values for the coming season. Prices on some sweet corns were thought too high and tomato seed was shaded 10 per cent. Bean prices were sustained as were those of peas, except Alaska, reduced three dollars per cental. Some squash and pumpkin seed prices were advanced. It was deemed inadvisable to place any value on onion sets.

After the business session the party visited the plant of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., where seed corn operations were in full swing, a large force being engaged in the hand selection of sweet varieties. President Johns, with Vice-President Cummings, of this company, and Messrs. Wise and Osborn, entertained the visitors at luncheon and at dinner. Thanks for the ride, visit and entertainment were proposed by Thos. Tobin and enthusiastically given together with three cheers and a tiger for President Johns.

Although the association was started on its career in the old Garretson hotel, Sioux City, this is the first meeting held there since its organization.

Postage Rates on Catalogues.

HEAVY INCREASE PROPOSED.

The post office appropriation bill now before congress includes some radical changes in the rates, among them one which removes catalogues from the parcel post class and places it in the third class, increasing the postage from two cents per pound to eight cents per pound. The bill also includes provisions for the zoning of newspapers and other publications at greatly increased rates. Seedsmen, nurserymen and others interested should lose no time in investigating these changes through their representatives in congress and the national organizations.

Holly and Green.

Holly quality in Chicago is below the average. Many cases have to be rejected by seedsmen and thrown on the produce street. Fancy cases bring $5.

Bouquet green, bulk, was never so scarce. Sales are made at 22 and 25 cents per pound, market bare.

FARMERS' BULLETIN 766, under title of "The Common Cabbage Worm," devotes 16 pages, well illustrated, to the history of the most destructive enemies of cabbage and related crops with suggestions for control.

Potato Prices at New York.

Potato prices at New York, December 9, were as follows: Bermuda, No. 1, per bbl., $7.00 to $8.00; Long Island, 180 lbs., $4.50 to $5.00; Maine, 165-lb. bag, $4.50 to $4.65; Canadian, 165-lb. bag, $4.35 to $4.55; Southern, late crop, 165-lb. bag, $3.75 to $4.35; Southern sweet, bbl., $2.00 to $4.25.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—Mushrooms, home grown, 20 to 30 cents per pound; lettuce, small cases, 10 and 15 cents; radishes, $1.50 per 100 bunches; celery, 75 to 90 cents, open crate; tomatoes, 10-lb. baskets, $1.00 to $1.40; cucumbers, per 2 dozen box, $2.75.

New York, Dec. 12. — Celery, per crate, $2.00 to $3.50; cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, 75 cents to $1.65 per 4-lb. basket; tomatoes, per lb., 10 to 20 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $4.00; lettuce, per box, $3.00 to $4.00.

Onion Shipments From France.

The total number of cars of Bermuda onions shipped in 1916 from Texas points reported to the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture, was 4,903, averaging 464 crates. The highest average yield per acre was at Valley Wells, Dimmit county, the production reported being 780 bushels per acre on two acres of land. An average of 600 bushels per acre is reported from an area of 300 acres at Laredo. The lowest yield is reported from Ishtas, Webb county, with an average yield of 20 bushels for 60 acres.

Fruit and Vegetable Shippers Violate Law.

Officials in charge of the enforcement of the food and drugs act report that inspectors have found several interstate shipments of fruits and vegetables, such as grapes, tomatoes and berries, which contain no statement on the packages as to the quantity of contents. The net weight amendment to the federal food and drugs act requires that all packages of foods which are shipped into interstate or foreign commerce must be marked plainly and conspicuously with a statement of the quantity of the net contents, either by weight or measure. Shippers who violate the law by failing to mark the quantity of the contents of each package of fruits and vegetables they ship into interstate commerce are liable to criminal prosecution.

Potato Supply May Be Cut.

The Journal of Commerce published the following, December 9:

Montreal, Dec. 8.—The expected large shipments of potatoes from the maritime provinces to east United States ports, of which Portland and Boston are the two principal ones which have government permits to receive potatoes from Canada, may be considerably cut down or stopped entirely unless shippers and receivers are more particular in complying with the inspection requirements of American government officials.

The Canadian department of agriculture and the United States department of agriculture have both, of late, had considerable correspondence regarding the entry of Canadian potatoes into the American market. So far this year between 10 and 15 cargoes of potatoes have been refused entry into the United States because the Canadian firms shipping have not complied with the conditions of the understanding arrived at between the American and Canadian governments. If exporters of potatoes continue to make such shipments it is said that the department of agriculture of the United States will put an end to that understanding which was arrived at last year, when the embargo on Canadian potatoes was conditionally lifted.

The refusal of entry of potatoes into the United States from Canada would meet with the hearty approval of all the Canadian consumers, as at present the housewives' leagues throughout Canada are trying to boycott the potato market to bring down the potato price.

American Association of Nurserymen.

John Watson, Newark, N. Y., President;
Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President;
John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.
Forty-second annual convention will be held at Philadelphia, Pa., June, 1917.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—A new city park will occupy the area burned last spring, when more than 800 buildings were destroyed.

HOUSTON, TEX.—C. L. Brock, park superintendent, has contracted for a large quantity of shrubs to be used in the city parks during the coming year.

ALHAMBRA, CALIF.—E. R. Davis and H. M. Gessler, florists and nurserymen, have combined their businesses and will erect a range in the near future.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Walter F. Webb, 202 Westminster road, this city, will organize a company in the near future under the name of Guaranty Nursery Co.

WILKES-BARRE, PA.—Several hundred acres will be added to the city park system, together with 95 acres which will be devoted to a military drill and athletic field.

Registration of Orchards in New Zealand.

At the last session of Parliament the orchards and garden diseases act under the department of agriculture was enacted, which authorized the department of agriculture to require every person owning or occupying a lot or farm on which there was even a single fruit tree growing to register the same on or before October 26, 1916.

This was the outgrowth of a request on the part of the nurserymen and the large fruit growers requesting the government to impose a tax of 1/- (24 cents) per acre on all orchards containing 1 acre or more, with the idea of using the income to assist in developing the industry in general in this dominion.

The regulation requires all persons having at least one fruit tree on their property to register and permit inspection of the same, with the idea of having such trees destroyed providing they do not pass inspection, but there is no charge for registration in the case of orchards covering less than one acre.

All of this is considered important by the principal fruit growers of the country, since it is expected that this may help to eradicate the diseases now more or less prevalent that might seriously affect this important industry that is increasing so rapidly of late.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

GOOD HOLIDAY BUSINESS IN SIGHT.

With a good flower business and preparing for the holidays, the florists have been very busy as all expect a large year. Cut flowers have been moving well with sufficient stock to supply the demand. This market seems higher than any other at present for many stores are securing shipments from out-of-town at very low prices. Some very good white chrysanthemums are on the market and sell on sight. Carnations are of good quality and bring from $3 to $4 per 100. Short roses are in demand, but not enough to reach around. The longer stems do not sell well. American Beauties are too high to induce the buyers, therefore many are left after each day's sales. Paper Whites are more plentiful and sell at $3 per 100. Sweet peas, yellow daisies and violets are in demand. Stevia always sells well. Blooming plants seem to be scarce, which may cause a greater demand for cut flowers this Christmas.

NOTES.

Allen Langhans, of Warren, Pa., called on the "boys" this week. He was formerly in the flower business, but now is engaged in the oil business. John Walker came from Youngstown, looking for good blooming plants.

Miss Jane McDowell was in the city to do her buying for Christmas. Miss Margaret Krut of Butler came last week to purchase supplies for their two stores.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had the decoration for the first ball of the season at the Pittsburgh club, December 8. It was a very elaborate affair.

McCallum Co. received 3,000 pounds of very fine boxwood December 9, which was sold before it left the express wagon.

The death of two city officials this week caused quite a demand for flowers.

Julius Dilhoff called on the trade this week.

The Sand Springs Greenhouses made a splendid record with chrysanthemums this season, the total output of which was handled by Henry's Hothouse. In one bed alone there were about 3,000 William Turner the quality being exceptionally fine.

Henry's Hothouse has put on a new covered "Saxon Six" for its delivery service. Thanksgiving business was double that of 1915, and there has been no let up to speak of since November 30.

Mrs. Josephine De Haven has added an auto to her delivery service.

ALLEGANY, NEW YORK

HEAVY HOLIDAY DEMAND ANTICIPATED.

Business keeps up fairly good, better than is perhaps usual for early December. Retailers say that some lines of cut flowers are rather hard to obtain and prices are necessarily high; however, this only brings the plant proposition into the foreground and gives the plant growers their innings. Christmas possibilities are beginning to be talked of and great preparations are in the making. Some idea of what is expected from the holiday trade may be gathered from the fact that, in making out orders to meet the demand at that time, the retailers are allowing for a 35 per cent increase in business over former years. Christmas trees are already arriving, but this trade is mostly handled by the seed stores. We notice along the river bottoms, that mistletoe is very plentiful; not only that, but it is better berried than has ever been seen so far as our experience goes. The berries are well developed and just as thick and close together as possible, which makes it very attractive this year.

Aetna Brand Tankage Fertilizer

Is a fertilizer carrying in perfect proportion the ten salts constituting soil. It possesses the means of restoring to the soil the native salt or plant food taken up by a crop in its growth, and in so doing maintains the proper percentage of fertility to sustain and build up a healthy crop. It is used by the largest florists in the United States and is unsurpassed as a fertilizer in the cultivation of tomatoes, cucumbers, lettuce and cereals.

RHODODENDRON FORCING.

European Grower's Views.

Besides the beautiful effects that can be made with the rhododendron in landscape architecture, they are ideal forcing plants, and their popularity stands preeminent with the Azalea Indica. Their heavy, dark green, leathery foliage is striking, to say nothing of the great masses of varied colored flowers, which are produced in large trusses on the end of every branch of the plant. There is such a wide range of color in the long list of varieties that, with a judicious selection, it is possible to make any desired color arrangement. The colors are generally pure and show variegations from pure white to clear violet, delicate pink and deep crimson. Between the numerous bouquets the green of the foliage is well displayed and adds to the beauty of the plant.

Although I spoke of large trusses I am sorry to say that the rhododendron which is forced in the spring does not always show them as large and well-colored as they should and though it is not altogether impossible that the plant is at fault, yet I ascribe it to wrong treatment in forcing in the majority of cases. It takes time and care to get a rhododendron into bloom and also a knowledge of the different varieties, whether they are early, medium or late blooming. Ignorance of this invariably leads to failure. By reason of the success we had with our rhododendrons at various exhibitions and especially at the great flower show at Boskoop, April, 1911, we received a number of letters asking us how we managed to have so many varieties in bloom at one time, where there were early medium and late blooming varieties seen in the collection.

I shall try to explain in the following lines the most important rules for forcing rhododendrons, but it should be understood that the forcer should use his own judgment a great deal. He must understand the exact needs of the plants and their requirements as to airing, watering and heating.

When a rhododendron is sent out it is fully prepared for forcing. The peaty soil in Boskoop is the ideal soil for this class of plants, especially for those destined to forcing. It may be possible to grow rhododendrons in sandy soil, and they may also be useful for planting out-doors, but for forcing nothing can rival those grown in our peat and climate. Here they flourish and thrive to perfection and make strong buds which will easily respond to the applied heat. We take special care in growing these plants as not only the size of the flowers but also the color depends on this to a large extent.

When imported plants arrive they should be unpacked at once. It is well to be prepared for them when they are expected to arrive, so they can be taken care of. Generally they are more or less dry in the roots and should be placed in a shallow tank or other receptacle to moisten them. There they can be left for half an hour or so. The canvas should be taken off the rootballs, and the heads untied. It is best to pot them immediately in not too large pots. Pot them if possible with leafmould and do not ram the soil too hard in the pots. Firm potting is all right but there is no need to go to extremes. The bottom of the pots should be covered with potsherds. If the balls are too heavy shake off the superfluous soil but do not cut the roots. Then look over the plant carefully to see if there are not too many flowerbuds on them. Some varieties make three to four buds on the same branch. These should be taken off so that only one, the strongest, is left. There may also be too many buds on the plant, so they are in each others way. These superfluous buds also should be broken out to allow those that remain on the plant sufficient space to develop well.

The pots can now be placed in a cold frame. In fine weather or a mild rain the lights must be taken off, and only in cold freezing weather they should be put on. Do not place them in the hothouse immediately. The object is to get the roots to sprout. The better they are rooted, the better they will force. The plants should be given a fair amount of room. If possible, let each plant stand clear of its neighbor, so that light and air can pass freely between them. If placed too close they drop their leaves. This will also be the case if the frames are kept closed too long at a time so they are deprived of fresh air. Light and air are the two important requirements for forcing rhododendrons. They should be safe from frost. Watering should be done only if necessary.

In the frame they should be left till early January, when they may be taken into the greenhouse. A temperature of 50°-60° Fahr. can be given to start with. After four or five weeks the roots begin to sprout (make new roots) and from that time a higher temperature, not exceeding 70°-75° Fahr., can be applied.

In the first days the rhododendrons are in the greenhouse the leaves must be syringed with a thin spray once a day but after the temperature is raised, and especially on sunny days spraying twice a day will be necessary. Do not use the hose. Just a thin spray is sufficient, although the pots should be watered now and then. By the middle of March the glass has to be shaded to prevent the leaves from becoming burned. Shading with canvas or similar material is preferable to whitewashing. Also the pots should be watered abundantly. Especially when the buds are expanding the pots can hardly be kept too wet. It is advisable to always have a moist atmosphere in the house.

When rhododendrons are taken into the greenhouse early in January some of the earliest blooming varieties can be had in bloom by the beginning of March. After these the medium and late flowering varieties follow in succession, so that about the middle of April the latest flowering varieties can be had in bloom. Spraying on the open trusses should be avoided.

If a number of varieties are wanted in bloom at a fixed time, then the early flowering varieties must be brought inside later than the medium, and these again later than the late flowering varieties.

When they are all four or five weeks inside, some buds will be seen advancing. These plants must be taken out and placed cooler, till they are all advanced alike. Then they can be forced into bloom by the same temperature.

For the convenience of our customers we have marked the varieties in our catalogue: E for Early, M for Medium and L for Late forcing, thus enabling everyone to make his own selection. With this marked list of varieties, and the above hints it will not be difficult to have several varieties in bloom at a given time.

Kindly note that late varieties should never be forced early. This costs a lot of heat and the results are doubtful. It is very essential to know if a variety is early, medium or late. Ignorance of this leads to disappointment and is generally the cause that the rhododendrons do not force satisfactorily.

The above rules were followed by us with good results in forcing for various exhibitions and for our own use, and we hope that they may encourage you to force this noble plant and lead to success. Then both of us will be satisfied.—B. B. C. Felix, of Felix & Dykhuis.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

PERSONALITY has much to do with success in the retail shop. The proprietor is the man looked for. He meets and greets his customers, takes their orders or turns them over skillfully to his competent assistants. His presence inspires a confidence that is most valuable.

THREE-FOURTHS of the business of the retail store comes over the telephone. Many large flower shops have private exchanges which greatly facilitates quick service. A well-conducted and ample phone equipment is a great factor, many orders being lost by the "busy" phone.

Plant Protectors.

Transporting plants in cold weather for decorations is at times risky business. Much of this work is often very hurriedly done. Where the heated wagon or car is loaded in a warm shed there is no exposure, but oftentimes at the delivery point risks are taken that frequently result disastrously.

The Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago, which makes a specialty of decorative work, has found long narrow canton flannel sacks, open at both ends, to be very useful, both in protecting the foliage from damage in handling and from frost when being carried in the open from the car to the building. The sacks are of several diameters, 10, 12 and 15 inches, and some larger. They are drawn up on the plant over the pot or tub. The top is then gathered in and bound or held together with a strong rubber band. To remove one, hold the pot, when the cover is easily pulled off. This is the most effective method of protection we have yet seen, useful at any time in preventing damage to foliage during transit.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.

That good business instinct is not confined entirely to the male sex is exemplified by the experience of Mrs. E. A. Williams, of 621 Penn avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. Thrown entirely on her own resources by the death of her husband in 1889, she bravely, and from necessity took up and continued what was then a very small business, located at 1713 Carson street, now occupied by the South Hills Flower Co., on the South Side, a then fairly good residence district. Mrs. Williams always catered to the better class of trade, and, after a time, finding the neighborhood changing and her best customers moving to newer and select districts, she sold her store and moved to her present central location, where by close attention and up-to-date business methods, she has built up one of the most exclusive flower shops in this city.

She is always present during the shopping hours to meet her patrons, which she considers a most important detail. Nothing, either in cut flowers or supplies, is too good for this store; in fact, since her earliest connection with the business, she has always made it a point to carry only the best of everything—low priced stock never appealed to her. She caters to flower lovers who appreciate quality and art in floral arrangement, and her stock of flowers and plants, as well as the artists to arrange them, have always been of the best. Harvey Sheaff, her manager, and James Higgins, his principal assistant, are men of long experience and artistic ability, whose work has the true metropolitan touch and finish. The store interior is always artistically arranged with the best plants, and vases of seasonable cut flowers, particular attention being paid to the show window. At a recent luncheon, a number of low, oblong handle baskets in blue enamel, fitted with tins, were filled with Ophelia roses and mignonette, the handle being tied with pale blue ribbon, and at the bow was a bunch of Malaga grapes and full sprays of Sweetheart roses. These were artistic to a marked degree. There were seven of these baskets which, with Mexican ivy and pansies on the cloth, completed a very beautiful table.

Moss is not used here in filling baskets where water is used in inside tins. All wild smilax is saved and the tins filled with the vines, furnish support to the stems of the flowers, they being much more easily placed than in the moss and yet hold quite firmly.

Planning for the New Year.

To make the most of the business of the coming year is worthy of the best thought and planning that can be given it. Every retail store has an individuality, a way of carrying on business, that is essentially its own. Consciously, or for some undefined reason, they appear to specialize along certain lines. If these have been found successful, and it is advisable to increase this trade, now is the time to plan for it. If it is wedding and decorative work, the field is a large one, as occasions of this kind, both large and small, are constantly occurring. There are various ways of getting next to these events. Quite frequently newspaper notices are too late, the order having by that time been given. Engravers and stationers who prepare the invitations are generally first. Information may be obtained here after confidence has been established. Caterers have also early news of the event, which is more or less available. Sextons of churches are often posted and make good allies. Jewelers are also informed.

STORE OF R. J. DASCHBACH, INC., PITTSBURGH, PA.

KNOWLEDGE OF COMING EVENTS.

After the address of the parties and date of the affair has been secured, attractive booklets, such as are now prepared by advertising agencies, are good as an introduction. An interview with a carefully prepared estimate is, however, most satisfactory. Such methods as these, assiduously pursued, will help very materially to enlarge the volume of business along these lines. Funeral flowers are the back bone of the retail trade; without this dependable revenue most of the smaller shops, at least, would have to close their doors. While this is such an important factor, many, however, keep it in the background, or at least in their decorative and store displays, do not feature it in any way. This can be done effectively by occasionally displaying in the windows, a handsome wreath or cluster made for the purpose. Other choice ordered pieces may be made to do double duty by an hour or two in the window. A well-made wreath of galax or magnolia, always on view in the refrigerator, is suggestive; a spray or two of orchids, in concealed tubes, will add a touch of color and keep as well here as in any part of the case. Several such made up pieces should always be in stock for emergencies. A frame with a few photos of wreaths, clusters and other standard made-up pieces, should have a good wall space.

To increase and gain new trade in this particular line, men try all sorts of schemes. Some work hand in hand with undertakers, giving them a commission. Others join lodges and societies, hoping to get the work as a member. The death of a prominent city official, or police officer, calls for numerous orders from political clubs and departments of the service whose members generally contribute liberally. Solicitation of this work is considered legitimate, as is also that of all large bodies, as in factories, etc. To plan in any or all of these ways to increase this important branch of the business is well worth while.

HOW TO BRIDGE DULL MONTHS.

How to keep busy at the various dull periods of the year is a good game to play. Stock is then always plentiful; it can be bought very cheap in large quantities, and it can be sold to the regular store trade and the new people that come to see what the "noise" is about, if you make it loud enough to attract them. Good window displays with prices, outside or inside, printed stickers to the glass, and attractively printed cards that can be mailed for one cent, are sure to get a look. Be honest—if you buy cheap, sell cheap. It will not hurt the regular trade, for such sales are always special. It is the bargain feature that attracts and makes sales of flowers for which there is no particular use.

HOLIDAYS AND SPECIAL SALES.

Always plan for the smaller holidays—Valentine's day, Washington's birthday, Paddy's day, Mothers' day and Halloween. The big four are in a class by themselves. Three-fourths of the stores pay little or no attention to the featuring of these sentimental anniversaries. Such omissions are lost opportunities. Displays on these occasions are sure to attract attention; all department, stationery, confectionery and fancy goods stores feature a line of specialties that are appropriate and salable, and decorate their windows, calling attention to these events for at least a week in advance. "These small days do not amount to anything," is not the experience of the live, up-to-date dealers. They see the possibilities, go after the business by exploiting the day, getting publicity and much return as their reward.

Special plant sales stir things up and are conducted as opportunity offers by many retailers with good results. It is the preparatory work that counts, the looking ahead, being on time with the early featuring and by this means calling attention to the occasion that would very likely pass unnoticed. What is worth doing is worth doing well. "Also rans" get nothing; the winner gallops away with the prize. The leaders of trade in every community are bright, wide-awake men, alive to their opportunities, always on the job, planning and working to make the most of every occasion.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Smith's New Chrysanthemums.

The illustrations herewith show three of the many new chrysanthemums offered this season by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., and the raisers' descriptions and comments on these varieties are as follows:

Smith's Imperial—We consider this one of our greatest achievements in the improvement of commercial chrysanthemums. An incurved white, fully developed October 22, good from any bud August 25 and after. Dwarf habit, 4½ feet; from May planting will produce three to four perfect flowers per plant for those who prefer them only medium size. Has abundant dark, glossy foliage extending up to the bloom, short-jointed, ridged stem. Recommended for certificate by all five of the C. S. A. committees.

Little Gem—A seedling from the little yellow of Japanese origin, known as Baby, and possesses the same form of petal, but is somewhat larger, about one inch in diameter. Color, a very pleasing shade of lavender pink. Strong upright growth, in perfection first week of November. Entirely distinct from any pompon. An acquisition to those desiring artistic arrangements, and the commercial grower need have no hesitancy in securing this striking novelty, as strong demand is assured. At Cleveland, in 1915, Little Gem was given the highest scoring of any seedling submitted, not excepting the large flowering by the C. S. A. judges.

The Crest—Maturing the end of November and may be kept well into December. Owing to the guard petals being very long we can not recommend this variety to those consigning their stock, but to those retailing their products it will be a welcome addition to the late flowering section. Is also an acquisition for those desiring pot plants for late decorations. When grown cold we have had it in good condition after Christmas. Pure white, showing traces of pink when allowed to remain on the plants for a long time. This variety originated with James Dowden, Millbrook, N. Y. C. S. A. Certificate.

Chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving is past, but next year's harvest is ahead, and the wise man lays his plans while the success or failure of this season is still fresh in his mind. When Wm. Kleinheinz, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, visited the E. G. Hill & Co.'s establishment at Richmond, Ind., last year, he said he never had before seen such a fine lot of Eaton and Chadwick. The crop just cut out for this season was fully equal to that of last year, there being over 20,000 of white and yellow Chadwick and the same colors in Eaton, all of extra size, with a smooth, satiny finish, splendidly salable stock that would bring top market price or in an overstocked market be the first to go. These are all grown, one to a plant, six inches apart, tied to wire rose stakes with raffia.

Over 60,000 plants are grown. Smith's Advance and Alice Day are the early whites. Early Rose is a first-class early pink. Golden Glow, Golden Queen, better than Chrysolora, and Marigold are the early yellows.

White Chieftain is the midseason white, and then follows Eaton and Chadwick. A pure white Chadwick is in the making here. Hamburg Late White, a white Maud Dean, was well thought of. E. A. Seidewitz is the preferred late pink, wonderfully fine in every way. Yellow Turner, Bonaffon and then yellow Eaton and Chadwick fill out the season in their color.

The best singles are Mrs. Buckingham, white and golden Mensa, and Golden Star.

The pompons are: Frank Wilcox, generally known as Mrs. Frank Beu, Languet, a golden anemone; Lillian Doty, pink, and Peace, a pink. Inga is an early red, Lillia, a tall red, and Helen Newberry, a white. Marianna, Hill seedling, a snowy white, is extra early and will be out next season, as will also Little Pet, a perfect pink, round as a ball.

Mr. Hill, the modest man he is, gave all credit to the soil for the great quality shown in the flowers. The stock plants are kept dormant until January, when they commence on cuttings. To get the fine late stock, plants are not benched until the middle of June and then kept on the jump until the flowers are ready to cut, when they are held the balance of the time by juggling the temperature.

Chicago Park Shows.

The people of Chicago are indeed fortunate in their park conservatories, as in no other city of this country is there such a series of well-kept tropical gardens. Here, in addition to wealth of palms, ferns and other choice foliage plants that enter into the more or less permanent decorative schemes that are always to be seen, there is the exhibition or display of seasonable flowering plants grown in large quantities, so that their artistic arrangement in connection with the fixed and movable foliage stock makes possible color effects on a large scale in keeping with the size of the houses.

These exhibitions follow one another the season through, relieving the monotony of the plain green of the huge palms, ferns and other like plants, which in their robust growth extend almost to the glass.

The range of conservatories at Garfield park is larger and contains a greater variety and excellence of plants than are seen in either of the others. During the late summer and early fall the display house is filled with foliage and flowers in autumn tints—crotons, acalyphas, caladiums, Hibiscus Sunset, streptocarpuses, solanums, peppers and other fruited plants, with Catalonia jessamines for perfume. These give way to the chrysanthemums, for which great preparations are always made. A long oval in the center is filled with well trained plants, with smaller stock along the edge. Banked on either side, from the walk to the walls of the house, is a splendid collection of seedlings, single and semi-single sorts, many of them raised in the park. They were beautifully arranged as to color, one side red, shading finally through yellow to white, and the other white, shading to pink. A large bank at either end of the house of single stemmed plants, each with a huge flower, was an attractive feature. Suspended at intervals from the high roof over each walk, were a number of large baskets of chrysanthemums, mostly of the trailing type, as seen in C. indica. Golden Chain, a cross made here with indica and a seedling white, is a great improvement on indica. These baskets attracted much attention. A grafted plant containing 81 varieties, captivated many. There should certainly be a great market for the single varieties as seen here, and florists who do a plant trade should keep them to the front. Over 4,000 plants were in this display.

Following the chrysanthemums will be the Christmas stock, 3,000 poinsettias, begonias, cyclamens, stevias, Roman hyacinths, callas, etc., in quantity sufficient to fill the house, will give a gay and seasonable display.

The fern house is a delight. From a carpet of Selaginella Kraussiana rises a fernscape, if it can be so called—it is like a lovely glen surrounding a small lake. Cibotiums are the feature. Schiedei is the variety—a number of splendid plants. We have never before seen it in such luxurious growth. A magnificent blue cycas stood out prominently. Other ferns and foliage plants in large specimens add their beauty. Selaginellas and low growing ferns cover the ground. It was hard to leave this paradise of ferns.

A tropical house was gay with Anthuriums Andreanum and others and many highly colored alocasia, pothos, pandanus and other plants of the tropics. Conifers, araucarias and hardy and semi-hardy plants of this class filled one house, while the economic section with medicinal, perfume, and ornamental wood plants was interesting. No one will ever regret a visit to the Garfield park conservatories.

At Lincoln park, a fine collection of large palms is seen; also, a fern house with a greater variety of tree ferns than at Garfield park, but not so effective, lacking the space. A house of chrysanthemums was also a feature.

Washington park conservatories are a long range with a wide center walk, on either side of which is banked a wealth of tropical and semi-tropical plants, everything in the best of order. Chrysanthemums were also a feature in one of the sections. In a cross section palm house, a very pretty ground effect was made with saxifragas, which seemed perfectly at home, covering the ground with a dense growth of leaves. Such lovely winter gardens as these should be in every large city in the land. The craft could make them possible, if they would. Such houses cannot help but be a great factor in increasing the love for flowers.

Acalyphas.

One of the plants that is not ordinarily grown as well as it ought to be and which makes a beautiful showy plant is the acalypha, especially A. Godseffiana and A. Sanderi, which bears long spikes of red flowers, sometimes called the chenille plant, from the flowers which resemble large pieces of red chenille. The plants should be well hardened off in the fall and cuttings of the new growth can be taken during the winter, in November and December, if fine specimens are wanted. The cuttings are taken preferably with a heel and root easily in a warm propagating bench. When rooted they should be potted in a good rich soil and placed in a warm greenhouse until they have made roots and commenced to grow, when they can be removed to slightly cooler quarters. The great mistake made by many growers is to place them in a cool house immediately after they have been taken from the propagating bed and they stand half dormant, and if too cool frequently lose much of their foliage, and get stunted. To have fine plants they should be kept moving all winter and potted into large-sized pots as soon as necessary, and a few of these showy plants well grown will attract attention and redound to the credit of the grower. Aphid and mealy bug are the two insect enemies of these plants, and should be kept in check continually or the plants will be ruined. The bedding acalyphas should be handled in a similar manner, but the first of the year is early enough to start the cuttings of these unless there are signs of a shortage of stock, in which case early propagation is to be recommended, and it is seldom one has too many of these plants if they are well grown.

PINE HILL, N. Y.—Hugo Burki has completed extensive improvements at his range.

George Reinberg, Chicago.

About 20 years ago, George Reinberg erected his first range of glass. Year after year additions were made until almost all the available ground was covered. Nothing has been added during the past 10 years. The total glass area is 700,000 square feet. The houses are all built on the ridge and furrow plan, the individual units being 20x265 feet, in blocks of 10 or more. The gutters are 7½ feet above the ground, the ridge pole 16 feet.

With the exception of one range, the entire place is planted with roses, which are all strong, healthy stock, full of growth and buds, timed to have full crops for the Christmas holidays.

The various ranges are divided in the center with a four-foot walk, from which to each end of the houses run four-foot tables, between which is a 22-inch walk. Each bench contains four rows of plants. They are carried for two years and some for three, but none over, new stock being considered best after that time. Good compost, one fourth manure, is used on the benches, and twice a season in the fall, and again in February, they are mulched with manure. No artificial aids are given—no bone, no manure water—nothing but the good soil and the mulching of manure. They are grown cooler than is the rule in many places—night temperature, 56° to 58°, and the same in day time, except when the sun raises it on bright days. John Model, the foreman, a very competent man, thinks they get as many flowers to the plant as when kept warmer, and is sure the buds are larger, firmer and more satisfactory.

The benches are about 16 inches above the ground. Underneath, about four inches from the ground, are the 1¼-inch heating pipes, two to a bed. In addition, on one side of each bed at the ground, is an inch pipe—they call it a sulphur pipe. This series of pipes is connected up separately with the boiler, mostly for use in fighting mildew in the fall and spring, when it is necessary to evaporate sulphur and give a little heat to dry up the damp atmosphere so prevalent at these seasons.

All the varieties of roses appear to be at home, Russell, Sunburst, and Richmond, some of which, particularly Russell, which is said by some growers to require more heat, were all in the same vigorous growth and full of promise. Richmond plants were seen with 6 to 7 buds, that were almost ready, the crop being for Thanksgiving and early December. Sunburst was also very full of buds, nearly all a fine color. There were quantities of Ophelia and White and Pink Killarney, all in crop now and many beds timed for the holidays; nothing could look more promising. If black spot appears, the remedy is a little manure mulch, kept moist with light sprinkling, which stimulant induces a new growth and cures the spot. Mr. Model said it had always proved effective with them. When it is necessary to fumigate, tobacco stems are used, about a bushel in each of four places in each house of a range. This is piled in the path and over each, on a handful of wet stems, is sprinkled two teaspoonfuls of arsenic; he finds the poison in the tobacco fumes very effective, it being sharp and suffocating to all animal or insect life.

Some Richmonds had been forced steadily for three years with good results, but those that were rested, he believed, gave a better winter crop.

Asparagus plumosus is grown rather extensively, a range of 40,000 feet of glass being planted with the useful greens. It is in benches, and is replanted after the third year. This large place, in such perfect order throughout, has but 32 employees, including firemen, teamsters and chauffeurs. The quantity of roses and the varieties, follow:

Richmond, 70,000; White Killarney, 60,000; Sunburst, 32,000; Pink Killarney, 26,000; Ophelia, 26,000; Russell, 4,000; total, 218,000.

Chrysanthemum The Crest.

Jos. H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

Ideal in location, with greenhouses of the latest type, embodying all that is best in permanent construction and particularly designed for the crops that are specialties here, this establishment is in the A1 class. It is planned for additions as found necessary, being in the center of a level 10-acre plot. A railway siding within a block, furnishes coal almost to the boilers. A car line brings visitors to the door. A Lord & Burnham house, 60x400 feet, is planted with roses in tile bottomed beds. Twelve-inch planks on edge run the length of the beds on either side; these are filled with soil, on top of which across the bed, are laid three-inch drain tile, close together, the open ends projecting to the walk. On top of this, the bench is made, containing six inches of soil, the tile forming the bottom. This appears to be the standard rose bench of the western growers. A 1½-inch steam pipe on either side of each bed, near the ground, helps keep a circulation of warm air through the tile and prevents the soil from ever becoming soggy, insuring perfect drainage.

The stock is all grafted, Mr. Hill stating that unquestionably they are better than own roots, giving twice as many flowers in the early fall and winter months and with longer stems. Hoosier Beauty that had been planted in July had a number of buds with four-foot stems and many three-foot shoots; the beds looked wonderfully vigorous. It was their most prolific red. A bed of Hadley, while not showing much flower, was looking very well; it has not done well in the west, but was being given another trial. Mrs. Ward was in the greatest vigor. If this variety is cut too close, it is apt to get a check and go dormant. Numerous long shoots are encouraged to keep up the necessary foliage. Ophelia was seen in remarkable growth. It would be difficult to find a better house of 12,000 roses anywhere. A block of the new seedling rose No. 467, of the E. G. Hill Co., which Joseph H. Hill said was the best in his opinion of his father's Ophelia crosses, was in splendid growth and full of flowers.

Carnations are a specialty and are grown in four houses, each 34x400 feet, ridge and furrow, with 17-foot ridge and gutters, 7 feet above the ground. These are of Foley construction and seem ideal for carnations, chrysanthemums and like crops. One hundred and twenty thousand plants are growing on benches, several of Mrs. Ward, which were vigorous in growth and buds and had been grown inside all summer. Most of the stock was, however, field grown.

A new plan to insure against drouth in summer is to be tried out next year. A four-acre plot has been graded and tiled; a row of four-inch tile, laid three feet deep every 40 feet, aerates and provides drainage. At the headland along the highest elevation of the ground is an iron pipe with outlets plugged with wood, from which water is run as required between each row of plants, the graduated fall taking it the full length of the field. After the soil has been saturated, it is worked as between rains, and will hold the moisture for from two to three weeks. This is the California idea of irrigation, Fred Howard, of Howard & Smith, Los Angeles, planning the system for Mr. Hill.

Champion was considered the best red carnation, making more and better flowers than anything of its color. Enchantress Supreme was the light pink, with Mrs. Ward the dark shade.

All young stock is grown from plants in beds grown cool and for cuttings only. Great stress is laid on selection, plants that show unusual vigor and color in the blooming stock being marked and kept for propagating.

Chrysanthemums are another of the features here; they are grown largely for the company's retail stores in Cincinnati and Indianapolis. Superb stock it is, the Eatons and Chadwicks, yellow and white, grown one flower to a plant, having a size and finish that would bring top price in any market. Forget-me-not is an edge of the bench plant in some of the carnation beds. Wall flower, mignonette, snapdragon and sweet peas are all being grown for their own stores—very fine stock it is. Joseph H. Hill is one of the coming men of the business—a worthy son of his distinguished father.

Dr. W. Van Fleet.

Dr. W. Van Fleet, Rose Hybridizer.

One of the most interesting men in the United States department of agriculture, bureau of plant industry, Washington, D. C., is Dr. W. Van Fleet, whose long continued and untiring efforts in the improvements of our outdoor roses has produced many very fine varieties. In connection with his work in the investigation of economic drug and perfume plants he is also actively engaged in experiments for the betterment of hardy roses suitable for every garden. In a recent interview he spoke freely of his work in this direction and the hope of a more enduring and satisfactory everblooming type for the common garden.

For the common door yard garden he finds the hybrid teas, taking them as a class, are not satisfactory; a few of the most vigorous will answer; but a number of the choicest sorts have not the stamina to stand our vigorous eastern climate except in the hands of the professional gardener. The hybrid perpetuals are the best and it is hoped that by crosses with the rugosa type that their period of bloom may be prolonged and made more frequent.

In the work of hybridizing one is never sure of results, an annual bloomer being the result at times of crossing for free flowering qualities. The ordinary householder's garden, planted with the hybrid tea roses, would resemble a sanitarium, as so many would be ailing and in need of treatment most of the time from one cause or another. Where the plants get only ordinary care, the strong vigorous varieties should be selected. Even Caroline Testout, one of the most beautiful hybrid teas, does not do well in California, but in Oregon it is superb; is in fact, overplanted on account of its popularity.

In that region the climate is particularly suited for the hybrid teas. Sunburst, just introduced, is seen four feet in height carrying 25 to 30 flowers. Golden Gate grows 10 feet high covered with bloom. The government, through the department of agriculture, recognizing the advantages of cheerful surroundings in making the farmer's home attractive, is giving considerable attention to producing a hardy class of roses with frequent periods of bloom. At Chico, in the north Sacramento valley, an eighty-acre garden has been established for the dissemination of introduced plants. Here they are experimented with and tried out, and if found desirable, introduced into channels of trade. In experimenting with pears to overcome the blight that has been so disastrous, crosses had been made with the native pear of China, a very strong grower free from disease, but the fruit of which was not edible. From these experiments, which took two periods of seven years each, a variety bearing fruit of very large size was developed. Dr. Van Fleet made a number of crosses from this and feels sure that when the results are known seven years hence, something of great value to fruit growers will result. He has just returned from the Chico gardens, where he made over 600 crosses of roses. Banksias, Cherokees, and MacCartneys, were used, with varieties, the result of his fertilizations of six years ago, from which had developed very interesting sorts. Hybrid blood was prevalent in these and it was hoped to produce that much to be desired hardy rose with the free blooming qualities of the tea class. The work is slow as it takes so long to get results; three years are necessary before satisfactory flowers, showing the real qualities of the variety, are developed.

Manda's Gardenia, one of the best of its class, did not produce a flower until the third year and was almost discarded. Seedling varieties, which at first seem disappointing, often develop good qualities, as plants gain in strength. It is a great mistake to propagate immediately from a young seedling plant that has shown a satisfactory flower; it should be allowed to gain in strength and vigor and become thoroughly established before any cuttings are taken. Dr. Van Fleet hopes that from the work done at Chico, there would be developed varieties that would do well in the more vigorous climates of different parts of the country. They would be experimented with as are some of his earlier crosses now in the east, to try them out before they would be pronounced satisfactory. He hopes to see amateurs take up the work of crossing for new varieties—it is very fascinating. The hybrid tea crosses have to be perfected under glass, or in the south or California coast, as the season elsewhere is not long enough to properly ripen the seed out of doors. The first or great crop of flowers in the teas do not fertilize well; later on, second crop flowers are more sure. Hybrid roses mature their seed out of doors and offer a good field for the amateur who will experiment with this class.

Two beautiful blooms of his Silver Moon were on his desk. This famous variety is a cross between Devonensis and Cherokee, and this later with Safrano. It is one of the most beautiful ramblers and several selected varieties were to be fertilized with the pollen from these flowers the day following our visit.

Growing roses to get good results should be done on the Chinese system. The Chinese are said to pay their physicians as long as they are in good health, but nothing when ill. Roses and other plants will flower abundantly when the environment is right and they are given the proper care and attention, but when they have to struggle against adverse circumstances feature. A greenhouse on the roof is kept filled with palms and other plants for this purpose. The entire building is used, the second and third floors being used for the making of magnolia and artificial flower wreaths, sprays, etc., for Christmas and cemetery decorations, and for funerals, they having a large business with out-of-town undertakers. A range of glass of over 150,000 feet, in Castle Shannon, Pa., furnishes a portion of the cut flowers and plants for the store. The company also has a large stand in the Allegheny market.

framed photographs of designs is a feature. In the rear, in a separate building, artificial flowers, crosses and wreaths of magnolia and crepe sprays, with cypas, that keep a force at work in their preparation the year through, are wonderful in variety. A crepe spray, with a hinged wooden back to fold compactly for packing, is a feature. This business with country undertakers is one that might be worked up to advantage by many of the trade who never give it a thought.

The Allegheny market florists include some who sell all they grow here, such as John Schweiger & Son, who make a specialty of Bonnaffon chrysanthemums at this season and bedding plants in the spring, and others who are simply dealers, doing a retail business as in a store. Walter A. Faulk has a well stocked stand, carrying a good line of cut flowers. George E. Hallem, Hallem & Miggle, F. C. Hinkle and A. J. Miggle all carry full lines of flowers and plants.

The Blind Floral Co.'s store at 501 Liberty avenue, is very conspicuous with its two corner windows, partitioned off from the store with an ornamental lattice. The office fixtures, the cases and ice box are well placed, while choice large palms on pedestals, tables with vases and bric-a-brac, and vases of fine chrysanthemums artistically placed to add to the decorative effect, make this a very beautiful store. R. J. Daschbach, Inc., at 417 Wood street, with his large show windows, high ceiling, and handsome white enameled fixtures, and stock of plants and chrysanthemums, placed to show to the best advantage, makes a very satisfactory and modern flower shop. Miss C. A. Friel is manager here.

Jacob J. Fuchs, at 1708 Carson street, has a very showy and roomy shop, while the F. H. Reigelmeier store, at 1830 Carson street, is quite metropolitan in its tastefully arranged interior. A very showy white Studebaker car, with commodious body, is a feature of his delivery service.

On the south side, the South Hills Floral Co. has a large store, with a greenhouse in the rear, well equipped for business.

and fight for their very existence; not much can be expected in return.

Dr. Van Fleet has given us many beautiful roses—his Silver Moon, American Pillar, and that splendid variety, Dr. Van Fleet, named by others in honor of him, are a few of his many introductions. May he be spared many years to continue the work he loves so well.

Spiraea Japonica.

When the roots of spirea arrive, do not leave them lying around in a dry state. This plant never does well if allowed to get too dry, even in a dormant stage, and every grower knows that one of the principal things in growing them is to keep them well supplied with water. Those that are to be grown for Easter are better potted at once and kept cool until the first of the year, but before potting soak the clumps well in a tub of water; then after potting water thoroughly and place in a cool, dark place. Those that are to be bloomed for Memorial day or late in spring can be left in the case, but turn the hose on them and give them a good soaking and then put them in a cool, damp cellar until late in winter, when they can be benched or potted as desired.

Pittsburgh Notes.

The out-of-town florist will find much of interest in this great manufacturing center. They are as up-to-date here as in any city of the country. Randolph & McClements, the A. W. Smith Co., Mrs. E. A. Williams, the E. C. Ludwig Floral Co., the Ludwig Floral Co., the Blind Floral Co., and other stores being first class in every respect. Over in the Allegheny district, the Ludwig establishments are a factor. The Ludwig Floral Co., 502 Federal street, have a large, well equipped store, in which all classes of trade is catered to. Decorations are a

The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co., 710 East Diamond street, have also a well stocked store in the Allegheny market where a large business is done, particularly on market days. They employ quite a large force. An extensive trade in funeral work, of which they make a specialty, keeps this department busy at all times. Theirs is a continuous performance, an all night force succeeding the day men, many orders being received at night from their out-of-town customers. The store is beautifully furnished with show cases, all full of selected stock. A series of

SUPPLY OF FINE QUALITY BUT LIMITED.

The long continued cold spell, which we have been experiencing, has had a tendency to keep flowers of all kinds on the short side. The quality of stock being received is all that could be desired, but there is not enough to go around with the possible exception of violets. The prospects for a large supply of cut flowers for the holiday trade is not very bright and florists are planning to push the sale of pot plants of which there seems to be a sufficiency. Roses that are coming in are very good in quality and bring high prices, but many more could be used if they were procurable, American Beauty and Russell being particularly in demand. The same is true of Richmond and Ophelia. The supply of Cecile Brunner is rapidly getting shorter. Lily of the valley is practically cut off the market. Orchids are in splendid demand, but the supply continues extremely short. Quite a few gardenias are coming in, but are snapped up eagerly. Violets, owing to the large acreage planted, are in good supply. A great number of these are shipped daily out of the city to other states. Carnations of good quality are in great demand at good figures; the market cleans up early daily on this item. Some splendid Matchless are being sent in. Belle Washburn is also very popular. Freesias are beginning to come along in limited quantities and are quickly disposed of. Paper Whites are also arriving. The stores are rapidly taking on a holiday appearance, and splendidly grown poinsettias, begonias, cyclamens and berried plants are to be had. The present indications point to a heavy plant trade and the florists are all preparing for it. Some imported holly is to be seen, but the native California redberry practically takes its place in this market. Great quantities of it are arriving daily and are being made into wreaths and for other decorative purposes. There seems to be an abundance of greens of all kinds with the exception of smilax.

NOTES.

Since the dissolution of the Luther Burbank Company, all of the new plants raised by Luther Burbank will be distributed by him from his own nurseries at Santa Rosa. Mr. Burbank welcomed the opportunity which was presented to him four years ago by the formation of the Luther Burbank Company, through which he believed it would be possible for him to devote all his efforts and attention to the creative work and not be burdened by the commercial part of the business. While Mr. Burbank during this period has continued his experimental work and creative development with marked success, yet the commercial and distributive plans of the company were not successful. Mr. Burbank therefore terminated his contract with the company, which is no longer in existence. He has, therefore, decided to resume his former custom of distributing his products direct to the public.

The annual banquet of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society was a splendid success in every way. Notwithstanding the fact that it was a stormy night, the trade from this city and along the peninsula was well represented. Percy Ellings proved a very happy toastmaster. The banquet was a sumptuous one and the "grape" was passed around after the presentation of the cups and medals. The evening was a jolly one and will be long remembered. The next meeting of the society will be the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The daily papers are giving quite a lot of space to writing up the late John Kelly, who died in Sacramento last week. He was gardener for the late Leland Stanford for over 40 years. He left over a quarter of a million dollars to charity, he having no known relatives. Mr. Kelly was a very industrious man, and notwithstanding his wealth, worked for the Stanford estate at small wages until shortly before his death. He was over 90 years old. There are already numerous claimants for his fortune.

In the first suit of its kind ever brought in the state the city of Burlingame has taken action to "abate" the McLellan Nurseries, which occupy four city blocks between the Southern Pacific tracks and the bay. The outcome of this action is being watched with much interest by the trade. Mr. McLellan states that he will fight to a finish, and the trade to a man hopes he will be victorious.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. is displaying a fine lot of Christmas plants at their Powell street store. The poinsettias are especially good. The large supply of this plant at the nursery is practically sold out. The begonia stock and cyclamens are also fine.

The last meeting of the Alameda County Floral Society was held in the Oakland Museum. Prof. R. T. Stevens spoke on "The Landscape Value of Trees and Shrubs." The meeting was largely attended and Mr. Stevens' remarks were well received.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, spent several days in this city during the week, attending to his supply for the holidays. He reports trade as fine in the capital city and says the prospects for Christmas could not be better.

J. E. Beogtholdt, of the Silva, Beogtholdt Co., of Newcastle, was a visitor during the week. He says he is well pleased with the way the nursery business is opening up in the northern part of the state.

The election of officers of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society will take place during the latter part of the month, the date to be announced later.

Cincinnati Notes.

The store of the E. G. Hill Floral Co. has very artistically arranged windows; one with Christmas wreaths, baskets and plants, underneath a large white enameled pergola-like structure was attractive, while another nicely arranged in a garden effect, with sheet moss, cork bark, and low vases, generously filled with orange calendulas, was very striking.

A couple of live white tumbler pigeons, sat very complacently on perches among the flowers, looking at the crowd, constantly attracted by the novel sight. These windows were arranged by John G. Chisholm, the young floral artist in charge of all their designs and decorations. Henry Sheppard, the efficient manager of the store, is the "Woodrow Wilson" of Cincinnati; his resemblance in all but age, to that celebrated gentleman, being most striking.

Bour & Co. have a very much up-to-date store, their wide front furnishing an abundant space for decorative effect that is well handled. Their large flower case was full of choice chrysanthemums and other flowers nicely arranged. A large fountain was a feature. A splendid line of baskets decorated one of the long side cases. Cases filled with knick-knacks of all kinds, vases, etc., had a place. The wide show windows were full of Christmas plants and suggestions; one section displayed a number of flower floats with Ophelia roses. This is a very pretty store.

Edward A. Forter's good looking shop at 128 West Fourth street, was a model of neatness; all the fixtures were in white enamel; ice box, electrically lighted cases, mirrors and show window, all spotlessly white. Counter show cases of all glass were tastefully filled with ribbons, vases and other floral bric-a-brac. A bank of palms along the rear side wall was a pleasing feature. A large work room in the rear contained auxiliary storage boxes for cut flowers. Miss Forter is her father's bookkeeper—a most competent assistant.

Hardesty & Co. had their windows filled with choice cyclamens, boxwood wreaths and other Christmas suggestions. Log cabin boxes filled with flowering and foliage plants, samples for the holidays, were nicely done and seasonable. The ice box was filled with choice Russell, Killarney, Hoosier Beauty and other roses. Orders were coming in nicely for the holidays.

A flying visit to this Ohio city, allowed but a hasty glance at some of the retail stores, which in their neat and tasty appearance and in some elaborate adornments, are all that could be desired. K.

Columbus, O.

HEAVY CHRISTMAS DEMAND EXPECTED.

Up to present writing, Christmas trade has been exceptionally good, with every prospect that the fine holiday business of last year will be surpassed. There appears to be no end to roses; practically all varieties are well represented, and they are of excellent quality. American Beauty is held at from $8 to $20, and prices range down to as low as $1.50 for the least desirable. The average selling figure is a satisfactory one to florists. The supply of carnations will not be able to stand the volume of buying; the increasing scarcity has sent the price up to $1.50 on white and pink, and $2 on red. Lily of the valley is bringing $1, double violets $1.50, and ordinary violets 75 cents to $1. Sweet peas are very scarce, some florists being entirely out of this favorite. Other prices on staple stock are, calendulas 75 cents, and narcissi 75 cents to $1. Orchids run from $1.50 to $4 each. In the more strictly holiday stock, azaleas range from $3 upward. Cut poinsettias sell from $5 to $10 a dozen, and poinsettias in pots from 50 cents upward. All kinds of Christmas greenery is in good demand. There is a lively trade in small filled baskets. Some stores are showing attractive displays of artificial flowers, but they do not receive much favor. The artificial wreath trade is quite heavy. C. J.

OBITUARY.

William Crawford Barry.

William Crawford Barry, president of Ellwanger & Barry, Inc., Rochester, N. Y., died at 7:30 o'clock, December 12, at his home, No. 706 Mount Hope avenue, of pneumonia, with which he was stricken three days previous. He was 69 years old.

Mr. Barry took a leader's part in the birth and growth of Rochester's park system. For 26 years he was president of the Western New York Horticultural Society. He was president of the Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co., which his father helped to found; was a director of the Flour City National Bank before its consolidation with the German-American Bank, which became the Lincoln National Bank; was vice-president of the Lincoln Bank, chairman of the executive committee and a director, and was a trustee of the Monroe County Savings Bank.

The Western New York Horticultural Society would not permit Mr. Barry to retire from the office of president. His urging that a successor be elected and his arguments to the effect that his year-after-year reign was unfair to other men who would make competent leaders fell upon deaf ears. The presidency was Mr. Barry's from 1890, and in his administration the membership grew from 300 to 1,500.

Mr. Barry was deeply interested in the State College of Agriculture at Cornell University and in the establishment of agricultural experiment stations. He was president of the Board of Control of the New York State Experiment Station for three years. He served as president of the Eastern Nurserymen's Association, as first president of the American Rose Society, and was member of the American Pomological Society.

From the time the park board was created to the day in 1915 on which it passed out of existence, Mr. Barry was chairman of the Highland Park committee. Highland Park was one of his children, and he took pride in its cumulative popularity. He gave to it a collection of peonies; in this way and that he added to it, got appropriations for it, and by grace of friendly scientists, such as Dr. Charles S. Sargent, of the Arnold Arboretum, increased its floral and shrub wealth.

Mr. Barry made a study of the lilac and in 1909 published a pamphlet on it, in the hope that other people might derive the same enjoyment that he did from the flower's fragrance and beauty. He wrote the "lilac time should be celebrated in every home and made a feature, marking a period which can not only be looked forward to with delightful anticipation, but recurred to as an event with pleasant memories." He also wrote a useful pamphlet on outdoor roses.

Mr. Barry leaves three sons, William C. Barry, Jr., Frederick G. Barry and Arthur A. Barry; a daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Stearns, and a sister, Mrs. Bernhard Leisching. Funeral services were held at St. Patrick's Cathedral, December 13, and the burial in Holy Sepulchre cemetery was private.

Mr. Barry was born in Rochester September 17, 1847, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Barry. He was the oldest of eight children. His father, who was born in Ireland, came to this country in 1836. After teaching school for several years, Patrick Barry entered the nursery business at Flushing, L. I. He came to Rochester in 1840, and at the time of his death was known as a nurseryman all over the United States. Mrs. Patrick Barry was born in Richfield, N. Y.

Wm. C. Barry received his education from a tutor and in the parochial schools of this city. Later he attended Seton Hall College, South Orange, N. J. After he was graduated his father took him, with a brother, to London. They were to have at least two years of study—1867-68—on the continent. The young men went to Berlin and to Heidelberg, and afterwards to the University of Louvain, in Belgium. Then they went to Paris, and when they returned to the United States in 1869 they had acquired fluent use of French and German. Mr. Barry married Miss Louise Gaffney,

The Late Wm. C. Barry.

February 11, 1874. She died five years ago.

William Barry went to New York and took a position with what was then one of the largest seed houses in the country, that he might have practical knowledge to bring to the firm of Ellwanger & Barry. With the nursery that bears his name he mastered the minutiae of each department, one by one.

His mind was a reservoir of knowledge from which the city drew freely and gratefully when it began to see that in the stretches of land along the Genesee it had something to give posterity besides man-built streets. The park commission was organized April 27, 1888, and the firm of Ellwanger & Barry gave to the city about 20 acres of land adjoining the Highland reservoir as the first step in the creation of a park system.

Mr. Barry was a charter member of the Chamber of Commerce; the certificate of incorporation of which was signed June 15, 1888. He served continually on the board of directors up to the time of his illness.

Mr. Barry was a member of the Genesee Valley Club and the Country Club of Rochester.

Joseph Erskine Hoopes.

Joseph Erskine Hoopes, of Muscatine, Ia., one of the leading truck gardeners of the state and head of the well-known firm of J. E. Hoopes & Co., seed growers, whose serious illness was announced in our issue of December 16, page 1210, died at his home in that city December 15. His death was due to atrophy, the result of a fall in 1913, since which time he had been in failing health.

Mr. Hoopes was born in Cambria county, Pa., in 1853, but located in Muscatine in 1856. He received his business education in that city, and with his brother embarked in the truck gardening business in 1875. This partnership was dissolved in 1889, and J. E. Hoopes became a partner in the firm of Hahn, Hoopes & Co., which was succeeded by the present firm of J. E. Hoopes & Co. In 1893, a seed department which has become a prominent feature of the firm's business was added, the trade extending throughout the central west. He is survived by his widow, two sons, one daughter, two brothers and two sisters.

Mr. Hoopes was active in the civic and religious life of the city, prominently identified with many of the city's industries and was a member of the Muscatine County Crop Improvement Association and other organizations.

Herbert W. Johnson

Herbert W. Johnson, one of the founders of the American Seed Trade Association, formerly prominent in the seed trade of Philadelphia, Pa., as one of the partners in the firm of Johnson & Stokes, established in 1860, and later as head of the Johnson Seed Co. until that concern became insolvent in 1915, died at his home in Haddonfield, N. J., December 10, aged 65 years. Bright's disease was the cause of his death, he having been a sufferer from that malady for the past two years.

Mr. Johnson was born in Bucks county, Pa., in 1850, and was educated in the Friends' school of Philadelphia. In addition to his business activities, he was prominent in public life, having served two terms as state senator in New Jersey, was sheriff of Camden county, from which position he resigned after about one year, and was a member of the state board of health at the time of his death. He was also prominently identified with the Commercial Exchange of Philadelphia and the Bourse of that city. A widow, two sons and two daughters survive.

Charles J. Blackert.

Charles J. Blackert, a well-known retail florist of St. Louis, Mo., with greenhouses at 4426 Labadie avenue that city, died December 9, aged 72 years. He was born in Sweden and came to this country 45 years ago. He was well known to the local trade in St. Louis and in his earlier days held a prominent place among the florists of St. Louis, but has been ailing for some time, although heart disease which was the cause of his death developed but a few months ago. He is survived by a widow and three children. The business will be continued by his son, Charles B. Blackert, Jr.

X. Y. Z.

Jerome Jones.

Jerome Jones, well known philanthropist and patron of horticulture, died at his home in Boston, Mass., December 13, aged 79 years. Heart failure which followed a bronchial attack, resulted in his death. Mr. Jones established the Henry A. Gane Memorial Fund of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and will be remembered in the florist trade in connection with the chrysanthemum. Mrs. Jerome Jones, introduced in 1898, and named for the late Mrs. Jones by Mr. Gane, her father.

Samuel Snyder.

Samuel Snyder, aged 40 years, who for the past 17 years has conducted a retail store at Second avenue and 59th street, New York, died in Flower hospital, that city, December 17.

ROSE growers are having considerable trouble in securing their manetti stocks. The English growers are apparently sold out, according to cables, not being able to entirely fill early orders. French stock is also very scarce, shipments being delayed by railway troubles and slow ocean freight service. Prices in consequence are higher for small lots, if there are any available.

MUCH loss has been experienced by the trade caused by the recent sudden and extreme low temperatures. In late November and early December the delayed shipments of azaleas were in many cases a total loss. In the more recent zero weather, tender plants sent by express, although packed most carefully, have in many shipments, suffered severely and in others were rendered useless, this in part being due to congested conditions and almost a blockade of express service.

TINFOIL users will be likely to pay higher rates, the price of lead having advanced to $8.

Smith's Killarney Sport.

We have received from Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich., some fine blooms of his Killarney sport, the color and general character greatly resembling Killarney Brilliant. The flowers and good stems with fine foliage show fine culture. Supt. Collins says several thousand plants of this sport are grown and that the flowers find ready sale.

Wolfe Buys Waco Floral Co.

T. J. Wolfe, of Waco, Tex., on December 14, purchased the entire holdings of the Waco Floral Co., in that city, including five houses, each 25x150 feet, one propagating house, 12x150 feet, five acres of land with house and barns, and the entire stock of plants, etc. Mr. Wolfe reports that business is exceptionally good and the outlook for the coming year is excellent.

Detroit Flower Pot Co. Shuts Down.

The Detroit Flower Pot Co., Detroit, Mich., established in 1853, has announced, through its representative, Harry Balsley, under date of December 12, that labor and fuel conditions, car shortage, embargoes on freight, smoke ordinance and other matters over which it has no control, have forced the closing of the plant indefinitely. The hope is expressed, however, that the factory may be able to renew operations at some future date.

The Late Wm. C. Barry.

A great leader in horticulture has departed, Wm. C. Barry, who has been for nearly 30 years one of the foremost men in commercial horticulture in America. He has also been in his home city a leader in civic affairs. During the most of this period no forward movement in the artistic or practical side of our art has been complete without his freely given powerful aid. His was a notable personality, always a striking and respected figure in every gathering. His passing leaves a vacancy in horticulture and in the hearts of his associates which can not be filled.

Express Shipments of Cut Flowers.

Edward Reid's plan to make flowers "special delivery" matter at Philadelphia, which the express companies agreed to try out in this Christmas rush, will be watched with great interest by the trade everywhere. There have been many appeals to these carriers to give flowers, on account of their perishable nature, danger from frost, etc., right of way over the mass of general holiday shipments. This, however, has always been denied on the ground that it was impossible to keep separate or give special attention to any one class of goods. Should Mr. Reid's plan work out it will save the florists of the country many thousands of dollars annually. Growers who seldom get to town, should, however, keep in close touch with their representatives. The quality of their stock, packing conditions and time of its arrival, are vital matters, errors in which should be discovered and corrected before their disclosure in small returns.

American Rose Society.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society at its meeting, December 11, in New York, registered the rose, Mrs. Chas. Gersdorff, a new climbing hybrid tea offered by Chas. E. F. Gersdorff, Washington, D. C., described as follows: The plant is of strong climbing habit, sending strong canes yearly from the root, both in spring and fall; strong thorns, not too thickly set; profuse and almost constant flowering habit; flowers generally born singly though always in clusters of two to four; foliage very durable, remaining in good condition in hot sunshine for five days by actual test; buds large like tulips in shape; color, a beautiful Killarney pink, shading to bluish shell pink. The flowers possess a strong hybrid tea fragrance. Have grown these roses for past seven years outdoors without protection in both northern and southern exposures without winter killing.

An invitation was received from Cleveland, O., for the co-operation of the American Rose Society with the Cleveland flower show to be held in November, 1917. November 7 will be designated as special rose day at that time. This invitation was accepted.

A contract was ordered signed for the use of the First Regiment Armory for the spring show in Philadelphia, March 20-23, 1917. Arrangements are being made for a center attraction on the floor of rose gardens.

The committee on plant schedule and prizes reported, and the support received so far has caused an increase of the amount to be awarded for cut roses. There will be a special gold medal valued at $50 offered by Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, and the Toronto Horticultural Society has also sent medals. The preliminary schedule of prizes will be issued at an early date.

The death of S. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., was reported. Mr. Reuter was one of the substantial life members of the society, and the sense of the committee was expressed in the following:

Resolved, That this committee express to our vice-president, Louis J. Reuter and his family, the sincere regret of all at the loss sustained by them in the death of Mr. Reuter, senior, who was one of the early life members of the American Rose Society, and a man respected by all, and that the secretary be directed to transmit the same to Mr. Reuter's family.

SHORTAGE OF PLANTS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Due to the extreme cold weather and the approaching holidays, the supply of cut flowers the past week was light, and with a good demand prices stiffened considerably by the end of the week. As the supply of plants for the Christmas trade is not up to the usual number, cut flowers will in a good many cases act as substitutes. Hence, we predict that the growers with the goods will have all reasons to be satisfied.

NOTES.

Wm. A. Kennedy and Eugene Oestreich, as delegates of the florists' club, went to Madison, Wis., December 13, to take part in the programme of the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, which held its annual meeting at the state capitol building. The former read a paper on "Soil," while the latter chose "System" for his topic. The meeting, which extended over a period of four days was well attended and many instructive papers were read and freely discussed. Jos. J. Kolb, the practical grower in charge of the state university greenhouses, after looking us up, is responsible for all we saw during our short stay, and that is what we call brotherly love. He in turn introduced us to Geo. Renschler, of the Renschler Floral Co., who, with the aid of his auto, showed their two greenhouse ranges, plus their retail store. The store, which is in the heart of the city, is strictly up to date in every respect, having an ice machine and cooling room in the basement, while the main floor is taken up by a spacious work and display room, all kept just so. At the greenhouses in the city, where Fred Renschler presides, the bulk of their pot plants and bulbs are grown, while the larger range at Fair Oaks is devoted to cut flowers and spring stock. Of the latter, they grow large quantities, being at the entrance of two cemeteries. In cut flowers they have several houses of carnations, while callas, snapdragons, single violets, poinsettias, chrysanthemums, smilax and plumosus are grown for the store. All the stock looked fine and the houses could not have looked neater.

On December 13 occurred the death of Mrs. John W. Dunlop, aged 87 years, mother of John M. Dunlop, Wauwatosa, Wis. She came to Milwaukee from Sheboygan in 1839 and had lived here ever since; of late with her daughter, Mrs. J. O. Martin. Besides Mrs. Martin and John M., Henry W. and Charles L. Dunlop survive.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. only has about half as much coal on hand as compared to a year ago; out of a total of 70 cases of azaleas, which arrived a short time ago, they realized about 800 good plants. After being properly adjusted by revenue and express agents, the poor ones were reduced to wood ashes.

The A. F. Kellner Co. reports many advance orders for decorating during the holidays; by advertising they have created quite a demand for porch boxes filled with evergreens of the different varieties, but due to the poor transportation facilities, they cannot always get the stock when they need it.

While at the last writing we reported warm weather accompanied by a thunder shower, which made stock soft, we have since experienced a cold spell, which started December 13, and is still with us, December 17, the thermometer on that date going down to four below.

The most important social event of this week will be the horse show, which will be given December 20 at the Auditorium for the benefit of the Children's Free hospital.

PREPARATIONS FOR HEAVY PLANT SALES.

The trade has been making extensive preparations for Christmas. The plant line is to be enlarged upon this year, notwithstanding the fact that good cyclamens and azaleas will be very scarce. However, Lorraine, Cincinnati and Chatelaine begonias, solanums, peppers, crotons, primroses, ferns, poinsettias and Scotch heather will be available and the quality is excellent. Poinsettias especially will be in good supply in both pots and cut blooms. On the latter the price will range from $1.50 to $5 per dozen. Roses are not overplentiful and the quality is below standard. The carnation supply will be ample for all requirements, but the price will be lower than that of previous years. A larger supply of sweet peas and violets will be disposed of than last year. The supply of green goods will not be abundant. Prices are at top-notch. General business during the past week has not been good, but the advance orders for the holiday trade have been exceptional.

NOTES.

A. F. J. Baur attended a recent meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club, where he exhibited his Merry Christmas carnation, which scored 89 points. He announces that the premium list for the exhibition of the American Carnation Society is ready for distribution. All entries must be in by January 21. All further information may be had by addressing A. F. J. Baur, secretary, Thirty-eighth street and Rockwood avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Circle Flower Store, known to the public as the "indoor garden," has been meeting with success. The blue clouded overhead effect, pergolas and garden seats make it very realistic. Refined and elegant taste in the arrangement have caused it to be made one of the most beautiful stores in the central states.

The monthly meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held January 9, the place to be announced later. A morning session will be in charge of the local convention committees of the American Carnation Society. The regular business session will begin at 2 p. m.

This city is expecting a large out-of-town attendance at the convention of the American Carnation Society to be held here January 31-February 1. A meeting of the local convention committees was held December 6 and arrangements made for the entertainment of the visitors.

C. H. Bookedis, the Claypool Florist, has returned from Chicago, where he was looking after his holiday requirements. Since his return he has created one of the most beautiful Christmas window decorations in this city.

NATURAL SPRUCE MINIATURE CHRISTMAS TREES

With Round Birchwood Stand

November, 1909, we introduced these beautiful Decorative Spruce Trees to the Trade, and the supply each season has not equaled the demand. They are almost perfect in shape and in various heights of from 15 inches to 42 inches with a spread of 12 inches to 42 inches. The base is firmly attached to a round block of selected white birch about 5 inches in diameter, and they are not only desirable for general decoration, but likewise suited for basket and other artistic work. We have arranged for an increased number for the coming season, but urge early purchase for shipment as wanted.

SUPPLY MOVES WELL AT FAIR PRICES.

The present week finds us in the midst of real winter, the temperature hovering close to the zero mark, and many shipments of out-of-town stock are received in a partly frozen condition. The supply has not been overplentiful and has moved satisfactorily at fair prices. The opening of the Guardian Bank building last week and that of the Union National bank the week previous cleaned up an enormous amount of stock on the local market, especially long-stemmed American Beauty, Ophelia, Russell and Hoosier Beauty. Other roses are in good supply and the quality is excellent. American Beauty is among the leaders in popularity; some extra good stock is arriving daily and the Christmas crop promises to be excellent. The same may be said of Ophelia, Sunburst, Russell, Hoosier Beauty and the Killarneys. Ward and Mme. Pirrie are also in good supply and are having a good call. The outlook for lily of the valley is not encouraging for a plentiful supply, but there will be orchids to meet all requirements and the same is true of violets. The supply of carnations will be short from all indications, as early ordering is noticed all along the line. There is no uneasiness about Paper Whites and stevia but snapdragon will be among the scarce items. Asparagus plumosus and adiantum will be in good supply. The past two weeks have moved large quantities of Christmas greens, such as boxwood, smilax and holly. There continues to be a good call for winter berries. Business in the supply houses has been gratifying, ruscus, static, crepe paper, mats, Minerva grass, red frieze and other items moving freely and all indications point to big Christmas sales. Advance orders for cut flowers show buyers are purchasing early to be on the safe side. The retailers are advertising extensively as they always do at this time of the year and their offerings in the daily papers cover almost everything seasonable. Nearly every retail store in the downtown district has decorations more or less pretentious and

SHORT SUPPLY CAUSES HIGH PRICES.

Business during the past week has been very good, with supply and demand about equal. Extremely cold weather and dark days are causing apprehension of a shortage for Christmas sales. Shipping trade has been very brisk, funeral work in good demand and counter sales satisfactory on Christmas goods on the order of ruscus, greens and wreaths. Advance orders for cut flowers for Christmas have been numerous. Many local growers report roses off crop and the carnation supply appears limited, one dealer quoting roses as high as $40 per 100 and $12 for carnations. Azaleas and poinsettias will be scarce, but there are other plants available in variety, including cyclamens, begonias, hyacinths and narcissi. There will also be many novelties in the way of plant baskets, vases, etc.

NOTES.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey made a special exhibit of their orchid collection during the "open house" at their greenhouses December 17. This collection occupies six houses and includes many handsome varieties, such as dendrobiums, phalaenopsis, vandas, cypripediums, oncidiums and cattleyas. This firm will cut over 3,000 orchids for the Christmas trade.

Miss Rhoda Doswell, of the Doswell Floral Co., whose engagement to Mr. H. J. Wickman, a manufacturer, of St. Louis, is announced, is well known to the trade and her many friends are extending sincere good wishes for a very bright future. The wedding will take place in January.

HEAVY EARLY CHRISTMAS DEMAND.

The early Christmas demand for stock is very brisk and exceeds all expectations and makes certain a grand cleanup before the rush is over, as was predicted in last week's market report. The cold wave, which reached this vicinity December 14, when the thermometer registered as low as 2 degrees below zero, affected the supply somewhat, but the bright and warmer weather, which set in the following Sunday, is strengthening the supply for the local demand, but at that there will not be anywhere near enough stock to go around if the weather is at all favorable for the retail trade. Many incoming shipments of flowers, including violets from New York and California, reached here frozen and many complaints have been heard in regard to shipments of plants meeting the same fate, which were sent out during the cold snap. The out-of-town demand for stock is the heaviest in years and represents a large number of wholesale markets, including New York, Boston, St. Louis, Cleveland, Detroit, Kansas City, Milwaukee and other points. Several of the eastern growers have shipped American Beauty roses here this week and the local growers in turn have filled orders from exactly the same territory, which leads one to believe that the eastern supply is not as heavy as was first expected or else the early demand is as good as here and the dealers are obliged to fall back on this market. The demand for American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses is brisk and there will be no surplus when the Christmas trade is over. Roses and carnations, particularly red, are having a splendid call and several of the dealers are already refusing orders for same. Stock in general is moving nicely and about the only item that has not moved as quickly as one would expect is lily of the valley, which probably never moved so slow for several months as it did last week. Red winter berries have advanced in price, and while some fairly good stock is being offered, the bulk is far below the quality offered in former years. The plant dealers are completely sold out in all blooming stock and have had to refuse orders all week, consequently the late buyers are ordering more cut flowers, and from present indications, the Christmas trade this year as far as the wholesaler is concerned, promises to be the best and most satisfactory ever. A large shipment of California holly has just arrived and is moving quickly owing to the scarcity of good red winter berries. Boxwood and other green goods are in heavy demand and at times during the week have been in short supply.

NOTES.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is offering a good supply of pussy willows for Christmas in addition to a most complete line of all seasonable cut flowers, including a late crop of Jennie Nonin and Dr. Enguehard chrysanthemums. Trade at this house is very brisk, with a grand cleanup every day.

August Jurgens, 2247 Herndon street, was operated upon for appendicitis at the Alexian Bros. hospital, Friday, December 15. His many friends in the trade will be pleased to read that he passed through the ordeal successfully and is well on the road to recovery.

Peter Reinberg has a splendid supply of roses for his Christmas trade, particularly American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Richmond, which are in exceptionally brisk demand. Emil Reichling, superintendent of the greenhouses, is sending the cuts down to the store as fast as his brother, Felix Reichling, can dispose of them. The shipping trade, so far this week, has been extra heavy, and considerable stock was shipped to many far eastern points.

P. L. McKee and Ben Du Pre, of the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., made an automobile trip from Fort Dodge, Ia., to this city, December 15, and encountered zero weather all the way. They did not even have an extra tire and the only excess baggage amounted to a dime wrench, which they could have just as well left behind, for the entire trip was made without a single mishap.

The Alpha Floral Co. is going after the Christmas business in good style and has its store decorated most beautifully for the occasion. Several display advertisements in last Sunday's editions of the local dailies should prove to be money well spent, for they appeared early enough to let the public know what it could get and what it would have to pay for all the stock offered.

Percy Jones is handling a large quantity of fancy freesias, which are in brisk demand, and is offering a splendid supply of orchids and all other cut flowers. This firm is distributing a mammoth shipment of boxwood and seems to have enough to go around, notwithstanding the fact that it is scarce in most quarters.

Chas. Siebrecht, of the Siebrecht Floral Co., Winona, Minn., was in the city December 16, buying stock for his Christmas trade. He has a fine lot of cyclamens and azaleas of his own to offer this year, consequently is not worrying over the general shortage of plants.

Erne & Klingel report the early Christmas demand as very brisk with a heavy call for short and medium stemmed roses. Boxwood and winterberries have also had an exceptionally good call.

Joe Marks, with A. Henderson & Co., is back from a trip through the northwest with a book full of orders and a new line of stories.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. cleaned up completely in plants for Christmas and will do the same in cut flowers for the stock it is offering is of the highest quality possible, especially as far as the American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are concerned. Carnations and all other stock are also in good supply and of splendid quality. The supply department is busy as can be with last-minute orders and reports a splendid holiday demand. Red and green frieze is selling well this week but there is plenty on hand to fill all the late orders that may arrive.

The firm of J. A. Budlong is having its share of the Christmas business with an extra heavy call from out-of-town points. Roses and carnations are seen in large supply at this establishment, particularly Milady, which is in heavy demand.

M. C. Gunterberg has a large quantity of choice violets to offer for Christmas in addition to her regular line of other seasonable stock. She certainly deserves the title of "Violet Queen."

The McKinley Park Florist cut indoor grown asters as late as December 18 and cordially invites anyone that doubts this to visit the greenhouses and inspect the plants.

George Reinberg is so strong on Richmond and Ophelia roses that Manager Northam expects to be able to fill all his orders in full.

Hoerber Bros. are on deck again with a fine crop of roses for Christmas.

The George Wittbold Co. is sending out a beautiful Christmas folder done in colors which is the finest and most appropriate that any firm has ever issued. The cover represents a flower box neatly tied with Christmas string with the firm's trade mark occupying the left hand corner and wording to the right, "What gifts more beautiful than flowers?" The first inside page is devoted to their handsome new conservatories on Buckingham place and if this kind of advertising does not bring results nothing will. It is a credit to their advertising man, who has devoted the last page to a perforated order blank so all that the buyer has to do is to fill it, tear it out and mail it in.

Crosby-Gustus-Eryinger Co. are placing a new revolving plant stand on the market, which is attracting much favorable attention at Weiland & Risch's store, where it is on display. It stands five feet high and is made entirely of steel with the exception of a wooden base, and has three separate revolving platforms which will easily hold about 20 vases of cut flowers or small plants. The manufacturers have applied for a patent and will call their product the Florists' Revolving Display Stand, which, with the present cost of material, can be retailed at $20 each.

O. J. Friedman had the decoration at the Blackstone hotel for the Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Wacker reception, Friday evening, December 15, given in honor of their daughter, who made her debut into society on that day. The order consisted of a ball room and dining room decoration and the arrangement of flowers sent by their many friends. Seventy-five tables were artistically decorated with pink roses and over 1,000 guests were present. It was one of the largest orders that Friedman has filled for some time and was arranged most artistically and greatly admired by everyone present.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. have received another heavy shipment of California holly, which is moving fast, owing to the scarcity of good winter berries. Orchids, American Beauty roses and all other cut flowers are in large supply here and the early Christmas orders point to a record holiday trade. Mr. Vaughan has been on the sick list for over a week, but is on the job at Wietor Bros. are having a splendid Christmas trade with a heavy demand from out-of-town for all kinds of stock. They are offering a splendid grade of roses, particularly American Beauty and Richmond, which are in large crop with them. Bonfire and Rosette carnations are a leader at this establishment and are selling like hot cakes.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting from the largest crop of carnations they ever had for the holidays and there is no question but what their new variety, Belle Washburn, is the best red on their list. This variety is in heavy demand for the holidays and is bringing the highest market price.

Winterson's seed store is distributing a heavy shipment of miniature Christmas trees which are in excellent demand. Many of the local retail florists are using them to good advantage in basket work, owing to the scarcity of suitable plants, and report that they are taking well with their customers.

Lou Bunt is doing the buying again in the market for the Ernst Wienhoeber Co., after helping the store force get things in shape for Christmas. William Wienhoeber took his place while he helped the boys out at the store.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are more than pleased with their Christmas trade, which, so far, has exceeded all expectations, and promises to be brisk up to the last minute.

The E. C. Amling Co. expects to be comfortably located in its new quarters about January 8, and will start moving immediately after the holidays.

Chas. Strombach, the landscape gardener, Wilmette, has gone to Florida for the winter, where he plans to land some big fish.

Carl Thomas' many friends are pleased to find him back on the job at the A. L. Randall Co.'s cut flower department.

MARKET CLEANS UP EARLY.

The first of this week found the market rather short on stock. Everything that came in cleaned up readily. There has been some heavy shipping of supplies, boxwood and greens to out-of-town points. Receipts in roses are not as heavy as they were, but the carnation cut is holding up nicely and should give us a fair supply for Christmas. Poinsettias are in excellent crop and are in fine condition. Easter lilies are very plentiful. Lily of the valley, too, is seen in good quantities. Stevia and narcissi are in a fair supply. Other offerings include violets, orchids, sweet peas and callas.

NOTES.

Ed Schumann & Sons, in a recent fire at their establishment, sustained a loss of $1,000, partly covered by insurance.

C. E. Critchell is getting an excellent cut of poinsettias for Christmas from the Rosebank Co.

P. J. Olinger has a good cut of his new red carnation. Radium, for his holiday business.

Geo. Klotter is sending some excellent double stevia to L. H. Kyrk.

GENERAL CLEANUP EXPECTED.

The wholesale houses are looking forward to one of the largest years in history, as advance orders are coming in earlier than usual. Most all the orders are shipped and the supply houses are busy sending out odds and ends that some retailers are short of. Boxwood is cleaned up as well as ground pine and sheet moss. The latter is now selling at $2 and $2.50 per sack. Mistletoe and winter berries are all sold and perhaps by the end of the week all other material will be cleaned up, which will make one of the largest holiday's flower business this city has ever known. The great question now is, "What about express shipments?" This is going to be hard to answer. It has been bad enough for the past six months, but what will it be like during the Christmas rush? We all look for shipments to be one day late at least. Flowers should have the preference, but then it is out of the question to ask it during the mad rush. American Beauties did not sell well last week, as they are too high in price and the zero weather shut off business to some extent. In fact, all flowers were slow in selling. Violets were plentiful, but sold well considering other markets. Paper Whites and stevia sell very well. Sweet peas have a large demand and indications are that there will be only a limited supply for Christmas. Yellow daisies are scarce. Good blooming plants are scarce and in demand. This may make the demand for cut flowers greater and perhaps the late buyers will have to pay a slight advance.

EXCEPTIONALLY HEAVY ADVANCE DEMAND.

Indications pointing strongly to one of the best Christmas periods in history is indicated by reports from the trade in this city generally, orders being placed early and the number of patrons far greater than in previous years. Pot plants, as usual, are expected to lead the van, the demand for "gifts that grow" seeming to be gaining year by year, although cut flowers and corsages will continue to hold their place. All local florists have ordered heavy supplies, especially in the plant line, and some fine begonias and poinsettias are to be seen. The blooms of primulas are also exceptionally fine, especially those of obconica and chinensis. Azaleas will be scarce. Solanums and Christmas peppers all look good, but the supply of bougainvilleas is limited. Cyclamens, in the various colors, look to be the best of all. Heather also proves to be gaining in popularity yearly. Plant baskets will also prove a big factor in the holiday sales. The cut flower supply will include the following items at prices about as noted: American Beauty, $2 to $12 per dozen; other roses, $8 to $35 per 100; carnations, red, $10 per 100; white and pink, $5 to $8; lily of the valley, plentiful at from $5 to $8; narcissi, white and yellow, $4; stevia, $2 to $3; Easter lilies, $12 to $15; violets, $1.50; orchids, $12 per dozen. All green goods are in heavy demand. The one thing that an improvement is looked for in is the weather. The temperature last week has been down to zero, with snow flurries every day. If this state of affairs continues it will be necessary to wrap every package and plant and use utmost care in delivery.

As representative in this section of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, the writer extends to all his best wishes for a two-fold Christmas and New Year's trade.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

The annual banquet of the above organization, December 14, was attended by exactly one-half of its list of members. While the caterer was preparing the tables a short business session was held at which the report of the flower show auditing committee, through its chairman, W. B. Girvin, of Leola, was presented showing a surplus of $176.95 in the club's favor, which was a delightful surprise, considering the many difficulties having had to be met, due to election week. The programme committee reported a carnation meeting for January 18, at which Elmer Weaver of Ronks will give his experiences with a number of last season's introductions. Exhibits are looked for from introducers of new varieties for 1917. J. D. Barry was elected a member of the club's amateur class, his porch boxes easy qualifying him for admission, having been recognized in an illustrated magazine article. Officers for 1917 were nominated as follows: For president, H. A. Shroyer, Lancaster; vice-president, Elmer Weaver of Ronks, and W. B. Girvin of Leola; secretary, Frank L. Kohr, Lancaster; treasurer, Harry K. Rohrer, Lancaster. An adjournment was then taken to the banquet hall which had been splendidly decorated by Lemon Landis, H. D. Rohrer and B. F. Barr.

The repast which followed, to quote the words of our only visitor, T. J. Nolan, was "a wonder from a quality point of view." Of course we all know he has kissed the Blarney stone, but we also know that one can travel many miles before being served with a better dinner than right here in "Little Old Lancaster." Coffee and cigars, the latter at the expense of H. A. Schroyer as they had been presented to him earlier in the evening as a mark of appreciation for services in the past year, followed. In the course of the dinner President Schroyer presented the Henry F. Michell medals with a neat little speech in each instance. The winners were: Elmer Weaver, for best display of cut flowers and plants combined; B. F. Barr, for best table arrangement at our flower show. W. J. Brinton made a few fitting remarks applicable to the season and the treatment of the holiday trade so as to make permanent customers instead of periodical ones. Billiards, pool, cards and bowling rounded out a most delightful evening, and it was not until a late hour that the members departed for their homes, shedding tears of sympathy for those who were unable to attend.

BUSINESS GOOD ON THE AVERAGE.

Although business became somewhat slack toward the middle of last week, the general average could be considered fair, with the cold weather which arrived unexpectedly on Monday. The supply shortened and prices were a trifle higher than usual. American Beauty is scarce but the quality is excellent and they sold at from $2.50 to $5 per dozen. Mrs. Charles Russell was also scarce and the quality was disappointing. The demand is good, however, and those that reach the market are disposed of at from $6 to $25 per 100. The supply of other roses is good and the demand fair. Carnations are plentiful and the quality is excellent. Some sold as high as $4 per 100. The supply of violets is short but the quality is better than ever and indications are they will be plentiful for the holidays. Lily of the valley continues high in price and the supply is good. Prices vary from $4 to $6 per 100. Callas and Harrisii are plentiful and the demand for same is quite good. The market is fairly supplied with all kinds of greens.

NOTES.

H. G. Berning recently paid a visit to the Gullett & Sons range at Lincoln, Ill. He states that the roses at this establishment show fine condition and the cold weather will hold them in splendid shape for the Christmas trade.

Wm. Bruecker, who conducts a flower shop at 4424 Marcus avenue, fell from a stepladder December 11 and broke three ribs. His condition is still serious but he is improving.

The meeting of the florists' club held December 14 was well attended. The reports of the spring flower show committees were read and all indications point to a grand success.

The wholesalers are booking numerous orders for the holiday season. Stock will be plentiful and all anticipate better business than in any previous year.

At the Windler Wholesale Floral Co.'s establishment very fine violets and sweet peas are seen daily. This firm reports very good business.

The death of Charles J. Blackert, well-known retailer of this city, who died December 9, is recorded elsewhere in this issue.

The force at the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.'s store are busy preparing wreaths in many sizes for the holidays.

Grimm & Gorly had a splendid display of about 50 fountains in their window which attracted much attention.

Andrew Meyer, Jr., a daily visitor to the market, reports fair business.

The Tri-City Florists' Club met in regular session at the Deere conservatories in Moline with Messrs. Anderson and Sorenson as hosts, the meeting being called to order by President L. Stapp. It was decided to hold a Tri-City flower show in the Masonic hall, Rock Island, November 2-4, 1917.

A well prepared paper on "Pot Plants for Christmas and the Holidays," was read by P. G. Pearson, which was followed by a general discussion. An excellent luncheon was served and a social session was enjoyed. After extending a hearty vote of thanks to the hosts, the session adjourned to meet with L. Stapp, January 12, 1917.

SHORTAGE IN CHRISTMAS SUPPLY FEARED.

Active preparations for the Christmas rush are now on and much anxiety is felt by the retailers because of the apparent shortage of suitable stock to supply what is expected to be an unprecedented demand. This refers to both cut flowers and flowering plants, and even the stock of artificial flowers of the desirable kind is meagre and the prices much advanced over that of a year ago. Indications point to a decided shortage of carnations and local grown poinsettias and only a fair supply of good roses is promised, except perhaps long-stemmed American Beauties. The supply of lily of the valley will be much short of the expected demand. Violets are fine, and probably enough of those will be available to meet the call. Paper White narcissi will be in sufficient supply, but even this item, never very popular for Christmas, will this year be used in great quantities. Lilies will be in fair supply and all of these will be used. In flowering plants, the popular azaleas are, with most growers, a disappointment as to quantity and quality and really good plants of these will be very scarce. Poinsettia plants, so appropriate for the season, are found very short and of indifferent quality, while the available stock of cyclamens will have too few blooms to make them attractive sellers.

NOTES.

The Detroit Flower Pot Co., after a business career of 63 years, closed its factory December 12. In the firm's announcement to the trade they give labor troubles, car and fuel shortage, freight embargoes and city smoke ordinances as their reason for closing down. It is learned, however, that they may resume operations in the near future, if business conditions become normal, but a more advantageous location will be selected. Many florists, here as well as elsewhere, regret the sudden termination of this firm's business, as much inconvenience will follow because of their inability to get their usual supply of pots.

George Davis is building a modern flower store adjoining his greenhouses on Lincoln avenue. The exterior is of stucco finish and the interior will be in white. The store proper is 20x23 feet, with a high ceiling and the arrangements most complete to care for his fast increasing trade.

Gus Knoch, the Woodmere florist, will, with his wife, take a trip to California after the holiday rush, and will remain on the coast till shortly before Easter. Mr. Knoch has been in poor health lately and it is hoped the outing will benefit him.

A. Pochelon entertained a quartet of florists at his home, East Grand boulevard, Saturday evening, December 9. The visitors were: E. J. Fancourt, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. A. Fettes, Robt. Rahaley and Walter Taepke.

Frank Holznagle has purchased seven acres of land on West Maple avenue, Birmingham, Mich., and will probably make this place his future residence.

Fred Pautke, Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., has sold the entire stock of his new yellow anemone chrysanthemum to J. B. Goetz & Son, Saginaw, Mich.

Visitors: A. Miller, president American Bulb Co., Chicago; Ralph M. Ward, New York; E. J. Fancourt, Philadelphia; Walter E. Cook, Cleveland, O.; S. Dernison, New York; Chas. Frueh, Jr., Saginaw, Mich.; Wm. Roemer, Scarborough, N. Y.

The annual meeting of the above society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., December 13. President James McDonald in the chair, the principal business being the election of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows: James McCarthy, president; James Gladstone, vice-president; Ernest Westlake, secretary; Harry Goodband, corresponding secretary; Ernest J. Brown, treasurer. Executive committee: Robert Jones, Joseph Adler, George Ford, John F. Johnson, Arthur Cook, Archie Frail, F. Watson. For trustees: James McDonald, three years; James Holloway, two years.

The judges for the monthly exhibition were James Bell, Stephen Drombrowski and Thomas Twigg, and the awards were as follows: First to Peter McDonald for fine vase of 25 carnations, mixed; 50 single violets. First to John W. Everitt for vase of chrysanthemums. Honorable mention to Harry Goodband.

Mrs. Payne Whitney was elected an honorary member of the society and three applications for active membership were received. The president presented the silver and glass trophies won at the recent exhibition. Treasurer Ernest Brown read his report showing the society to be in splendid condition financially.

The next meeting will be held January 10, the competition being for 12 freesias, one pot or pan of Primula Malacoides and three poinsettias. The annual dinner will be held January 23, 1917.

GOOD CHRISTMAS BUSINESS EXPECTED.

Business is good and the outlook is even still more promising for Christmas. Orders are being received in a larger extent than ever before in this city. We have been having bad weather, with temperatures low and several inches of snow. It is but reasonable to expect pleasant weather conditions from now until after the holidays. Cyclamens, Lorraine begonias and red geraniums are evidently going to be the chief attractions among the plants in flower. Azaleas are not developing with any assured degree of success. Of course, there will be the usual supply of bulbous stock to fill in the small trade.

STRONGER MARKET AND AMPLE SUPPLY.

A decided improvement in wholesale conditions is evident at the present time. There is ample stock to meet all requirements, no indication of a surplus is seen and a firm market may be relied upon from now until after the holidays. Roses are in good supply, and although the prices are not up to those of two weeks ago, this condition must be expected a week before Christmas, but all indications are for a banner holiday business. Carnations are in good supply in all varieties, with prices satisfactory, and little likelihood of their going lower at present, the range being from $3 to $6 per 100, the latter price being for fancy, with an average of $4 to $5. Orchids are not very plentiful and good flowers are disposed of at from 50 cents to 75 cents each. Sweet peas are improving, both in quality and quantity, especially the Spencer varieties, and are meeting with a fair sale at prices varying from $1 to $2 per 100 sprays. While the supply of gardenias is good there is only a fair call for them. Lily of the valley is in good supply and prices are satisfactory. Lilies are arriving in moderate quantities and move well. Chrysanthemums are fast passing, although some blooms of excellent quality are still to be seen in small lots. Violets are increasing in supply, doubles being offered at 50 cents and 75 cents per 100. Paper Whites move freely at $2 per 100 and stevia is not overlooked in the orders. In miscellaneous flowers there are good receipts of antirrhinums, bouvardias, callas, calendulas, yellow daisies and mignonette, all of which meet with good call. The green supply is ample and the demand steady. There is a scarcity of blooming plants.

Alvin R. Jones, of the S. S. Pen-nock-Meehan Co., who has returned from a trip through Pennsylvania and New York state, reports conditions point to a successful holiday trade. He found, however, a shortage of blooming plants of good quality. Clarence W. Liggett had on his desk a fine bouquet of the new carnation, Merry Christmas, which this firm is introducing.

Fred J. Michell, of Henry F. Michell Co., Inc., reports a good call for holly, laurel, mistletoe, lycopodium and many other holiday stocks, of which this firm makes a specialty.

Harry Faust, of Merion, is having a brisk demand for all kinds of Christmas plants, especially poinsettias and cyclamens, these being a specialty with him.

Carl Cortis, of the Jos. Heacock Co., reports good business and says they will have a fine lot of Killarney roses for the holiday trade.

Robert Shock, of the M. Rice Co., says business with this firm was never better.

Commodore Westcott celebrated another birthday anniversary December 16.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND BOTH LIGHT.

"Along about this time," said an old stager, early in the past week, "they begin to save their money for Christmas," and he seems to have been more than half right. It was a quiet week in the wholesale district; the supply of stock was light—and so was the demand. Though business was not heavy, prices on roses and carnations advanced. By the middle of the week, the best carnations were selling at from $6 to $8 per 100. While we have quoted special American Beauties at 50 to 60 cents each, there were sales as high as 75 cents. There may have been sales as low as 50 cents, but not first class stock. More Ophelias reach this market than any other variety of tea roses, and specials brought 15 and 20 cents. Short roses, in demand for funeral work, were scarce and prices advanced. There were not many specials of the variety, Mrs. Aaron Ward, on the market, but No. 1's brought 8 cents, and 10 cents was asked on the morning of December 15. Briefly stated, as will be seen in our quotations, all roses brought high prices. The demand for both orchids and gardenias was light and prices were weak. Lilies and lily of the valley are firm; lilies 10 and 12 cents, lily of the valley four to six cents. A very moderate demand for violets. We are hearing the same line of conversation that we have heard at this season for years; that is, that flowers will be scarce for Christmas, but in the past the scarcity seldom materialized. It is but reasonable to suppose that they will be high, but this market draws on such a wide territory that a serious scarcity, while possible, is not probable. The weather throughout the fall was generally favorable to stock. Eight inches of snow fell, December 15, but the forecast is now for clearing weather. A succession of snowstorms from now to Christmas would, it must be admitted, cut down the supply of stock.

December 18.—The heavy snowstorm December 15, with a drop in temperature and strong winds that followed, have again shortened the supply of stock, which previously was none too plentiful. On December 17, the best red and white carnations sold at the rate of $8 per 100. Ten dollars was asked, and in some instances paid for the variety Mrs. Ward. On the question of raising prices to a high figure at this time, there is a difference of opinion among the wholesalers. Several have told us that they are satisfied with $8 per 100—that it is a good price and satisfies their growers—and that they do not propose to drive away their customers by excessive demands. Abnormally high prices in any commodity are based on two suppositions: (1) that there is a scarcity; (2) that the buyer must have the goods. In foodstuffs this generally works, but as a grower recently remarked: "They can't eat flowers." While the supply of plants is not heavy, it will be a big factor at Christmas. The retailers must have some cut flowers, but the indications are that with excessive prices, they will push plants and buy as few cut flowers as possible. There is no marked activity in the market this morning, but the supply is light and roses and carnations are being held at high figures as will be noted in our quotations. In some instances, $5 per dozen is being asked for the best chrysanthemums, but $4 is the selling price; 15 cents per flower is being asked for lilies, but good stock can be bought for 12 cents.

Peter F. McKenney. To be explicit, the "Isle of Safety" is in the middle of Fifth avenue and is there to prevent people from being killed and maimed by automobiles. That corner is constantly jammed with both vehicles and pedestrians; more people passing there in a day than any other point in the city. Brother McKenney is a fine designer and decorator, and not only has a good counter trade, but also has many dinner and wedding decorations.

Now that G. E. M. Stumpp, a leading retailer, has been elected president of the New York Florists' Club, it is hoped that many other retailers will join the club and help to make it more fraternal, and we believe that they will. At the last meeting Marshall Clarke and Alfred Van Praag, both prominent in the trade, were proposed for membership.

One of our Sunday papers runs a column entitled: "Are Women People?" Answering for the florist business of this city, we can most emphatically state that they are. A long list of women who are active, we might say invaluable in the florist business in this city, might be given.

At the range of the Knight & Struck Co., Flushing, we recently found Manager Darlington and a large force of assistants very busy in packing and shipping ericas, of which they have an exceptionally fine stock. Fine acacias and various other plants were also noticed at this range.

The finest collection of poinsettias in 10 and 12-inch pans that we noticed were at William Kessler's, 113 West 28th street. The plants were about two feet high with six to eight fine flowers. There was an excellent combination of Asparagus plumosus nanus.

J. W. Hauser, 571 Madison avenue, had a fine wedding decoration, December 16, including both the church and the home. In point of service, though not in years, he is one of the oldest florists in this city and has a line of good customers.

The first white lilac we have noticed was at William P. Ford's, 107 West 28th street, the past week; also, iris. In Hadley roses, he is handling stock that is better than many of the American Beauties that reach this market.

At the store of I. H. Eisenberg, 916 Sixth avenue, we have recently noticed a large stock of Christmas plants. Walter Klein, a well-known designer and decorator, is now foreman at this store.

Otto Muller, a plantsman of White-stone, erected during the summer, five houses, each 25x100 feet. He has a good stock of ferns and palms, which he grows from seed; also, a variety of other plants.

Mrs. A. Schumann, 336 Bleecker street, who opened a store there a year ago, is doing a good business. She had many years of experience as a retailer in another part of the city.

Under the name, "Royal Florist," Chacalos & Hallas, now have a store at 1092 St. John's place and another on Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn.

P. S. Schott, of Flushing, is cutting fine Paper White narcissus, and has Ralph Armstrong, the retailer of Madison avenue and 47th street, has just put on a fine Ford car for delivery.

Joseph Bechamps, of Flushing, is a carnation grower and is cutting good stock of the pink variety, Sagamore.

Clarence Slinn, 123 West 28th street, is handling a good supply and fine quality of violets.

BEST TRADE IN MANY YEARS.

The 1916 Thanksgiving trade was the best that the florists of this city have experienced in many years, more flowers being sold than ever before. Prices held to about the usual average, both retail and wholesale, and there was a fine supply of stock—never before was there such an abundance of fine blooms, especially chrysanthemums. Roses came nearer selling out than anything else, yet there were some left over. Since they have been coming in from local growers the quality is more satisfactory and prices are a little lower. Very little bulbous stock was seen on the market, but at that, the demand was not strong enough to dispose of what there was. Some excellent violets were received from San Francisco, but the call for them was not as good as usual. The general demand seemed to be for a few roses, or a choice chrysanthemum bloom, worn as a corsage. One of the leading stores had a fine lot of pot poinsettias which sold very well. Quite a good sized supply of cyclamens and other blooming plants sold readily at good prices. Taken as a whole, sales will probably total 15 per cent or more higher than in any previous year.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., First Vice-President; L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer. Thirty-fifth annual convention, June, 1917.

HOLLAND, it is stated, may mobilize her entire mercantile marine for the transportation of foodstuffs.

NEW YORK—Marshal H. Duryea, of the Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co., has been doing jury service the past two weeks.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, December 20, were as follows: Timothy, $4.00 to $5.75 per 100 pounds.

THE deaths of Herbert Johnson of Philadelphia, Pa., and J. E. Hoopes of Muscatine, Ia., are recorded in our obituary column this week.

By printer's error the wrong title was given to illustration used in the Western Seed & Irrigation Co.'s advertisement, issue of December 16, page 1211.

SALES of such scarce items as garden beans and sweet corn have been made freely the past two weeks and the very moderate quantities of the former will soon be in the hands of retailers.

L. W. WHEELER, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif., celebrated the forty-eighth anniversary of his birthday, December 20. Mr. Wheeler was born at Cherry Creek, near Jamestown, N. Y.

ONION sets in Chicago storage are in more danger just now from freezing than sprouting. Zero weather has held up most car movements for several days. The best of refrigerator car service can not stand the four to six days' delay, which cross-town switching arrangements now require.

LILY of the valley, German grown, is said to be coming along gradually via the underground route, so the shipments so far heard of are few. One western grower is said to have secured about a million, putting up $8,000 spot cash on arrival. Another lot consigned to an eastern importer cost him $15,000.

VISITED CHICAGO: H. P. Webster, Independence, Ia.; R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill.; L. R. Condon, Rockford, Ill.; F. C. Woodruff, Alling Woodruff and J. J. Merwin, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, New York; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Theo. Cobb, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.; Alex. Mathers, of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.

REPRESENTATIVES of the middle states canners met at the Sherman House, Chicago, December 19. Consideration was given to future prices of canned corn and to booking present seed corn orders. Among seed houses represented were D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.; S. D. Woodruff & Sons, New York; Leonard Seed Co., and W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, and the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.

Swedish Shipping Rates Increased.

Copenhagen.—Scandinavian-American line, the Danish United Steamship Co., the Norwegian-Mexico line and the Swedish-American-Mexico line have reached an agreement to increase freight rates 75 per cent between American and Scandinavian countries, says a despatch from Malmoe, Sweden.

Bunyard Company Bankrupt.

A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Harry A. Bunyard Company, Inc., seeds, 40 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, by John F. Croom & Co., Magnolia, N. C., $366; A. T. De La Mare Printing and Publishing Company, $649, and William Kersting, $49. The company was incorporated March 4, 1915, with capital stock $25,000.

Holly and Green.

Bouquet green has sold at 12 cents per pound in New York and 20 cents in Chicago, making a new high record. The artificial flower people who use this lycopodium for dyeing will have no supply till picking can be done in April.

Holly, the quality of which has been below the average, closes the season as scarce as it is poor. Dealers who insist on quality have rejected over 15 per cent of stock handled and turned the poor grades over to the commission merchants.

Van Waveren & Sons' New York Branch.

M. Van Waveren & Sons, well-known bulb growers of Hillegom, Holland, announce the removal of their New York branch, from 17 State street to 26 Cortlandt street. This branch, established a number of years ago, was incorporated in 1916 with H. Langelier as managing director.

W. A. Philippo and C. de Wreede, who have held important positions with the firm for many years, have been appointed managing directors, and will assist in the further development of the business. T. Van Waveren continues as president of the company.

Sugar Beet Seed Production.

Sugar-beet seed was grown commercially in this country during the past year in several states from Michigan to California. The crop of seed harvested in 1915 was so satisfactory, according to the report of the chief of the bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, in each of the areas tested, that a largely increased acreage was planted this year.

This bureau has assisted in an advisory way in growing, selecting, and siloing the roots, planting them in the spring, harvesting and cleaning the seed, and, in general, endeavored to produce the largest amount of commercial seed possible at a minimum cost. Approximately 5,000 acres are in beet seed in this country this year, while we require the product of at least 16,000 acres for a normal planting, not considering the natural expansion of the beet-sugar industry. Each new mill will require an average of 200 acres in seed to meet its planting requirements. Seven new mills are in process of construction for this year.

The problem of drying the sugar beets for the purpose of increasing the amount of raw material for the mill and thereby increasing the length of the sugar campaign has been further investigated. The principal difficulty has been in finding or devising a dryer of suitable capacity to handle enough beets per day to be profitable. A satisfactory solution of the problem will be very beneficial in those small valleys in the intermountain states, where the acreage is not sufficient to support a sugar mill, and yet the sugar beet is necessary to the highest results in the farming operations.

Government Seed Contracts.

For the government's seed supply next year, quotations should reach the United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Plant Industry, Office of Seed Distribution, Washington, D. C., on or before 2 p. m., Tuesday, January 9, 1917. Upon this date all bids will be opened by the department board of awards, and members of the seed trade are cordially invited to be present either in person or by representatives. The prices on the various items will be read aloud by the chairman of the board, but the quantities quoted upon, and other information submitted by the bidders, will be treated as confidential matter. After opening, the bids will be tabulated for comparison, and the board will proceed to make its awards, which will not be announced until the entire list is completed. After the awards have been made orders will be placed with Onion Forcing.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you please give me some information about forcing young onions for winter use? Is there any special kind and where can the sets be purchased? How close will they stand planting?

Kansas. E. R. D.

Forcing onions for winter use requires preparation in advance, preferably a year ahead. The best variety to use is the Egyptian or perennial onion. It is perfectly hardy in most localities, standing severe winters well. The sets of this onion ripen early in August, and should be planted as soon as ripe. They do not keep well out of the ground. These sets should go in nursery-rows in the field in good ground, the rows a foot or 15 inches apart, the plants in the rows very closely, say six to eight to the foot. These sets should get a year's growth, giving them clean cultivation; no sets should be allowed to form during the summer on the forcing stock. Late in the fall these onions are dug up and stored in cold frames and trenches, so they are available all through the winter. A new lot should be taken in every week to keep up a constant supply. They do well in 50" under glass, but must have the full light. Under benches will not do. If the plants are right, they will grow rapidly when brought in and a few weeks will put them in condition for market. Years ago this part of the forcing business used to be popular, but the shallots from the south now hold the markets in the winter, hence very little onion forcing is now done. MARKETMAN.

Providence, R. I.

STORM SHORTENS SUPPLY.

One of the worst snow storms experienced in this city in years began December 15 and continued through the following day. In consequence the supply of stock is very short in this market and it is to be expected that it will further decrease. Preparation for the Christmas business occupies the spare moments of all the local trade. There appears to be nothing new in novelties this year and the small red wreaths that sold so well last year will be as popular as ever. Baskets of fancy grasses and bowls are still in demand. Christmas plants will be in good variety and the offerings will include azaleas, begonias, cyclamens, solanums, primulas, Boston ferns, cibotiums, fern dishes of many varieties, ardisias, small tub boxwoods, heather, etc. The displays in the stores are already presenting a very attractive appearance.

NOTES.

The feature of the December meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, announced for December 20 in the Public Library will be a lecture on "Glimpses of South American Vegetation," by Mrs. Levi B. Edwards who has recently returned from a trip across that country.

Farmers and greenmen have taken their positions at the bridge. Evergreen of all kinds will bring a good price this year. The wholesale price is higher than it has been for a number of years.

J. F. Wood is showing good stock in his store on Westminster street and is confident of good Christmas business.

T. J. Johnston & Co.'s new store is nearing completion. There is nothing like it in the city. H. A. T.

NEWTON FALLS, O.—The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. has moved its entire range from Eddy road to this place.

Rochester, N. Y.

SHORTAGE OF CUT STOCK.

Cold, crisp weather has improved business conditions and the holiday rush is now on. Baskets of artificial stock, wreaths, laurel and pine roping are selling in great quantities at prices a trifle higher than the average. Holiday quotations are now in effect here and there is a shortage of carnations, roses and cut stock of nearly all kinds. Roman hyacinths, Paper Whites and stevias are very popular items and the supply is good. Cyclamens, poinsettias, begonias, heather and in fact all flowering plants are plentiful.

NOTES.

The trade of this city and all of its citizens in general realize the passing of a truly great man, one who was in close touch with the city's horticultural and landscape interests, in the death of William C. Barry. Further particulars will be found in our obituary column this week.

Hugo Teute is disposing of a big assortment of Christmas plants, among the varieties being cyclamens, poinsettias, begonias and primroses.

Harry Merritt is producing some of the finest White Wonder and Pink Delight to be seen in this vicinity.

Frank J. Mahoney is doing special work for Geo. T. Boucher during the holidays.

E. C. Armbrust has returned from Buffalo, where he visited friends.

Chas. W. Curtis finds a ready market for a fine lot of poinsettias.

CHESTER.

Atlantic City, N. J.

Edwards Floral Hall Co. has the contract for decorating the fronts of the leading beach hotels for the holidays. In addition to other stock, over 70 cases of wild smilax were used. This firm has a very attractive store in the Hotel Traymore.

LEWISTON, ME.—The Maine Bulb & Flower Growers has been incorporated by Geo. W. Horne of this city, and W. A. Noyes and G. A. Whitney of Auburn.

BEAVER, PA.—Thomas M. Fitzgerald, one of the best known florists of Western Pennsylvania, died at his home in this city November 14, aged 48 years.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

John Watson, Newark, N. Y., President;
Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President;
John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Forty-second annual convention will be held at Philadelphia, Pa., June 27-29, 1917.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—The Morning View Greenhouses have added a nursery department to their business.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—N. A. Rasmussen of this place has been elected president of the Wisconsin Horticultural Society.

THE forty-second annual meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen will be held at Philadelphia, Pa., June 27-29, 1917.

SANTA ANA, CALIF.—The Board of Forestry of Orange county has established a nursery here and is furnishing free of charge to property owners stock for planting along highways.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The state forestry association, at a meeting of the executive committee in this city, November 24, decided to ask the legislature to pass a law for state-wide tree planting. It also urged that all tree doctors be licensed.

GREENWICH, CONN.—The Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society has elected the following officers for 1917: Wm. Whitton, president; John Andrew, vice-president; J. B. McArdle, secretary; Alex. Clarkson, corresponding secretary, all of this city.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The Connecticut Horticultural Society at its annual meeting, December 8, elected the following officers: G. H. Hollister, president; Frank Roulier, vice-president; Oscar F. Gritzmacher, treasurer; W. W. Hunt, Hartford, secretary.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Congressman Frank Park of Georgia has introduced a bill providing for the appropriation of $25,000 for the establishment of an experimental station at Colquitt, Ga., to study the character of plants, shrubs, fruit and ornamental trees, and vegetables.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—H. C. Irish, of this city, has been elected president of the Missouri State Horticultural Society for 1917. Other officers are: E. H. FAVOR, St. Joseph, first vice-president; Daniel Lowmiller, Parkville, second vice-president; H. S. Wayman, Princeton, secretary; Dr. E. L. Beal, Republic, treasurer.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Chairman Slayden of the house committee on library will ask that committee to consider the question of the removal of the national botanical garden to some more suitable site which will permit of more space, which is much needed. The removal to Rock Hill park has been suggested among other possible locations.

Park Disfigurement.

Park Commissioner Cabot Ward of New York, in his annual report, tells wholesome truth about many of the "monuments" that disfigure the parks of that city. The writer has on previous occasions called the attention of our readers to this abuse, not in New York alone, but in many other cities. Take Washington, D. C., for instance. If there is a city in the whole world, of its size and population, that has a finer collection of junk in the form of monuments, we have never seen or heard of it. Clark Mills, who designed the monument of Andrew Jackson that stands in the park opposite the White House, was said by some of his scoffing contemporaries, to be a blacksmith and not a sculptor. It can at least be said that, if the monument to Jackson is not a work of art it is a great curiosity, whereas many other monuments both in Washington and other cities are neither artistic nor novel.

To a lover of nature, it is distressing to see a number of fine trees destroyed to make room for a wretched monument. As to the people to whose memory many of these monuments have been erected, we will leave it to Commissioner Ward to state the case, which he does in the following succinct manner:

"Many of our monuments are mediocre and worthless as works of art. Valuable sites have been given to perpetuate the memory of people who had little real claim to such honor. Some portions of the city are literally strewn with monuments and statues that are commonplace and inartistic. The department would welcome any method whereby the city could rid itself of a number of statues and monuments which encumber its parks and open spaces.

"The trouble is that in the past the city authorities have been far too lenient both in accepting monuments which as works of art are appraised far too highly and in giving up valuable sites out of all keeping with the importance of the subject to be immortalized."

We may add that if a man was great enough to have a monument erected to his memory in a public park or place, it should not be an eye-sore, but something in keeping with the measure of his fame.

Navel Orange Origin.

The Queensland Agricultural Journal states that the navel orange first appeared as a bud sport of the Portuguese variety, Laranja selecta, and was propagated by a Portuguese gardener at Bahia in 1822. There are now about 50,000 trees growing navel oranges at Bahia. The fruit was introduced into the United States in 1873 by William Saunders, horticulturist and landscape gardener at the Patent office. The American consul sent him some of the trees, which he budded on seedlings grown in the government greenhouses. He sent two to California and the others to Florida; the latter never did well, but the former thrived, and are still living and bearing fruit, all the navel orange trees in California being their progeny. There are about 100,000 acres of the variety in that state, and about 10,000,000 boxes are produced every year. The navel orange can not be grown from seed, as it contains no seed. In California it is generally budded upon stocks from the Mission sweet seedling orange.—London Gardeners' Chronicle.

BIG CHRISTMAS PREPARATIONS.

Cold weather during the present month has given an impetus to the movement of indoor stock. Poinsettias are going to be very scarce and the same can be said of azaleas, lily of the valley, etc. Sweet peas are now beginning to arrive from the north. A few chrysanthemums are still to be seen on the market. Greens are in plentiful supply. Preparations are being made by all in the trade for a big Christmas business and the stores are nicely decorated for the occasion.

NOTES.

O. C. Saakes is having good business in all departments. In addition to several large orders for Christmas decorations the demand for funeral work has been brisk and the call for cutflowers has held up well.

The Redondo Floral Co. finished one of the busiest weeks of the season. Preparations are all made for the holiday trade and many substantial orders are on the books.

The salesroom of the Broadway Florists is nicely decorated for Christmas and they will have a good variety of stock in both cutflowers and plants.

Howard & Smith are featuring the finest cyclamen plants seen in this city this year, in addition to many novelties for the holiday trade.

Wolfskill Bros. & Morris Goldenson will have a big holiday stock in all lines to offer, among which will be a supply of pot poinsettias.

Seki Bros. & Co. continue to have excellent business. They have a supply of late chrysanthemums to offer as well as good carnations.

C. C. Wooden, formerly with the H. N. Gage Co., has returned to this city and expects to locate here again.

J. W. Wolters has excellent American Beauty and other roses. He reports good trade. G. H. H.

Curran resigned his office of secretary. The new office bearers for 1917 were elected as follows: John Barnet, president; A. E. Bonsey, vice-president; Wm. Thomson, Jr., treasurer; John Carman (care Col. Schoonmaker, Sewickley, Pa.), secretary; executive committee: A. Davidson, Wm. Thomson, Jr., Chas. Patton, R. Boxel and Wm. Gillies. John Barnet and A. E. Bonsey gave an interesting account of their trip to the convention at Washington, D. C., stating the hospitality and arrangements to be all that could be desired, and also that there were prospects of the 1918 convention coming to Pittsburgh. The secretary read his annual report, showing the society to be in a flourishing condition. Owing, probably to the severe weather, the exhibits were very few, and it is to be hoped the members will attend better in future to this interesting part of the proceedings. Twenty-one new members were elected and eight applications filed.

THE AUTO DELIVERY CAR.

A Great Asset of Incalculable Value in Up-to-Date Delivery Service.

Fast Superseding Horse-Drawn Vehicles.

Within the past three years, the automobile has played "hob" with the florists' horses. Automobile delivery cars have been in more or less general use with the trade for a much longer time, but fully half of those now in use have arrived since 1913, when men with one put on another and where two were in use something larger has been tried out. The trial car was generally the Ford, which worked very well when it was not overworked, but when the 800 pound limit was piled up to 1000, often 1200 pounds and then jumped along over rough roads, there was trouble and the poor overloaded car almost invariably got the blame. Good cars and careful driving mean a great deal to the life of a car.

"Tom" Potts of the Stokes greenhouses at Moorestown, N. J., drives 13 miles to Philadelphia every week day, frequently making two trips. The distance covered for the day averages from 40 to 60 miles and sometimes more, nearly always starting with a double deck load of plants. This Ford car has seen six years of service and Mr. Potts says it is still apparently as good as ever. There are a hundred or more of these light cars in use among the growers and retailers of Philadelphia alone.

M. J. Callahan, 3924 West Market street, has two Ford cars; one was laid up, and while being repaired he hired a horse for his old wagon. The two or three days comparison between the wagon and the car soon convinced Mr. Callahan that there was nothing to it but the car. The car would go and come, and go and come, but the wagon, out once, it seemed would never return. Instances were given, where on account of the speed of the car, he had been pulled out of trouble in delayed deliveries, which would never have been possible with the wagon. It is the same story everywhere. Yes, they cost more, but they do more and are the cheapest; anyhow he would not go back to the horse, —it is too slow for these times.

Victor Ridenour, of Ridge avenue, says a car is "worth its weight in gold when you need it." He has a Ford and an Overland and finds them both good. The Bell Telephone Co., of Philadelphia, he is told, can run their 137 Fords at an average of five cents a mile, but the best he can do is six to seven cents and then some for repairs. As an advertisement he says the car shows a man to be up to date, but the wagon puts him into the back number class.

John Culp, of Germantown road, says the Ford is the poor man's car. He has had one two years and could not possibly do without it. Wm. Berger's Sons, of Germantown, have an Autocar and a Studebaker and have found both of these to be of great use in their business, it being impossible to get along without them. Emil Geschick, of the Pelham Greenhouses, bought one Ford and found the car so useful that the next year he secured another and finds them to be of the greatest advantage.

John C. Gracey is one of the pioneers, being almost the first to use a gasoline car. His large mahogany, side-entrance bodied car or truck, is one of the features of the florists' fleet to be seen about the wholesale district in the early morning. The Stanley steamer, White and Fords have been seen in his garage, which at all times houses three cars.

The Vim, a "simon pure" delivery vehicle of medium price, is finding favor with many of the trade. It is supposed to carry 1,000 pounds with ease, is heavier in all its parts than a Ford, with a longer wheel base. It is made in Philadelphia and must be making good as the orders are always ahead of the supply, although the facilities of the company have been greatly increase, their present factory having a floor space of 700,000 square feet and they expect to turn out 25,000 cars the coming year.

George Craig banks on his Autocar; it is always ready for the most severe test. He also has a Ford to do the light work and finds them both very satisfactory.

H. H. Battles has two Autocars, probably the handsomest delivery and best appointed cars in the city. One is painted red, the other blue. He has had them several years and no one can show better service from any cars, than these have given him. another Autocar, making three, is now in his garage. Three Fords, one or two of which take care of the deliveries of the Century Flower Shop, his other store, proved to be much more economical than the horses and wagons they superseded.

Robert Crawford, 233 Eleventh street, who was the first to see the light, has the distinction of running the first florists' delivery car in this city, an electric, which, expensive at the time, was not entirely practical, and never satisfactory. Now his service boasts of an Autocar and a Ford and he would not be without either.

The Robt. Craig Co. has two large Autocar trucks and are getting a Ford. W. K. Harris' large White truck has long been a feature on the street. It is always ready and with "big Ed" at the wheel, does the work of two double teams and possibly more.

The Leo Niessen Co. has four Fords and one General Motor Co. truck for their Philadelphia store and one Ford each for their branches in Baltimore and Washington. Their invariable rule is to run a car two years and then trade it in or sell it to the best advantage elsewhere. A Ford after two years of such hard service as they give theirs, can be sold for at least $150, which makes their cost about $300, or three dollars a week for the two years. Their experience is that all cars after two years' service, are apt to require frequent repairs, the total expense of which is greater than to take the first loss and replace the old car with a new one, which can be depended on in the many emergencies and demands for the best service of the busy days. No doubt a man who owns a car and runs it himself, carefully attending, to the first indications of trouble, will get much more out of it than they do. The cars are kept on the go all day and every day with nearly always a load waiting for each as they return. They average 50 to 60 miles a day. As compared to the old horses and wagons and delivery boy service their advantage is mountain high.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.'s delivery equipment has in the past consisted of Fords, Autocars, Vims and Dodge cars and they have had varied experiences. All have given service. The Autocar truck, on account of its size, has to do the heavy work and has been found very dependable. The lighter cars have been especially useful in their package and long distance city deliveries.

Frank Ross was also one of the pioneers. His first Ford gave four years of good service; his last, only six months. Buick and Vim cars have also served him well. His statement that the first year's service reduces the value of the car 50 per cent is startling, but he says it is true. He judges the expense of his cars by the mileage they make. He has been able to run a Ford as low as six and one-half cents per mile including depreciation and all charges, except the wages of a chauffeur, and the heaviest Buick at eight and one-fourth to nine cents. He believes the heavier cars as cheap as the lighter ones, if there is work enough to keep them busy. It does not pay to keep a car in the garage and the driver pottering about at some "kill time" job, as the car only makes or saves money for its owner when it is busy.

There are many florists, growers and retailers, whose business requires but one car, who have turned their stable into a garage and taking care of the car themselves as they did "old Dobbin," soon get to know its every need. To such men, a car is a great asset, as it will cost but little more and will render two or three times as much service as the horse and wagon will give and in emergencies where even minutes count it is of incalculable value.

Horticulture Advancing in Netherlands.

Horticulture has made notable progress in the Amsterdam district during recent years. This is especially true of the northern provinces. Ten years ago, in Groningen, only here and there could a hothouse be seen, but now in practically every village of that province one may see fruit and vegetables growing under glass. This has particular importance because certain varieties which are grown in the open in the southern provinces will not mature in the northern excepting under warm shelter. The development of large nurseries is also an innovation in some parts of Groningen and Friesland, and they are constantly increasing in number.

A great stimulus to horticulture has been the increased price of garden products since the war began. Tender vegetables, like tomatoes, beans, and cucumbers, which can not be grown successfully in the north except under glass, are now sold there at prices higher by 100 to 300 per cent than before the war. Cabbages and other outdoor vegetables sell at similarly advanced prices. Fruits have increased in price—not in so great a degree as vegetables, but sufficiently to stimulate production.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

IN THE Chicago shops there were quantities of whitened material used in the make-up of the still life Christmas basket. Cones, thistles, burrs, ruscus, lycopodium and grasses which had been whitened and in many cases silvered were used in contrast with the green ruscus, red berries, artificial poinsettias, boxwood, pine and other material. The bronzed and silvered cones and magnolia leaves were also worked into wreaths with good effect. A miniature wreath of mistletoe made up of broken pieces offered by Schiller's stores was an acceptable novelty.

Chicago Flower Shops at Christmas.

At Chas. A. Samuelson's, 2134 South Michigan avenue, quality was the keynote. This beautiful store was heavily stocked with the best of everything in Christmas plants. Cyclamens were especially fine, as were also the poinsettias. Many made-up baskets, a number filled with either pink and red, with a choice pot of white cyclamen as contrast, and the inevitable bow of ribbon were very inviting. Nearly all the plants, large and small, were given a touch of color by a ribbon or chiffon bow. Several large well filled plant boxes and jardinières on stands were features. Araucarias with numerous small red bows on each of the branches looked very gay and Christmassy. The conservatory in the rear was filled with similar stock. Wreaths of all kinds were a feature; box with berries, prepared oak foliage with large silvered, bronze and whitened cones. Similar decorations on magnolia wreaths were all very striking. Preparedness had certainly been the watchword here.

W. J. Smyth, at Thirty-first street and Michigan avenue, has a very light store, with windows the full length on both streets. Dainty baskets of pink primulas and ferns with rainbow ribbon bows were conspicuous. Very good poinsettias in pots, pans and made up baskets made a brilliant table and small baskets of whitened material, cones, ground pine; ruscus, etc., looked very salable. Well flowered cyclamens were a feature. A grotto and fountain of Michigan cave stone was an effective window decoration. Business was booming, many out-of-town orders coming in by the F. T. D., of which association Mr. Smyth was the first secretary.

At the commodious greenhouses of the J. F. Kidwell Co., at 3530 South Michigan avenue, there was a good display of cyclamens, poinsettias, begonias and made up baskets of assorted Christmas plants. Slender double ribboned arches over some of the plants, with a large bow at the top, were effective. Festooned Japanese frieze looked well in the show windows.

John Muir's store and greenhouse at 4647 Grand boulevard were well stocked with all the popular holiday plants. Made up plant baskets with ribbon adornments looked very salable. Features in the well furnished store were glass shelves, the same size as the tops, under all marble topped show tables. These are about one foot from the floor, making a good place for bric-a-brac and small pottery, fern dishes, etc. A center, latticed, hanging shelf, one foot wide and about 40 feet in length, in four sections, fitted together to make a hollow square, had a woven galvanized wire bottom. This was suspended from the ceiling about seven feet from the floor. It was filled with fancy baskets which made a good showing and were very accessible. Business had been very good here.

Friedman, 516 South Michigan avenue, has one of the most beautiful stores in the city. It was stocked with the choice of the grower's offerings, exceptionally well flowered poinsettias, cyclamens, heathers, etc. Many well made and quite elaborate plant baskets, with bows of ribbon, were given good positions. Baskets of silvered and bronzed cones, colored grasses, cattails, and other like material were very showy. Truly a bonton shop.

The windows of the George Wienhoeber store at 41 South Wabash avenue were carpeted with green sheet moss. The large bulk on Wabash avenue was filled with foliage plant baskets, in which well colored crotons were a feature. Extra sized heather were conspicuous. The stock carried was all high class. Large plant baskets of crotons, cyclamens, poinsettias and other Christmas plants, with their red ribbon decorations, were very stunning. A wonderful line of baskets, some very large, made of plain and colored grasses, silvered, bronzed and whitened cones, red ruscus, Florida moss and other similar materials, the handles covered with red or green Japanese chenille, made a great showing and were selling rapidly. A pretty conceit was a quite small basket of orchids with a bunch of hothouse grapes. A small bottle of perfume was included; very artistic—price $35 and sold. A full line of azaleas, cyclamens, begonias, poinsettias and other plants, were seen in large sizes.

The stock of Schiller, The Florist, 36 South Wabash avenue, was full of all kinds of Christmas plants in medium sizes, each decorated with ribbon bow, all plants in pot covers, baskets or finished with crepe paper. There was great activity here, business reported the best ever. At their West Madison street store there was a complete stock in endless variety, very well displayed. Everything bore a large price label. Plants of a kind were mostly kept together so that selection was easy. On a long side table were sections filled with balls of Japanese frieze in all colors, bunches of ruscus, mistletoe sprays, bunches of holly, etc., all priced, which system greatly expedited sales in the rush time of the last days. A miniature mistletoe wreath was selling fast; this was made of the small broken bunches that are usually lost. With its bow of ribbon, it would be a feature anywhere. The greenhouses in the rear were full of flowering and foliage plants. Geo. Asmus was in charge here. It was certainly a very live place although zero weather. Electric fans in the windows kept frost from the glass and one at the door, the floor dry.

H. N. Bruns, 3034 West Madison street, was taxed to the utmost with his lily of the valley and holiday store trade. Here, right in the city, lily of the valley is forced by the 100,000 and more at a time. A large force was engaged in cutting and picking this Christmas crop. In the store was a good stock of holiday plants.

The force at C. Frauenfelder's, 3343 West Madison street, was at full speed trying to keep up with the holiday demand. A feature here in all plants sold, was that the tag was attached to a tall stick which, standing well above the plants, made selection very easy. The windows were filled with choice plants and made up baskets.

Fleishman Floral Co., 84 East Jackson boulevard, had the stock to back up their one page newspaper advertisements. Made up plant baskets were seen in variety, mostly of good size, filled with the popular Christmas plants and given exclusive touches with ribbons, bird sticks, butterflies, etc. There were many handsome specimen blooming cyclamens, azaleas, and poinsettias. A window of araucarias with their numerous red bows was attractive. A feature was the selling tags; one of green indicated there was plenty more in stock. Much of the stock had a tag with printed duplicate numbers, one of which when removed and stuck on the sales slip, uncovered the word "Sold," in red. A combination basket of candy and flower vase was a good seller. The case was filled with the highest grade roses. Manager Graham reported a splendid business in plants and a great sale of cut flowers.

The Alpha Floral Co., 146 South Wabash avenue, featured azaleas, having splendid specimens, very well flowered. Poinsettias and cyclamens were important stocks. Wreaths and baskets of dried material and artificial flowers decorated the windows. A lively business was experienced.

A very busy shop was that of A. Lange, 25 East Madison street. Every available inch of space was occupied with popular Christmas plants, made up plant baskets, wreaths, baskets of greens, berries, artificial flowers, etc. There was not room for the throngs of buyers that were coming in all the time. Additional spaces on upper floors were used as work rooms. Mr. Lange certainly knows how to attract the lovers of flowers.

A splendid Christmas stock was displayed at the store of Mangel & Co., 17 East Monroe street. Plant baskets, specimen plants of quality, all bedecked with appropriate ribbons, handsome wreaths of box, magnolia, and oakleaves were much in evidence. Business was quite up to expectations.

On the north side, the George Wittbold Co.'s new store and conservatories contained a splendid stock of holiday plants and flowers. Two tall pyramids in one of the conservatories, surmounted by cibotiums, contained baskets, low boxes and jardinières filled with all sorts of foliage and flowering plants. All single specimens had the pots covered with crepe or mats or were in fancy covers. A great business was done here.

With its adjoining greenhouses, the handsome store and curved roof conservatory of the Ernst Wienhoeber Floral Co., 22 East Elm street, is especially adapted to handle a holiday business. Handsomely arranged plant baskets, choice specimen plants, and made up Christmas baskets and plateaus of soft fir tree foliage, boxwood, red ruscus, grasses, branches of red berries and colored cones, thistles and burrs, were very invitingly displayed. The conservatory was as handsome as any flower show, filled with high grade stock that would win prizes anywhere. Appropriate ribbons were used to give color effects. A record breaking business was the report.

The Central Floral Co. had all it could do to handle the Christmas rush at its North State street store notwithstanding the fact several extra men were added to the regular force. Plants and cut flowers sold well but the heaviest demand was for made-up baskets of winter berries, boxwood and other decorative materials. This store has one of the best locations in the city and made one of the grandest showings.

The Briggs Floral Co. had a splendid Christmas trade at both its West Madison street and Sheridan road stores and featured both cut flowers and plants. The force was kept on the jump until the last minute and worked overtime many nights so that all the orders could be properly taken care of.

Christmas Plants in New York Stores.

Though most of the greenhouse ericas, heathers, or heaths descended from Cape of Good Hope ancestry, it is a sentiment with most of us, that whatever the variety, it is the Scotchman's flower. In her poem on "A Sprig of Heath," Ann Grant expressed that sentiment:

"Flower of his heart! thy fragrance mild,

Of peace and freedom seems to breathe,

To pluck thy blossoms in the wild.

And deck his bonnet with the wreath,

Where dwelt of old his rustic sires,

Is all his simple wish requires."

And, writing of Christmas heath or heather, we may quote extracts from an article by William Watson, then of Kew Gardens, published in Garden and Forest in 1892. Writing of Erica hyemalis he said: "It may be said with truth that no other plant is grown in such enormous quantities for the London market." He further states that a plant in a 5-inch pot, with about 15 shoots a foot high, and loaded with perhaps 1,000 flowers, sold for about 36 cents. Erica melanthera is our Christmas variety, but one would be fortunate to secure such a plant as above described for five times that amount. In all the large retail stores the heather was a leading attraction, both as single plants and in combinations. Plants four feet high and cortias, which is a literal error, as the flowers of the poinsettias are insignificant; its bright red leaves being its glory. The poinsettias were never finer, and they were offered in sizes of pans and pots that should have been acceptable to both fat and lean pocketbooks. The smaller plants were freely used in combination. Although there was considerable anxiety among growers last fall, on account of delay and tardy arrivals of azaleas, many were in good flower for Christmas. As holiday plants, their attractiveness and popularity do not wane. The Otahite oranges were handsome features, much well fruited and ripened stock being noticed. Though strictly speaking, they are not novelties, an element of novelty is attached to them. A few camellias and daphnes were seen. Of the camellias, we judge that it was too early for many to be in flower, and it is doubtful if many of the daphnes are grown in this vicinity. There was fine stock of cyclamens, many being large and well flowered. As at Thanksgiving, Begonia Mrs. Peterson was much in evidence, their chief attraction being in hanging baskets, in the show windows. There was a good exhibit of the berried plants, though good ardisias were rather scarce. Aucubas, solanums, celestial peppers, and good plants of imported holly were noticed. The solanums were plentiful and well fruited. It was late, or early, whichever way you may put it, for spring blossoms, but a few crab apples were seen. In foliage plants there were excellent exhibits. The crotons, in variety, were plentiful, and many of them were used with fine effect in respondingly branched, were not unusual, neither was $25 and $30 an unusual price. As to the ribbon decorations which every retailer lavishes on large plants, tastes varied. There are now ribbons to match every flower and occasionally a shade is used that does not match; but that is another story. Red and pink ribbon was largely used on the heathers, but plants were noticed that were decorated with plaid ribbon. We sometimes speak of well flowered poinset-combination hampers and baskets. Marantas, adiantums and other varieties of the ferns were also used in the same way. One of the poets, in describing a dull witted fellow, gave us this:

"A primrose by the river's brim,
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more."

But the poet was not writing about our modern greenhouse primroses. Good primroses were noticed, and as a modestly attractive and reasonably priced plant, the primrose should always have a place. Various features were noticed, which if not strictly in the plant line, were related. A number of retailers had large stocks of Christmas trees. At one retail store a specialty was numbers of small trees two to four feet in height, gaily decorated with the red winter berries; of crotons was another feature. Marantas and Anthurium Scherzerianum were also noticed. The stock of heathers, begonias, poinsettias and azaleas was very fine.

G. E. M. Stumpp, Fifth avenue and 58th street displayed a fine stock of all the best varieties of plants. For the holidays, he has taken a second heite oranges, aucubas, poinsettias and crotons. The combination baskets and hampers were particularly fine.

Hanft Brothers, Madison avenue and 62nd street, had many good features in plants and plant combinations, heathers, poinsettias, azaleas, solanums and cyclamens being noteworthy.

Myer, Madison avenue and 58th street, always makes a specialty of Christmas trees, but they by no means overshadowed his stock of plants, which was very fine.

David Clarke's Sons, Broadway and 75th street, who have an exceptionally large store, had it well filled at the beginning of the Christmas business, with a great stock of the finest of plants. Their heathers, poinsettias, and particularly their cyclamens, were exceptionally good.

At the store of the Drakos Co., Broadway and 116th street, an exceptionally fine stock of azaleas were noticed. Camellias, poinsettias, bougainvilleas, and many fine basket combinations were also seen at this store.

Young & Nugent, the retailers of West 28th street, had an exceptionally fine stock of azaleas and poinsettias, with other good features.

Christatos & Koster, 717 Madison avenue, had an excellent window display of hanging baskets of Begonia Mrs. Peterson, and carried a good stock throughout.

The window display at Galvin's, Fifth avenue and 46th street, was very attractive, being entirely of Otaheite oranges, with profuse decorations of yellow ribbon. Good cattleyas and other plants were also in stock.

Wernz & Koehne, Fifth avenue and 13th street, cater to the artist colony of Washington Square. They had a fine stock of plants, including many pleasing features in combinations.

Charles H. Brown, 2366 Broadway, always keeps a fine store and his star is particularly brilliant at Christmas. His trade calls for fine stock and for this season he was finely prepared.

LEMON'S FLOWER SHOP, RICHMOND, IND.—See Page 1286.

and they sold well. Hanging balls of boxwood, decorated with immortelles, were pleasing features.

NOTES.

At the store of C. A. Dards, Madison avenue and 44th street, an exceptionally fine stock of heathers, poinsettias, azaleas, cyclamens, Otaheite oranges and a variety of foliage plants were noticed.

Hession, Madison avenue and 76th street, had a great stock of the finest of plants. In orchids, both cattleyas and cypripediums were featured. Imported holly, crab apples, heathers, cyclamens and begonias were all very noteworthy.

At the new and large store of J. H. Small & Sons, there is ample space for display and it was utilized with fine effect, even to the skylights. Garlands of laurel roping, hanging baskets of plants and red bells made a decoration worthy of a Christmas festival. This firm has long been noted for their fine boxwood and red berried wreaths, and there were many of them, they being displayed on the front of the store facing the street. They had their usual display of fine plants, many of which were grown in their own greenhouses at Washington, D. C.; noteworthy, arranged around the rim of the fountain, was a particularly fine exhibit of celestial peppers. Over the entrance to the fountain there was a hanging of velvet on which wreaths were deftly arranged. Their heathers, azaleas, poinsettias and foliage plants were of fine quality.

Alexander McConnell, Fifth avenue and 49th street, had as usual, a grand display of the finest plants. The best camellias anywhere noticed were at this store. A remarkably fine exhibit store, where his great stock of novelties in Egyptian and other vases, goldfish globes, flower bowls and many other features were handsomely arranged. We found Mrs. Stumpp presiding at this store.

Henry Hart, 1000 Madison avenue, had a splendid stock of heather, Ota-

Smedley Floral Co., Fargo, N. D.

If Max Schling, 22 West 59th street, is not busy preparing for Christmas he is sure to be busy at something else, as activity, so to speak, is his other name. He is always well stocked with holiday plants and his Christmas stock was up to its usual high standard.

J. G. Leikens, Madison avenue and 55th street, who, we have sometimes had occasion to note, has in Mrs. Leikens a very clever partner, had, as usual, a good stock of all the best in plants.

Fred. H. Lemon & Co., Richmond.

In cities and towns considerably removed from the large business centers, florists find it most profitable to grow their own supply, or as much of it as possible. In the smaller towns, the flowers are sold at the greenhouses, but as the population increases, it is often found advisable to open a store in the central retail district to better serve the trade, many would-be customers not having the time or caring to go out to the greenhouses for trivial purchases. Fred H. Lemon built up a very good business at his greenhouses on the outskirts of Richmond, Ind., but felt finally that by establishing a store in town he could divide his forces, and by running each with a separate organization give his customers better service and also increase the efficiency at the greenhouses.

The store, conveniently located on Main street, in the heart of the retail district, is nicely fitted up with refrigerator, flower case, shelving for baskets, jardiniers and other necessary supplies. There are also cases for ribbons and choice pieces of bric-a-brac. A round card stand or table, with an electric light surmounted with a large shade above the center, is a feature. All work is made up in a rear room, just off the store. There is a large show window to which much attention is given. One of "Henry C.'s" indispensable cars is an important factor in the delivery service.

At the greenhouses, about a mile away, there is found a stock, considering its varied character, that is in very good condition for the season as to quality and forwardness. Several houses of carnations were producing splendid flowers. Enchantress, pink and white; Mrs. Ward, Beacon, Enchantress Supreme and White Wonder are the varieties. All young plants are raised from stock grown for the purpose. After filling the houses, a table is planted with varieties as desired in a cool house and from these cuttings are taken; when enough are rooted the old stock is thrown out and the young plants take their place. On the borders of some of the carnation tables are forget-me-nots, which Mr. Lemon said he had in last season at Christmas. He has perfected this strain by selection and feels sure he will soon have stock that can be depended on to always come by that time. Godfrey callas, in pots close together, along a sweet pea bed, are soon to be distributed about the houses to fill in any waste spaces in an effort to make every foot of room count. These callas are found much freer than the California varieties, averaging about 15 flowers from two bulbs in an eight-inch pot.

A table of poinsettias, planted out, is full of medium sized flowers. These stock plants are set out early; two crops of cuttings are taken and the plants then trained or made to carry two and three shoots, which produce good medium-sized flowers, just suited for his trade. A batch of late struck cuttings in two-inch pots for stock plants were on their side under a table.

A number of the houses here were erected by E. G. Hill in 1889 and are still in fair condition. A large modern Lord & Burnham rose house is filled with Ophelia and the Killarneys, all planted on ground beds about a foot high, with 4-inch tile crosswise of the beds, the open ends being exposed. Mr. Lemon finds this bed can be watered without danger in dull weather and that one month or more is added to the efficiency of the plants in late spring and summer, the roots going down between the tile deep into the cool ground.

Schizanthus, he has found, a most valuable cut flower in its season. Strong young plants are being potted up to follow the chrysanthemums. Larkspur is another good early spring flower; clumps potted and kept in frames outside are brought in January 1 and brought slowly along. Cut first in March, they are very fine at Easter. A table of solanums for the holidays were in fine shape. A dwarf sort with large berries looked quite distinct and valuable. Calendula Orange King and selections of his own to perfect a large single with black center, which sold well, filled a table.

Mr. Lemon, in speaking of ways to extend the business said the F. T. D. had been a great help, both in encouraging long distance orders when his trade learned how it was possible and in the same service in his city and territory for other members. He thought that many did not get the adlieve the strain of the rush days later. He finds it works out very well. The kind of advertising he finds most effective, is short, carefully worded announcements of specific items. A comparatively small ad, with only one thing in it, boldly set, will be read almost unconsciously by innumerable people who do not read advertisements.

Smedley Floral Co., Fargo, N. D.

The Smedley Floral Co., Fargo, N. D., the interior of whose retail store at 69 Broadway, that city, is shown in the illustration herewith, one of the best equipped establishments of its kind in the state, was opened December 1, 1908, by T. D. Smedley, under the name of the Fargo Floral Co., and was incorporated under the name of the Smedley Floral Co., December 1, 1915. The company also maintains a large range of glass one mile from the salesroom, fresh stock being delivered daily by auto, and in order to keep abreast of the ever increasing demand, 10 acres of land have been recently purchased one mile from the city, upon which will be erected an additional range consisting of five houses, each 27x200 feet. The company has 500 live agencies, located at points within shipping distance, and much credit is due T. D. Smedley for the splendid growth of the business in so short a time, which he attributes to stock of high quality, reasonable prices, prompt service and courteous treatment. He is assisted by Charles F. Edgar, formerly of Boston, Mass., as store manager and Oscar Nelson, the latter in charge of the greenhouse department.

vantageous returns possible because they failed to push it with their customers. He felt that if every member would do his share of missionary work, much greater benefits would result to all.

He used the local papers whenever it was decided to announce week-end or other specials, particularly when flowers were plentiful. At holiday times, he advertises lower prices, but only for advance orders, to try and re-

Ivies in the Store.

Hardy ivies are quite popular as house plants; they can be trailed up over window frames, are good for hanging baskets, for trained specimens in fan or pyramid shapes and are also effective as an ornament for the vestibule. Short, bushy two-inch pot stock are much used for filling fern dishes for the dinner table. A line of ivy plants should be in every florist's stock.

WITH THE GROWERS

Samuel J. Pearce, Chicago.

There is not a grower of bulbous stock but would be much benefited by a visit to the establishment of Samuel J. Pearce, located at Fifty-seventh and Higgins avenue, Chicago. His greenhouse plant of 50,000 feet of glass, in the center of an eight acre tract, is a model range, consisting of 16 wide, the bulbs being set almost touching in furrows just below the surface; as they grow the ridges of earth are filled in. This light covering encourages the bulb to start quicker. When the soil is leveled in, it soon becomes filled with roots from the stem. Cold storage bulbs do not come up well if planted too deep. Shading cloth, in yard width, over the beds, about four feet high, runs the length of the houses; this is to encourage longer stems. The stock cut here av-and other like stock is stored after being potted, or planted in flats. The pots are placed around the house on shelves, with the flats piled to eighteen tiers in height in the center, with sticks between to give a couple of inches of air space. As many as 500,000 bulbs are stored here at one time. The temperature keeps the bulbs from making anything but the necessary root growth. Another large enclosure, called the night room, as dark as pitch, is kept at a forcing temperature, where tulips and other bulbs when well rooted, are placed, and brought along in quantities as desired. When the stems have reached the right height they are placed out in the light shed, which has a large skylight in the roof and abundant windows, where the bleached foliage is colored and hardened, and the buds attain full size. This method of culture makes one independent of the weather; there is no damage from frozen tops or broken pots and other injuries so liable to stock grown outside. The length of stem is also secured without forcing it through a lot of covering material.

The third crop is bedding plants, over 100,000 of which are grown into four-inch pot size. Fifty thousand of these are geraniums; cannas, about 15,000, and a large block of salvias. Variegated vincas are another specialty. Several houses are planted with geraniums for stock, cuttings of which will soon be taken. Another crop will follow later. This is all managed so as to be in as forward condition as possible to fill the tables after Easter. Two thousand five hundred Baby Rambler roses, just received from France, furnished stock for late spring and Memorial day sales.

In speaking about forcing lilies, Mr. Pearce recommends that they be given as much rest as possible before potting; it is a mistake to put them in at once on arrival—they will grow much better if thoroughly ripened before being placed in the soil, and should be well rooted before plant growth is encouraged. He has found a temperature of 60 degrees the best for his houses.

Lilies are all cut when in bud, carrying much better in this condition. Over night in water, before delivery, houses in two blocks, built on the ridge and furrow plan, 12 in one section and four in another. They are 125 feet in length with a width of from 16 to 25 feet. All are of Moninger construction, heated with two 50-inch sectional boilers, and a centrifugal circulator from the same company. The system is hot water. All the houses open into the service building, or shed, a commodious, well lighted structure, 25x230 feet. A door at the end of each walk makes a convenient access to each section.

Lilium giganteum is grown the year round, all seven to nine inch bulbs; always in quantity, except at peony, chrysanthemum and gladiolus seasons. Formosum does not appeal to Mr. Pearce, as he has to wait too long to get the full crop. Smaller bulbs than seven by nine are not strong enough to force satisfactorily. He keeps table space in use all the time, one crop following another in quick succession.

Chrysanthemums, poinsettias and bedding plants are grown in connection with the bulbous stock, three full crops being taken from each house during the year. About 60,000 lilies are forced; 16,000 of these have been planted following chrysanthemums as the several varieties were cut out. They are of this fall's importation, that were put in cold storage immediately on arrival, which helps to ripen them; these will be cutting before March. None of the stock being brought on for Easter is benched or potted until after December 15, giving the bulbs as much time to rest and ripen as possible. Five-inch pots are used for the Easter stock, which is kept under tables and follows the poinsettias, being placed on the benches after Jan. 1. The bulbs for cut flowers are planted in rows six inches apart across a table, four feet, ten inches erages from 24 to 30 inch stems, although a number are 36-inch. Many cut stems carry three, four and five flowers, but Mr. Pearce says the average to a bulb, in cold storage stock, is only two, as some do not start.

Benches of French Golden Spur, not so heavy, but earlier than the Holland stock, will be in for the holidays. The first were cut December 15. Paper whites are planted on tables as thickly as the bulbs will permit—the crop was fine. The florets of the sprays are allowed to get at least four-fifths open before cutting.

The bulb rooms are a feature. The cold section is 22 by 120 feet where the tulips, daffodils, narcissi, hyacinths is the practice when possible. In delivering pot Easter lilies, they are packed in the car, laid down; there is not nearly the danger from bruising as when standing. In his large car he can pack four tiers of plants by this method.

"Sam" Pearce, as the Chicago boys like to call him, is a careful and practical grower—always on the job. He has had failures, but has learned by these costly experiences how to avoid them. He believes it best to specialize, find out how to do a thing well, and then grow it in quantity, when its quality will command the top price.

Madsen & Christensen, Woodridge, N. J.

To be exact, the full names of the members of this firm are Christian Madsen and Knud Christensen, and as these names indicate, they were reared

"Far in the northern land
By the wild Baltic's strand."

To stick to accuracy, they are Danes, than which there is not a more industrious and law-abiding people on the face of the earth. But it is with the activities of Madsen & Christensen as florists in this country that we now have to do.

They bought a small range at Woodridge in 1905 and have since greatly added to it, having now about 40,000 square feet of glass. Their specialty is daisies grown in pots, of which they have an immense stock, ranging from 2-inch up to 14-inch pots, the greater part probably being in from 6-inch to 12-inch pots. They have also a few plants grown to standards, about four feet high.

Probably there are florists who consider the marguerite an old-fashioned and lowly flower, but as grown by these men, it is remarkably fine. From the first spring flower show that has been held in New York to the last one, they have taken first prizes for their daisies; also prizes for genistas. In the last named plants they are also very strong, having a large stock and many grown to standards. Another very noteworthy feature is their stock of thousands of plants of celestial peppers, which even now are showing fine color. Other noteworthy stocks are poinsettias, myrtles, hydrangeas, azaleas, wallflowers and begonias.

Practically all of their stock is sold in New York. Both members of the firm are popular members of the New York Florists' Club, Mr. Madsen having been nominated as one of the trustees at the last meeting. A. F. F.

Frisz, Apt Angler.

When Phil J. Foley, genial president of the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., Chicago, invites his friends to go fishing with him at Lake Geneva, Wis., a pastime that he thoroughly enjoys, he leads the way to where the "big ones" are to be found and almost invariably brings home indisputable evidence of his prowess. The accompanying illustration, an echo of the meeting of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America at Chicago, September 26-29, 1916, shows one of the big ones caught by John Frisz of Vincennes, Ind., who accompanied Mr. Foley on an expedition and qualified as a member of the Isaak Walton fraternity. The photograph, of which Mr. Frisz is very proud, was taken upon his return to Vincennes with his prize.

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Palm Houses After the Holidays.

As the holiday season passes by, there are some vacant spaces to be utilized in the palm houses, for the gifts of that season, as well as its festivities, demand a considerable number of palms, and at the same time a great variety of sizes, from those in 2-inch and 3-inch pots that are used by thousands as centers for fern dishes, up to specimens 10 feet in height that are used in fine decorations.

John Frisz and a Lake Geneva Beauty.
One of the Big Ones in His Catch, While a Guest of Phil Foley at the Wisconsin Resort.

In the fern dishes the first favorites are Cocos Weddeliana and Kentia Belmoreana, both of which are supplied in stock and well furnished young plants about a year old, and in order to grow plants of this type, it is necessary to give them sufficient space to develop.

For the best results next Christmas, it is not too early to plan now, giving the seedling stock some of the space that has been cleared by this season's business, and selecting a place where the plants will get both light and heat enough for a continued growth inasmuch as the season will permit.

It will be understood that the latter remark does not signify that unlimited heat may be applied to the young palms at this season, but rather that a regular temperature should be maintained at night of 60° to 65° for the young stock, with a rise of 15° to 20° with the help of the sun during the day. Such an atmosphere will allow of free syringing every bright day, and on this to some extent will depend the retardation of the various crops of noxious insects that are always to be expected in warm greenhouses.

The damping down of dry corners and under the steam pipes, with the hose, will also be beneficial as the artificial heat is increased, for these dry corners form fine breeding-places for thrips and red spiders, both of which will do much injury in a short time in a house that is not carefully watered.

It has long been contended by some growers that foliage plants in general would be encouraged in growth during the winter season by having the water supply heated to a reasonable degree, for example, to about the same temperature as the house in which it is used, and after a man has syringed a few houses with water at about 40 degrees, as sometimes happens with a city supply, and he finds his fingers gradually becoming numb with the cold water, he is very likely to become a convert to the warm water theory. But apart from the greater comfort of working with water at 65° to 70°, there is no question but that such a watering will be less liable to check the root action of tender plants, and will thus tend to encourage a longer season of growth.

We recognize the fact that palms in general have a season of partial rest, during which the leaf growth makes little or no progress, this period varying to some extent with the weather, or rather the average temperature of the season, but usually extending in the eastern United States from about December 15 to February 15. During that period the plants are not greatly benefited by repotting, unless it may be some young stock that is much starved, and only a small shift should be given those, else the soil may become soured before the roots take possession of it.

Shading is not required at this time, the full sunshine being much more beneficial, and helping the texture of the foliage and the habit of the plants, but owing to the fact that the average greenhouse is almost sure to have more or less of defective glass in its roof, one has to watch the weather conditions during the latter part of February in order to get a light shade on the roofs before any damage is done to the tender foliage.

Kentia and cocos continue to be the palms for the million, so to speak, the first named probably selling in the proportion of at least ten to one of any other species, and anyone venturing to stock any palms for the retail trade in a new locality cannot go far wrong in trying these two species, bearing in mind the fact that the kentia will stand a somewhat lower temperature than the cocos, and that neither of them will enjoy getting dry at the roots. In fact, it is a wise precaution for the retail dealer to impress on his customers the need of thorough watering of the well-rooted kentias he may sell them, but at the same time instructing them that stagnant water in the bottom of a jardiniere is responsible for some of the troubles they may meet with.

A satisfied customer is very likely to induce several friends to experiment with plants, and the spread of horticultural knowledge is what brings customers to the florist, so a little patience in listening to and diagnosing the troubles of some amateur plantsman, will often bring a very satisfactory return. And if scale insects appear, soap solutions applied with a sponge or soft cloth, are the safest remedies to recommend for domestic use; almost any good soap dissolved in water in the proportion of ½ ounce of the soap to one gallon of water may be safely used. EXCELLENT CHRISTMAS DEMAND.

Christmas business was excellent. Many more flowers might have been utilized had they been on hand in time. Many of the shipments into this city from the east and south were from 24 to 36 hours late and came in after the heavy Christmas buying was over. Some of the shipments were frozen. Roses are in a good supply. The receipts include some excellent offerings. Some splendid American Beauties are coming into the wholesale houses. Poinsettia receipts are excellent. Easter lilies are plentiful. The supply of Paper White narcissus is sufficient to take care of present wants for this bloom. Stevia is in excellent supply. Violets, sweet peas, lily of the valley and orchids may be had. Other offerings include snapdragons, callas and rubrum lilies.

NOTES.

P. J. Olinger had a nice cut of red roses and his new red carnation, Radium, for his holiday trade.

The Wm. Murphy Co. reports the Christmas business as the best they have ever had for that day.

L. H. Kyrk had choice stock in roses, poinsettias and stevia for his Christmas business.

Gus Adrian and J. T. Conger both had excellent lots of azaleas for Christmas.

Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange had an excellent lot of choice poinsettias.

The Late Asa L. Brown.

Asa L. Brown, often called "Daisy" Brown by his intimate friends, who for over 30 years has been a grower at Kearny, near Newark, New Jersey, passed away December 21, aged 68 years. He had been a grower of plants and cut flowers, shipping the latter to the New York market, where he was well known and highly respected. His funeral was held on December 24. He is survived by a widow and one son, Walter L. Brown, who will continue the business.

WE take great pleasure in wishing all our patrons happiness and prosperity during 1917.

IT IS believed the next meeting of the executive committee of the Society of American Florists will be held at New York, during the flower show in that city, March 15-22.

WE are in receipt of the first preliminary programme of the Fifth National Flower Show, to be held at St. Louis, Mo., April 6-15, 1918. Copies may be had on application to Secretary John Young, 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

MANY hardy plants, trees and shrubs, frozen solid on receipt, if not unpacked but allowed to thaw out in an even temperature of about 40-42 degrees, will be found to have suffered but little damage. Unpacking frozen stock in a warm room is fatal.

THE early crop of complaints of frozen plants and cut flowers was a big one and still they come. Except for Saturday and Sunday both growers and retailers were in a bad fix for making deliveries. It will be a long fight to collect from the express companies.

Now for 1917.

Now is the time of resolution—the time to plan for the coming year, the time to put one's foot down with the avowed determination that he will or he will not, as the case may be.

Before we turn over the new leaf, let us look at the old. Are we satisfied with the record; if not, in what respects have we failed? The men of our acquaintance, who make more or less of a success of life, and who are honored by their fellows, are those who make the most of their God-given talents. It is this power to make the best use of his natural ability that stamps the man.

As we scan last year's pages, the many lost opportunities stand out and humble us to the dust. We failed here and there because of our unreadiness, because we did not do our best. We were too faint-hearted; we lost enthusiasm, the most vital of all our energies. The secret of success is—do it the best you know how, stick to your work, concentrate on the essentials, resolve to make the most of each new day, to plan that the coming week will be better in results than the last, that the months, as they roll by, shall be filled with comforting and not regrettable memories.

Turn over the new leaf, and resolve that every day in this new year of promise and opportunity, shall be a new day, when with our spirits high and work planned to be done the best we know how, it will be a well spent day to be added to those gone before, all helping to make this our most successful year.

Christmas in Black and White.

Each recurring holiday season brings its experiences; its triumphs and as well the more or less failures. No matter how much one knows about the business, there is always something to be learned. Each day brings in new situations, which at the rush of the holiday business, are constantly arising and calling for instant decision. Now that the Christmas trade is over, a careful resume should be made and the results written down, so that the mistakes of the past will not occur next year. Each important feature from the commencement of the stock buying, to the inventory of the unsold, should be gone into minutely; the stock that sold best, that which was most profitable, the new things, if any, how they "took." Did plants sell well? From whom did the best come? Were the plant baskets right? Would other colors have been better? Was there anything new in wreaths that sold well? How about the extra help and deliveries; was there delay here? All these and dozens of other questions will make very interesting reading when next season's Christmas business is being laid out.

This record should be made at once, while the details are still fresh in mind. Dates are very necessary, particularly in ordering plant stock. "When are you coming out to look us over?" Often gets a short answer on a busy day; the trip is postponed. Other busy days come and finally the stock, when seen, is nearly all set aside, marked sold. Telegrams from out of town sources bring replies, "only smaller sizes left," and the business is greatly handicapped in consequence. Next season's perusal of this record brings forcibly to mind the necessity of early ordering and first instead of last selections are pretty certain to be made.

Clippings of the advertisements used for this season, as well as the circulars, invitations and all such literature, should be filed with the other records. All efforts in making wreaths, mossing frames, stemming artificial flowers, grasses and the like, during the dull months of summer, should also be noted. This record making is an old story to many, but comparatively few take the trouble, little as it is, to have this season's business down in black and white, as a guide when next year's busy times comes along.

Pot Shortage.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

I noticed an article in the New York newsletter of THE AMERICAN FLORIST of December 2, page 1064, which states the pot situation is causing men to be laid off on account of shortage of pots. There is a shortage, but let's be fair and place the blame where it belongs. I know there are potteries enough throughout the country, each well equipped with sufficient kilns and machinery to make plenty of pots, if men could be obtained to run them. There has been, and are still, many dollars worth of idle machinery because of "labor" and on labor alone, I place the principal reason for the shortage. The advance in wages has been met each time, and no doubt will have to be met again soon. The total number of pots used is no greater than in former years, nor is the demand larger but long delayed shipments make it appear so, and one good reason for delay is the freight embargoes placed upon the eastern cities by the railroad companies.

The grower must understand that during all last spring and summer, the potter was fighting for him, while running with depleted labor force, trying to get the additional labor necessary to make up the stock of pots needed for this fall trade and that he is still trying hard to fill his fall orders and making stock for the winter and spring trade, hoping to have enough for all hands when needed, and as far as the Whilldin Pottery Company is concerned we are now working to full capacity and gradually catching up with our fall orders. Our trouble at present is "freight embargo."

Christmas Trade.

Reports received from various centers indicate a highly satisfactory Christmas trade, in many instances the most prosperous for a considerable period. Stock generally was of excellent quality, but many items were short of requirements. The trade prepared for a record-breaking business in plant sales and in nearly every case an early clean-up at good prices resulted. Much more stock could have been disposed of had it been available. Made-up baskets were more popular than ever. Poinsettias, cyclamens and azaleas, the latter limited in supply, were the favorites in the plant section. Roses led in cut blooms, with a good demand for nearly everything offered. Prices were better on the average than a year ago. In some localities cold weather damaged shipments, but local deliveries were made without difficulty on the whole.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE,

Philadelphia Notes.

The Christmas business was quite up to all that was expected; most, in fact all, of the growers, sold almost completely out, only the culls being left. H. A. Dreer, Inc., had an unusually large demand for small plants. The Robert Craig Co. had its very best Christmas. A splendid holiday trade is the report of W. K. Harris. Henry F. Michell Co. had a large Christmas stock but sold out completely. Godfrey Ashmann had a great run on all kinds of Christmas stock. The report was the same all along the line, with everybody satisfied, except that they could have sold more. The very cold weather was, of course, a handicap as was the poor express service. There was an immense shipping trade in cut flowers; the supply was large and varied. Roses were in great demand, except for the white, which later moved slowly. Carnations sold well. Lily of the valley was more than equal to the demand. White lilac was one of the choice things. Sweet peas were never better for the season and had an immense sale. Violets, the single particularly, were fine and in good demand. There was a good supply of Easter lilies, which, however, were rather overlooked. Stevia sold well; there was a good supply of this standard flower.

There was the usual display of handsome flowering and foliage plants and made-up plant baskets in the stores of H. H. Battles, J. J. Habermehl's Sons Co., Pennock Brothers, Charles Henry Fox, Robt. Craig Co., M. J. Callahan, Robt. Crawford, J. Wolf Moore, John C. Gracey and others; all had splendid stocks of everything for the holiday trade. Wreaths there were in great variety, many of them very artistic. There was also an immense business done in cut flowers. High grade roses were never better and sold well, as did violets, lily of the valley and orchids. Cattleyas were, however, scarce and high.

The Edward Reid plan to facilitate express shipments worked out very successfully and he feels amply repaid for the trouble he went to in this matter. All the shippers of cut flowers in this market were greatly benefited and of the many orders he sent out, some to quite distant points, only two boxes were not delivered on time.

The Leo Niessen Co. reports a splendid business. American Beauty and other high grade roses were in great demand. White lilac was a feature.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. was taxed to the utmost to get their orders out. An immense stock and very little left is their enviable record.

A splendid business was enjoyed by the Berger Brothers. Everything sold well. Poinsettias, high grade roses and carnations were features here.

Mention the American Florist when writing

"All we could handle" was the word from Edward Reid; a very satisfactory Christmas and no kicks from out-of-town on account of non-deliveries.

Stuart Miller's Christmas trade was very satisfactory. Roses, poinsettias, carnations and violets were all in good demand—a good clean up.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange did an immense business in roses, they having a very full stock of all varieties.

BEST CHRISTMAS TRADE IN HISTORY.

Christmas business was the best ever experienced by the local florists. The active buying started early in the week, when the artificial effects, which every florist was well supplied with, asserted their popularity and as the days passed, plants engaged more attention of the public and the placing of advance orders for cut flowers easily indicated the heavy trade that was to follow on Saturday. Flowering plants were much sought and all available stock of poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias and azaleas was early in the day fairly well exhausted, and all had to fall back on the cut flowers to meet the demand for floral gifts. American Beauty, as a high price item, was more popular than a year ago, but violets, to the surprise of everyone, met with little favor though the quality was fine and an immense stock was on the market, far in excess of the call. Carnations, because of the limited stock, were not a factor, while roses of deep color filled the substantial cut flower orders. Cut poinsettias were fine, but were scarcely as popular as a year ago. Paper White narcissi sold well and many were used in assorted collections of cut flowers, and some Roman hyacinths were similarly used. Lilies, too, sold well and the stock was good. The severity of the weather caused much trouble, starting with the late arrival of shipments from other points and the frozen condition of much of the stock received and the trouble was added to by the difficulty of local deliveries. Monday morning, however, the weather moderated considerably and few reports of injured flowers were heard. Very stiff prices were held on roses all week till Saturday when they dropped in price and belated shipments began to arrive to an extent that it was feared a glut would result. It may be said that the natural demand was more than ever inclined to flowering plants, but the stock of these being limited, was the sole redemption of the cut flower division of the immense and highly satisfactory trade that everyone enjoyed.

J. F. S.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Miss Mollie Smith, formerly employed by J. H. Rebstock, has opened the Allen Flower Shop at Allen and Pearl streets.

TEWKSBURY, MASS.—C. S. Ketchum, who transports the stock of a number of growers in this vicinity to the Boston market, was severely injured recently when a storage battery exploded. He may lose his sight as the result.

What H. H. Battles, of Philadelphia, says about his Autocars:

W. H. Battles, the Philadelphia florist, bought his first Autocar in 1910—now uses two, averaging 50 miles a day each in busy times, and has just placed his order for a third, “without even thinking of any other make” as they recently said. “These cars cover all suburbs, including Norristown, Wilmington, Paoli, Torresdale, etc., saving time and assuring satisfactory delivery at all seasons.”

Autocars are used by well-known Florists in many leading cities. One Autocar can be depended upon to do the work of 4 to 6 horses at less operating cost.

CHRISTMAS BUSINESS AHEAD OF 1915.

The Christmas business, from all reports, was surprisingly good and away ahead of last year, with a heavy out-of-town demand. Everything, with the exception of white carnations, sold quickly at good prices, and the clean-up was the greatest ever experienced for many years, considering the large quantity of stock offered. The quality of the stock in general was fine compared to previous years and the only complaints heard were in regard to flowers being cut too tight and this was especially true in regard to roses and carnations. Considerable stock from out-of-town points arrived here frozen, particularly violets from New York and California, and gardenias and orchids. One dealer alone had 1,250 orchids frozen, which were a total loss, and made quite a dent in the supply, consequently what other stock was offered in this line sold quickly at the advertised quotations. Violets sold fast at good prices, and cleaned up completely long before the rush was over. Sweet peas were in exceptionally good demand and in short supply and in some instances sold away above the prices quoted. American Beauty roses never sold better for Christmas than they did this year and the home grown stock was in brisk demand at high prices and was disposed of almost as quickly as they reached the store. The eastern supply of American Beauty roses did not affect the home-grown stock any and only sold after the local blooms were off the market. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses sold surprisingly well and were in good supply, but there was no surplus at any time and prices held firm. Richmond, Rhea Reid, Hoosier Beauty, Milady and Hadley sold like hot-cakes on a cold winter day, and there were not near enough to supply the heavy demand. Ophelia was in brisk demand, and so were Sunburst, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney and the newer varieties of roses obtainable in this market. Red and pink carnations were quickly picked up at high prices, but the demand for white was limited and this was about the only item that did not clear. Lily of the valley was in good supply, but sold early and there was no stock whatever left after the rush was over. Poinsettias, snapdragons, bouvardias, daisies, calendulas, narcissi, jonquils, freesias, Romans, stevia, lilies, callas, mignonette and other miscellaneous cut flowers had a good call and in almost all instances cleaned up satisfactorily. Greens were in good demand, especially boxwood, which advanced in price toward the end. Red winterberries cleaned up almost entirely with the exception of a few cases of inferior stock that the dealers made no special effort to push. California holly was in heavy demand and was used extensively by the retail florists, owing to the scarcity of good winterberries. Some complaints were heard from out-of-town customers in regard to shipments arriving late and some incoming stock from the greenhouses, shipped by express, were held up for some time, but considering the tremendous number of packages handled by the express companies, the service was good, considering the conditions, and outside of the stock that was frozen, no one has any great license to kick. There was some talk of an express drivers' strike a few days before Christmas, but it was merely gossip, although for a time everyone was worried more or less, and hustled their shipments out as early as possible, for fear there would be one. The city demand for stock was very good, although trade Sunday was not as brisk as it might be, but at that, there was very little to offer. The retail florists in general report the Christmas trade as very good and considerably ahead of 1915, with splendid demand for plants, which cleaned up completely at an early hour in almost all instances. The weather last week was very cold, with the thermometer registering from two to ten degrees below zero. Thursday and Friday, December 21-22, when the heaviest shipping was done. It also snowed heavily and this whole vicinity was covered by a blanket of white, which presented a regular old-fashioned Christmas appearance. On Saturday the weather began to moderate and on Sunday it rained a little, but toward evening it turned much colder, and on Christmas day the weather was splendid, and gave the retail florists a chance to land some of the orders that they missed the day before. Taking everything into consideration, the 1916 Christmas business was very satisfactory, and practically everyone of the wholesalers report a great increase over that of 1915, with the biggest cleanup in years. The buyers who took advantage of the tip given in the two previous market reports in THE AMERICAN FLORIST and placed their orders well in advance, were all taken care of, but those who waited until the last minute experienced a great deal of trouble in securing just the kind of stock they wanted and paid higher prices. One large city buyer who always bought at the last minute in former years, says he placed all of his orders early after reading the reports, and profited thereby to the extent of several hundred dollars.

NOTES.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are featuring a splendid assortment of orchids, including cattleyas, vandas and cypripediums and report a brisk demand for same. Some very choice Milady roses and smilax are also included in the regular daily shipments. Mr. Vaughan is well pleased with the Christmas trade at his house and the only complaint he has to make is on the frozen stock that was received and the shipments that were reported to have arrived late by their customers out of town.

Peter Reinberg had the best Christmas trade in the history of his firm and disposed of all the stock he had to offer without any trouble at all. The shipping trade was exceptionally heavy, according to Felix Reichling, who was ably assisted by the regular force and several of the boys from the greenhouses. They had a heavy supply of roses, particularly Mrs. Chas. Russell and Richmond, which were the two best sellers.

Edw. H. Goldenstein has become a member of the firm of Langhout & Co., wholesale bulb growers, Sassenheim, Holland, who have temporary offices with Maltus & Ware, New York, and the American Shipping Co., of this city. Mr. Goldenstein is well known to the trade here as well as elsewhere through his connection with one of the local seed houses and his many friends wish him every success in his new undertaking.

Percy Jones, Inc., announce that J. E. Pollworth, who has been with them for the last six months, is no longer in their employ. H. Van Gelder says that Percy Jones' holiday trade was the biggest ever and made the firm's next largest Christmas look like a good Saturday in summer time. This establishment did not close its doors from Thursday morning, December 21, until real late the following Saturday night.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association had a splendid supply of stock of all kinds to offer for Christmas, which cleaned up remarkably well at satisfactory prices with the exception of white carnations, which holds true for all the other houses in the local market. The shipping trade was the heaviest ever and the city demand was very satisfactory.

Wietor Bros. had a very satisfactory Christmas and cleaned up completely in all lines before the store closed at noon Christmas. They had a large and fine supply of American Beauty, Ophelia, Killarney and Killarney Brilliant roses and red and pink carnations. The shipping demand was the heaviest this house ever experienced.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. report their Christmas trade as the best ever, with a complete cleanup in all lines, even carnations. H. E. Philpott of Winnipeg, proved to be of valuable assistance to Mr. Pyfer and his regular force during the rush and graded so many roses the past week that he has qualified as an expert storeman.

C. B. Arnold, of the A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co., 1302 West Division street, announces a 10 per cent reduction in prices on all folding flower boxes per their advertisement, which appears elsewhere in this issue.

The A. L. Randall Co. had a splendid Christmas trade according to Eric Johnson, manager of the cut-flower department, who adds that the shipping trade particularly was surprisingly brisk.

Hoerber Bros.' Christmas trade was so brisk that they cleaned up completely in roses at an early hour and were obliged to buy more, so that all their orders could be filled in full.

M. C. Gunterberg cleaned up completely in double violets for Christmas and could have sold many thousands more had they been available.

W. J. Vesey and Dave Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., were visitors at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s establishment December 23.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has closed negotiations with J. E. Pollworth as a member of its company in the capacity of secretary and general manager, which gives him an opportunity to establish himself permanently in the wholesale cut-flower business. Mr. Pollworth is well acquainted with the retail trade in the northwest and southwest and with the local growers and will undoubtedly meet with success in his new capacity.

Zech & Mann had a fine Christmas business with the sales for the week running away ahead of last year. Alie Zech says that the shipping trade particularly was extra heavy and kept the force busy working overtime, so that all the orders could be filled on schedule. This firm received a consignment of fruits and nuts this week from one of their New Orleans growers for a Christmas present, which was greatly appreciated.

John Michelsen says the Christmas trade at E. C. Amling Co.'s store was very satisfactory and considerably ahead of 1915. Mr. Michelsen adds that there was more stock handled this Christmas than last year and while there was enough to go around, the cleanup was surprisingly good.

Chas. Erne says that Erne & Klingel are well satisfied with their Christmas business, which was extra good and much better than last year.

The American Bulb Co. had the Breitmeier Floral Co.'s new rose, sport of Ophelia, on display at its North Wabash avenue store last week, where it attracted much favorable attention. The Breitmeier Floral Co. has 3,000 plants of this variety growing at its greenhouses at Mt. Clemens, Mich., and from the reports of some of the growers who have had the opportunity and pleasure of inspecting it there, it has all the earmarks of a winner and the same habits as Ophelia in regard to producing qualities. It has been registered as Rose Pink Ophelia, and will be disseminated in 1918. The flower of Rose Pink Ophelia is nearly as large as Mrs. Chas. Russell and the color is a most pleasing pink, and there is no question but what it will prove to be a wonderful seller and popular with the public, as well as the trade. A. Miller brought it here, so the trade could pass judgment on it, and in all probability his firm will be an important factor in the distribution of this new promising sport.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. had a heavy Christmas trade and disposed of all the stock it had to offer at an early hour each day. The only thing to put a damper on the big business was the shipments that were reported frozen in transit and those delayed on the other end. Some packages that were supposed to have reached their destination December 22 did not arrive until after Christmas, while others which were sent out after reached there on time. Other houses report having experienced the same trouble and are anxiously waiting for the express companies to make a settlement so they will know just where they stand. Outside of these complaints Otto W. Frese says that Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s cut-flower business was away ahead of 1915.

Tied hand and foot with ropes, John Buchanan, a watchman, laid on a bench in the store of Schiller, the florist, at 2221-23 West Madison street, early December 26 and watched two experts drill and blow the safe in the place. The operation took them two hours. As the charge of nitro-glycerin was exploded Buchanan saw the door fly open, he saw the cracksmen grab what money there was in the safe and flee. The robbers got $50 for their night's work. Christmas receipts of $1,000 were saved, having been deposited elsewhere for fear of just such a visit.

The annual Christmas display at Garfield park was gorgeous in its wealth of poinsettias, begonias, azaleas and thousands of pots of white and yellow narcissus. White poinsettias and Buddleia Asiatica were attractive features. The end banks were in white and pink, the crescent sides white, yellow and red, while the center oval was of white and red. The effect of the various blending of colors was most artistic. There was the usual large attendance to enjoy the floral feast and other attractive features of this famous winter garden.

J. A. Budlong was in splendid crop with roses for Christmas and reports a splendid holiday business. This firm was fortunate in being in their newly enlarged quarters, otherwise they would have been unable to handle the large number of orders so satisfactorily. The shipping trade was very heavy and kept the boys on the jump every minute to get them out on time.

Bassett & Washburn never had such a fine Christmas business as they did this year and cleaned up early in all lines, especially roses, which were in heavy demand. This firm's new carnation, Belle Washburn, again brought top notch prices in the scarlet class and while they had a good cut it was impossible to fill anywhere near the demand.

The John Kruchten Co. moved a large quantity of choice boxwood for Christmas, which was in better demand than ever this season. One shipment arrived late but this firm is not worrying about disposing of it for it is still good property and moving well.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner had their share of the Christmas trade and are more than pleased with the amount of business that they did. They just had enough holly, boxwood, winterberries and mistletoe to carry them through up to the last minute.

Kyle & Foerster were more than pleased with their Christmas business, and report an exceedingly brisk demand for stock in general, particularly gardenias and violets, which cleaned up at an early hour at very satisfactory prices.

The White House Florist had a big demand for plants at its South Wabash avenue store and disposed of practically all that were offered. This firm placed its order several weeks in advance so as to guarantee its supply.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports good business in holiday plants and is now making preparations for moving its large stocks of spring bulbs and roots, cannas, gladioli, caladiums, etc.

George Perdikas cleaned up nicely in plants for Christmas, which were the best in years. He reports a good run on cut flowers, particularly roses, which sold well at high prices.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Hotel Morrison, next Thursday, January 4, at 8 p. m., when the officers elected at the December meeting will be installed.

Chas. J. Reardon, of Davenport, Ia., formerly of this city, is here with his family spending the holidays with friends.

The mid-winter show of the Garfield park conservatories opened December 24, and will continue to January 7.

The Pulverized Manure Co. mailed to its customers a very substantial and highly finished leather pocketbook.

Weiland & Risch report that their new rose, Champ Weiland, was one of their best sellers at Christmas.

The Lord & Burnham Co. remembered its local employees at Christmas in the form of a week's salary.

Chas. J. Strombach spent Christmas with his old friend, Andrew McAdams, at Melbourne, Fla.

Guy M. Reyburn returned from an out-of-town trip in time to spend Christmas here.

A. E. Turner, of Rosin & Turner, Mosinee, Wis., was a visitor this week.

John G. Witt, florist, 103rd and Wallace streets, is on the sick list.

CLEANUP OF CHRISTMAS SUPPLY.

Christmas was a great success. Stock was cleaned up everywhere. Although orders from other cities were delayed on account of the enormous amount of express, most of the shipments arrived in time to be of use. Cut flowers and plants were very popular, both for home decorations and gifts—the former were rather scarce, the latter in numerous varieties, were more plentiful, but not abundant. Cut poinsettias were in great demand ranging from $1.50 to $5.00 a dozen. Carnations were rather scarce and brought better prices than were expected. Roses were more plentiful, but brought good prices. Russells and red varieties were not very plentiful. A few chrysanthemums still lingered on the market and were well cleaned up. Smaller flowers, such as violets, sweet peas and narcissi, were very popular for corsage bouquets and house decorations. Pot plants, including poinsettias, cyclamens, primroses, begonias, and ferns were plentiful and sold well. Because of the great demand fern leaves were very scarce. Holly and other Christmas decorations, such as red ruscus, dyed teasel, etc., and evergreen trees, were over abundant and a great deal of stock was left over.

NOTES.

The next meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association will be held at the Claypool hotel, January 9. A meeting at 10 o'clock will be for the committees and those particularly interested in the carnation show. The regular business meeting will be that afternoon and evening.

The new Circle Flower Store has some very effective new Cusack signs distributed over the city. These advertisements are very beneficial to all the trade as they educate the public to the necessity of flowers for the home.

Competition has been very keen among the florists for Christmas orders. A great deal of advertising in newspapers, picture shows, circulars and billboards has been done.

Funeral work has been very heavy lately. Fancy baskets and bouquets for the sick have also been in demand.

CHRISTMAS DEMAND UNUSUALLY GOOD.

The Christmas season has proved very satisfactory to the growers in this city and the weather conditions, supply of flowers and the demand have been all that could be desired. Delivery on Saturday was a little difficult, it being below freezing and plants had to be wrapped carefully. There was an excellent supply of flowers—never better, and rarely ever as good. Azaleas, while only about one-third of the usual supply, were better than was expected and there were some beautiful ones on the market. The prices were high, however, and the sale was, in consequence, not as brisk as in former years. Roses were finer than ever before for the holidays and the price on them, as on everything else, had an upward tendency. They ranged in price all the way from $2 to $15. The lower price was for short stemmed cuts, and the higher price was for choice American Beauty. There were many poinsettias, both cut and in pots, and these were prime favorites with a majority of buyers. The red azaleas were most sought after and brought from $3 to $5 a plant. Pot stock of all kinds was abundant and very salable. Street vendors sold cedar wreaths and hemlock wreaths on the street and the price was only 25 cents—very pretty and full ones. The hemlock in a measure took the place of holly, which was very scarce, and the window wreaths were made of this and the cedar, while holly was reserved to tie upon the Christmas packages.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Company had a superb stock of all kinds of flowers and the store was one bower of beauty. A large graded stand had been arranged for the plants and this was filled with choice azaleas and cyclamens that completely covered it. All kinds of bulbous stock and pot plants were on sale—a most immense stock requiring the services of 62 sales people and six autos, with nine wagons, engaged in delivering and constantly busy for the several days of the Christmas rush. This firm did a big wholesale business, sending flowers all over the south. Their American Beauty were unusually fine, readily bringing $15 per dozen. Their cheapest roses were $2 per dozen and these were the short stems.

Geny Bros. claimed that they had the finest stock of azaleas in the city and indeed their stock was very superior. They readily got from $3 to $5 for the best. The red azaleas were particularly in demand, and the entire stock was sold. There was only about one-third as many as usual, however. They had very fine Russell roses and readily got from $5 to $7.50 per dozen. Their baskets sold well, the entire stock being pretty well cleaned up by Sunday night. They also had good success on the prepared evergreen wreaths and sold the entire stock.

The McIntyre Floral Company had a fine stock and splendid sales. They had an abundance of good roses, particularly Richmond, for which they asked and received $5 per dozen. Their lilies and poinsettias were fine and they had plenty of lily of the valley and a fine crop of orchids, which only a few dealers had on hand. Their baskets were very artistic and there was a good sale on all lines.

The florists were busy all day Sunday, and with all the other rush, had several funerals on hand. Some of the dealers had quite a fine lot of Bermuda lilies.

ADEQUATE SUPPLY AND EXCELLENT SALES.

This was the busiest Christmas the florists have ever experienced in this city. There is a little snow on the ground, the temperature is mild, times are good, and the people in general are possessed of the holiday spirit, so the florists are all busy, and very happy. Plant sales were very heavy and the favorite with the buyers seemed to be the old fashioned Jerusalem cherry; dealers say that it was impossible to get a supply of ardisias or there would have been a good sale of them also, as the red-berried plants always are in best demand at this season. Cyclamens and begonias sold well. Azaleas are very rare, there being but a very few in town. Made up wreaths, particularly those made from natural material and trimmed with red, were in good demand. Cut flowers appeared plentiful with prices about the same as in other years.

SUPPLY LIMITED AND PRICES HIGH.

With real Christmas weather there was considerable zest to the holiday shopping period this year. The flower stores had been beautifully decorated and early reports indicate a record-breaking business, greatly in excess of previous years. The supply of green was particularly heavy and wreaths were much in evidence. Good flowers were scarce. Carnations were quoted at from $1.50 to $2 per dozen and the rose growers who had the glass also came in for their full share of the money. Very few azaleas were seen and while there seemed to be a good supply of cyclamens the prices were high. The same could be said of poinsettias, small plants selling at from 50 to 75 cents each. There was a tendency toward high prices generally. Lily of the valley was practically off the market entirely.

NOTES.

The stock room of Wright's Flower Shop was a sight worth seeing. Here were seen some good azaleas and loads of made-up baskets. This firm seems to have the only offerings of lily of the valley and gardenias.

The Redondo Floral Co. was very busy and correspondingly happy. They report one of the best holiday seasons in their history. Albert Knopf, who has been on the sick list, is again on duty.

Wolfskill Bros. & Morris Goldenson were well prepared for their Christmas trade. They had a big supply of poinsettias, heather, cyclamens, roses, etc., all of excellent quality.

Seki Bros. & Co. were among the few dealers who had chrysanthemums to offer. They also had good carnations of their own growing. Counter trade was good.

For really artistic decorations, we doubt if there is anyone on the coast that can excel J. W. Wolters, and as usual his store this year was attractive as ever.

O. C. Saakes was as busy as Santa Claus. His salesroom was one of the show places of the city.

The Broadway Florists were well stocked for the Christmas trade and everything was attractively displayed.

CHRISTMAS SUPPLY CLEANS UP WELL.

The demand for cut flowers for Christmas was very good, following a week of good business in supplies and Christmas greens. The market was well supplied and orders were filled promptly, and in most cases, in full. Stock was uniformly good. A few growers still believe it is essential to hold stock back, and as usual they lose. Carnations cleaned up entirely, as did lily of the valley, orchids, poinsettias, snapdragons, buddleia, calla and Easter lilies, stevia, sweet peas, etc. Roses were in larger supply, and while the demand was good, there was a surplus in all grades and varieties. Paper White narcissus was also in heavy supply and the whole-salers' tables were full of them. Violets moved nicely and brought a trifle higher price than former years all around. Greens of all kinds were plentiful.

XMAS SALES AND PRICES SATISFACTORY.

Business was very good during the past week, as far as the wholesale trade was concerned. The shipping business was very heavy. Stock has been plentiful, and of very fine quality. The wholesalers had some trouble during the last days of the week with express companies, but otherwise the stock arrived in excellent condition. The weather was favorable; the first part of the week was cold and the thermometer showed a zero on Thursday, but the temperature rose to 36° on Saturday and the sunshine was bright. American Beauties of fine quality cleaned up well at $10 per dozen for the long stemmed. Russell roses were plentiful and brought very good prices, ranging from $15 to $50 per hundred. Killarney Brilliant and Ophelias sold well and brought good prices for the good quality. Red roses like Richmond, Hoosier Beauty and Milady were scarce and brought very high figures. Some of the best sold at $5.00 per dozen. The market was well supplied with carnations of very fine quality, the red being a little short. They found an easy market at $5 to $8 per hundred for light colors, and $10 for red, and they cleaned up well. Narcissi were plentiful and as "help-out" flowers they were sold quickly at $2 to $3 per hundred. Lily of the valley cleaned up at $6 per hundred and orchids found ready market at 75 cents and $1 each. The quality of orchids was very good. Some very fine Spencer sweet peas could be had at $1.50 and $2 per 100. Violets were very fine and cleaned up fairly well at $1 to $2 per hundred. Considerable wild smilax and boxwood are being offered and green goods in general seem to be in good supply. Plants were scarce. Only a few good azaleas and poinsettias were to be had from local growers and quite a few shipments reached this city frozen. The retailers seeing those conditions arranged more hampers and baskets than ever.

December 26.—Stock arrived on the market in good condition and there is plenty of good stock available.

C. A. Kuehn's shipments now include a good supply of orchids and lily of the valley, which are in good demand at the store. When the stock from J. F. Ammann & Co., of Edwardsville, starts to come in right, he will have something unusually fine in all lines to offer to his customers.

H. G. Berning has had an unusually busy month and Otto Bruenig was his real right hand man. He handled big quantities of Russell, Killarney, Ophelia and American Beauty. The carnations which A. Jablonsky shipped to his market were excellent.

The holiday business in neighboring cities, like St. Charles, Kirkwood, Webster Groves, East St. Louis, Belleville and Alton, was very good. The retailers worked hard to get the deliveries out on time.

Frank Windler & Co. are now offering fine violets and Spencer sweet peas. Al Gumz says that city trade is very good and the holiday business was excellent.

Pilcher's roses at the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. found ready market for the holiday trade. His Russell were very good and brought good prices.

Mrs. R. Schoenle, Windler's and Bergstermann's did fine business, especially in plants. Their stores are located in good south end neighborhoods.

The shipments of supplies at George Angermueller's were good. Fred is still on the sick list, but doctors promised that he will be soon on the job.

All retailers did a splendid business. The downtown stores were open all Sunday and Monday until late in the evening.

The Nicotine Mfg. Co. is distributing an interesting puzzle to its customers.

COLD WEATHER HURTS CHRISTMAS TRADE.

Unusually cold weather for the first three days of Christmas week spoiled business for those days—and it is doubtful if the receipts of the following days before Christmas were heavy enough to overcome the handicap, although the total for Saturday will probably make a record for an ante-Christmas day. The demand for Christmas plants and made-up plant baskets was good. Cyclamens, poinsettias and Cincinnati begonias were about equally in demand. Christmas peppers and cherries sold about as usual. No azaleas to speak of were seen on this market. Cut flowers were sold up early, carnations being especially scarce. Much cut flower stock was purchased in Chicago and other wholesale markets, with the usual complaint that some of the carnations did not enjoy the trip and went to sleep. Holly, mistletoe and other greens were in moderate demand, with quality indifferent. Green wreathing was in very small demand, mainly owing to increased price in recent years.

NOTES.

The azaleas for W. H. Culp & Co., were among those caught in the "November freeze" in transit between New York and Chicago, and for the first time in 15 years they were without their own azaleas for Christmas.

F. Kuechenmeister recently received a consignment of Holland shrubbery and plants which was badly damaged by frost. Charles P. Mueller suffered a similar loss with his azaleas.

The zero weather for the first half of the week caused much inconvenience and damage to plant shippers.

Chas. P. Mueller put another delivery car in commission in time for the rush. It's a Ford.

Frank Cluff sold clean of all suitable stock at his greenhouses.

C. A. Rose reports good business in all lines for Christmas. C.

CHRISTMAS MARKET NEVER BETTER.

Reports indicate the biggest Christmas ever. The market was never in better shape, and neither the supply of plants or cut flowers was in excess of the demand. All the retail stores were prepared and were kept very busy disposing of wreaths, plants, cut flowers, baskets, etc., the advance orders being in excess of those last year. Roses were in very good shape, but not quite as firm in price as anticipated. American Beauty was on hand in good numbers and moved well. Carnations were not in any great supply and are therefore sold freely. Fancy varieties, especially reds, brought $10 and $12 per 100; other varieties $6 to $8 per 100. Violets were in short supply and moved well at from $1 to $2 per 100, the latter price for good quality stock. The demand for sweet peas was good, there not being enough to meet requirements. Orchids are selling well and at good prices. Lilies moved well, the supply not being adequate to meet the steady demand. Gardenias were plentiful, with only a moderate call. Good stock of lily of the valley sold well, but hardly any call for poor quality. A few daisies are coming in, both the yellow and white varieties, but the supply not being enough for the daily call. Stevia is now very plentiful, but good mignonette is scarce, though there is quite a supply of the poorer grades. Poinsettias were in good supply, as well as bouvardia. There were also enough Paper Whites, though antirrhinum was in short supply. There was a scarcity of flowering plants for the Christmas trade, which has not been known for some time, and anything at all in the plant line sold readily. F. C.

Newport, R. I.

TRADE SHOWS BIG INCREASE OVER 1915.

The Christmas trade in this city showed an increase of from 10 to 40 per cent over previous years with cut flowers and plants high in price, the demand for the latter especially brisk. Carnations sold at prices varying from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen, roses at from $2 to $10 per dozen. American Beauties, Killarney and Ophelia were most in demand. Violets cleaned up early and the quality was good. Holly and boxwood wreaths sold well. Poinsettias, cyclamens and azaleas were the favorites in the plant class. A few primroses and watonias were to be seen. Boston ferns also had a good run.

Thomas J. Gibson had the decoration of the F. D. Berrien affair, using hundreds of poinsettias and American Beauty roses in the arrangement.

J. J. B.

COLUMBUS, O.—John R. Hellenthal reports a much better Christmas trade than during the corresponding period of 1915. Stock in general was of good quality and prices were about the same as a year ago with the exception of carnations and roses which were sold at an advance. Flowering plants were in great demand, especially extra large poinsettias. Violets were short of the demand.

CHRISTMAS SALES EXCEED THOSE OF 1915.

Christmas business was good. All the leading retail stores report better business than last year, particularly in plants. If there was a drawback, it was that there was not enough of some varieties and sizes of plants. One leading retailer stated that all but one of his plantmen cut his orders. While there are many people in this city who will pay a high price, if they can get what they want, the retailers in all sections of the city were unanimous in saying that the wholesale prices on cut flowers were too high. This was more noticeable in red carnations, which were started by some dealers at the rate of $15.00 per 100. It has been pointed out that carnations are no longer a novelty; that the customers of the leading retail stores buy but few of them, roses and violets being preferred at a holiday, and that the customers of the smaller stores cannot afford to buy them at $2.50 or $3 per dozen. The practice of some growers in holding back stock for 10 days or two weeks before Christmas has been so frequently condemned in these columns that it is unnecessary to enlarge on it, except to state that it happened again this Christmas, and as a consequence, carnations dropped on December 23; red to $8 and $10, Enchantress and the whites to $5 and $6, and there was no recovery. Roses sold well and at good prices and would have sold better, so far as cleaning up is concerned, had prices not been so high. The shorter grades of nearly all roses cleaned up well, but long stemmed specials, which were held at from $35 to $50 per 100 hung fire. Special American Beauties sold well on the two days preceding Christmas at $1 each, wholesale rates. It may be a surprise to many to learn that there were some Hadleys on the market that brought $1.25 each. Richmond was slow. All such roses as Scott Key, Mock, and Russell were started at high figures, meaning specials; but toward the close of buying they, too, went cheaper, particularly Russell, that started at 50 cents and dropped to 25 and 30 cents. Special Killarneys and Ophelias ranged from 15 to 25 cents. The Prima Donna is not popular in this market. The demand for orchids did not seem to be heavy, the bulk of the stock going at from 50 to 75 cents each. Violets started at $1.50 per 100 for the best, but wholesalers complained that many arrived in poor condition from having been held too long, and had to be sold much cheaper. There was a fair movement in the best gardenias at $4 per dozen, but inferior stock went much cheaper. There was a fair movement in lilies, lily of the valley, poinsettias and sweet peas, but nothing extraordinary. What Golden Spur narcissus was on the market sold at $1.25 and $1.50 per dozen. The weather throughout was fair; a heavy rain had melted the snow from the streets and there was no trouble with deliveries. The wholesalers generally were open all the night of December 23 and all the day and night of the 24th. While there was considerable business in cut flowers in the retail stores on Christmas forenoon, the wholesale district was very quiet and a quiet week may be expected. We will repeat, that taking a broad view, it was a good Christmas. In the foregoing we have stated the conditions, as there never was a Christmas and never will be, until the millennium, when everybody was entirely pleased.

NOTES.

In a decision rendered in the supreme court in Brooklyn, December 23, Judge Cropsey upheld the rights of Civil War veterans in the employ of the city. At the beginning of 1916,

William E. Weeks, a veteran, was assistant superintendent of parks under Commissioner Ward, at a salary of $2,500 a year. At that time he was told no appropriation had been made in the 1916 budget for the position and that further employment in the department was not open to him. Through his counsel, Alfred J. Talley, he appeared before Justice Cropsey and asked for a writ of mandamus. Justice Cropsey issued the writ, which calls for Weeks' reinstatement at once, either as foreman mechanic at $1,800, or district park foreman at $1,500 a year. In rendering the decision, Justice Cropsey said, in part: "The courts should see that the laws relating to veterans do in fact work out the benefits for them that are plainly intended and should be keen to thwart all attempts to circumvent them." The justice held "that the abolition of the office which Weeks had held could not have been brought about in the interest of economy."

We offer no apology for quoting from the newspapers when they touch on our line of business. The following under the caption, "A Joy Robber," is from the Evening Telegram of December 22: "There's no sentiment in business. Christmas trees fetching from $1.50 to $2.50 at wholesale are held at $5 to $15 retail. They say (1) it's the war and (2) it's pine blister. Both allegations are outrageously false. As shown by the Evening Telegram on December 11, when the first hint of tree scarcity was cunningly circulated, the supply is greater than ever this year, owing to the embargo against cutting them imposed three years ago by the federal government having been raised. Commissioner of Weights and Measures Hartigan has found the "Christmas Tree King," but can't reach him, because conspiracy to raise prices cannot be proven." In justice to the florists who sell Christmas trees, it should be stated that the larger part of the trees are handled by the market men and grocers, and that the florists keep them more as an accommodation to their customers than to sell them at a profit.

The following well-known retailers have advised us that their Christmas business was an improvement on that of 1915: David Clarke's Sons, Alexander McConnell, G. E. M. Stumpp, Malandre Bros., T. F. Galvin, Inc., Ralph Armstrong, Alfred Kottmiller, A. Ehmann, Astoria Florist, Cathedral Florist, Boulevard Florist and N. Christatos.

Alfred H. Langjahr, who, for the past five years, has been located, as a wholesaler, at 130 West 28th street, will vacate February 1, but has not yet decided on his future location. In this connection it may be stated that high rentals are causing considerable dissatisfaction in the wholesale district.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held in the Grand Opera House building, 8th avenue and 23rd street, on the night of January 8, 1917. The officers-elect will be installed and other business of interest and importance will be transacted. A large attendance is assured.

The Largest Shipper and Receiver of Cut Flowers

A complete assortment of the best in the market can always be relied upon.

Wm. M. Hendberg, the popular retailer of 415 Washington street, Hoboken, fell on the slippery sidewalk, December 16, and broke his left arm at the elbow; but being a man of nerve, he is keeping about and visits the wholesale district as usual.

Several of J. H. Small & Sons' decorators returned from Boston December 21, where they arranged an elaborate ball room and table decoration in the Hotel Somerset, for one of the most brilliant coming-out events of the season.

We believe that the largest supply of roses for Christmas, received by any one wholesaler, reached Horace E. Froment from the range of L. B. Coddington, Murray Hill, N. J. Hession, Madison avenue and 76th street, had a fine Christmas business and was practically sold out of plants by Christmas morning.

A very good-looking shade of Light Green, slightly lighter weight quality than the Palm Green, but a very good box for local deliveries and a bargain at the prices offered.

The ideal packer for Shipping. You will find these a great help in having flowers arrive in fine condition. Waterproof inside and out.

A. A. ARNOLD PAPER BOX CO.
1302 W. Division St., CHICAGO, ILL.

A great Christmas attraction in Madison square was the tall Christmas tree brilliantly illuminated with many colored electric globes. It was a beautiful specimen of spruce over 50 feet high, and came from Long Island.

Thomas J. Martin, formerly with Traendly & Schenck, who has spent some time at Otisville, Orange county, for the benefit of his health, came to this city December 22 to spend Christmas with his mother.

Traendly & Schenck, 436 Sixth avenue, as has been their custom for a number of years, served a turkey supper to their customers and other friends on Christmas eve.

Pappas Brothers, 2216 Broadway, put in a good stock of medium sized plants, and state that their business was twice as good as Christmas a year ago.

Goldstein & Futterman, 102 West 28th street, had fine stock of snapdragons, irises, freesias and Golden Spurs for Christmas, all of which sold well.

The Kervan Co., dealers in green at 119 West 28th street, had an enormous Christmas business, better we have reason to believe, than in any previous year.

Charles Lenker, the Freeport florist, recently held to the grand jury for insulting the American flag, is said to be dangerously ill of pneumonia.

The United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street, had very fine stock of the roses, Russell, Mock and Richmond for Christmas. A. F. F.

fifth annual convention, June, 1917.

CELERY is a long item this season.

SALVIA ZURICH seed is a short item again.

CALIFORNIA has a normal supply of planting stock of carrot roots.

WAKEMAN, O.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Clark, Jr., announce the birth of Arline Marie, December 7.

VALLEY, NEB.—The C. Herbert Coy Seed Co. mailed its customers a very attractive Christmas card this year.

CARL CROPP, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, has been chosen director of the new Western Springs state bank.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade, December 27, were as follows: Timothy, $4.00 to $5.75 per 100 pounds.

VISITED CHICAGO: J. B. Agnew, Visalia, Calif.; Henry W. Swanson, representing the J. G. Peppard Seed Co., Kansas City, Mo.

COLUMBUS, O.—The ninth annual Ohio state corn show will be held in this city during farmers' week, January 29-February 2.

IRONTON, O.—Miss Mattie Therkindson has opened a seed store in the Jones building. A plant department will be added later.

AMONG dwarf wax beans scarce and high priced varieties are Davis Wax, Round podded Kidney, Refugee Stringless and Wardwell's Kidney.

CONSIDERABLE cold storage lily of the valley has been received at New York from Amsterdam, developed to such an extent as to be useless to growers.

LACROSSE, WIS. — W. D. Weedy, manager of the John A. Salzer Seed Co., spent several days in Washington and Philadelphia the week before Christmas.

It is stated that the scarcity of spinach seed is due to the fact that while supplied from Holland and other European countries most of the seed heretofore obtained from these sources has been produced in Germany, but so far it is not known whether the shortage is due to non-production or embargo.

BALTIMORE, MD.—J. Bolgiano & Son announced their intention of sharing the profits with those employees, who have been associated with them for a number of years, as a recognition of their loyalty and industry. This plan was put into operation last week, when substantial checks were handed to those who were entitled to them for the year ending September 1, 1916, which year was one of the best in the 99 years of this firm's existence. At the same time it was decided to increase the salaries of those employees entitled to such increase through merit and devotion to duty.

Erfurt Notes.

There are at the front four of the firm of F. C. Heinemann, the same number of Ernst Benary and three of the sons of Franz Anton Haage. The son of Carl Schmitt of the firm of Haage & Schmitt has been invalided home.

The past summer Haage & Schmitt had planted 70 acres of their flower seed farm to potatoes and grain. G. Schroeter, Salzwedel, planted all of his farm to vegetables for seed and reports one of his most profitable seasons. F. C. Heinemann reports a very busy season in vegetable seeds.

Holland Conditions.

One of our Holland correspondents writes as follows under date of November 18:

"Please bear in mind that transportation difficulties on this side are very great. Some American friends seem to have no idea of it. We must get a license for the bags and this takes about a week, another license for bags imported by the notary occupies some days. Further we must have a certificate of origin, made out by the government controller, legalized by the customs officers and signed by the notary, all in different towns. This also takes about a week. After all these formalities it often happens that we miss a steamer and have to wait a fortnight for the next. Besides this the crop of flower seeds and also of other seeds has turned out very poor, so that in the case of many items reported as a fair crop we harvested very little seed, especially phlox, petunia and verbenas, etc., which are extremely bad."

Imported Seed Situation.

Only about one-half as much alfalfa seed was imported in 1915-16 as in either of the three previous years, and the imports of crimson-clover seed were less than half of those of the two previous years. Of hairy vetch seed less than 70,000 pounds were imported, as compared with 2,500,000 pounds in 1914 and 500,000 pounds in 1915. The imports of both winter rape and red-clover seed exceeded those of any previous year, enough red-clover seed being brought in to seed over 4,000,000 acres at a normal rate of seeding.

Owing to the unusual conditions in Europe the normal supply of winter rapeseed was unavailable and much other seed was imported under the name of rape. Seed purchased in the open market as winter rape showed that seed of seven other types of plants, all unsuitable for forage purposes, were being sold under this name. Tests of imported seeds have shown that large quantities of red and crimson clover seed brought into the United States germinated so poorly as to be of little or no agricultural value, and that much of the orchard grass seed contained but a small proportion of good seed, the balance being mostly chaff. The seed-importation act has now been amended, prohibiting the entry of such low-grade seed. Through the enforcement of the seed-importation act a large amount of low grade red clover seed offered for import into the United States has been reclaimed and the screenings destroyed under customs supervision.

The seed situation led to an increase in the number of samples of seed submitted during the fiscal year 1916 to the department for test in its Washington seed laboratory and co-operative branch laboratories.—Department of Agriculture Newsletter, December 6, 1916.

Free Seed.

Senator Lynn Haines, in the "Searchlight on Congress", makes the following remarks regarding free seed distribution:

In this one thing alone, during a four-year period, the time of a national administration, the public makes a campaign contribution of more than a million dollars. The average political congressman will protest loudly against this interpretation, but it remains the truth that free seeds are a form of pork, that the present method of congressional distribution serves little purpose commensurate with its cost save that of politics.

New York Seed Trade.

Peth & Duggan, 87 Barclay street, have now got their store in fine shape, having just had their flower seed section installed. Though not large, their store is very neat and well furnished, and the new oak counters and seed cases are handsome. They report the bulb season very satisfactory and look forward to good business for 1917.

Potato Prices at New York.

Prices of potatoes at New York, December 23, were as follows: Bermuda, No. 1, per bbl., $7.00 to $7.50; Bermuda No. 2, per bbl., $5.00 to $6.00; Long Island, 180 lbs., $5.00 to $5.50; Maine, 180 lbs., $4.80 to $5.10; Canadian, 180 lbs., $4.50 to $5.00; Nova Scotia, 165 lbs., $4.00 to $4.50; Virginia late crop, 165 lbs., to some extent frozen and of little value, $3.50 to $4.25.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—Mushrooms, home grown, 30 to 60 cents per pound; lettuce, small cases, 27½ to 30 cents; radishes, 60 to 75 cents, dozen bunches; celery, 75 cents to $1.00, open crate; tomatoes, 10-lb. baskets, $1.00 to $2.00; cucumbers, per 2 dozen box, $2.00 to $2.75.

New York, Dec. 26. — Celery, per crate, $2.00 to $3.50; cucumbers, 60 cents to $1.50 per dozen; mushrooms, $1.00 to $2.00 per 4-lb. basket; tomatoes, per lb., 10 to 25 cents; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $4.00; lettuce, per box, 75 cents to $2.00.

Spinach Mildew.

This fungus which causes indefinite yellow spots, usually of conspicuous size, showing prominent on the upper side of the leaf, while it more or less covers the under surface with a mat of the dirty-white or violet-gray fruiting stage, is reported by the Connecticut agricultural experiment station annual report for 1915 on spinach of the varieties Viroflay and Goliath near Wethersfield, Conn. The fungus was not abundant and was apparently due to the moist season. The indications are that it is not liable to be very troublesome so far north, but it has been found to be doing considerable damage further south.

Western Muskmelon.

Bulletin No. 401, on the marketing of western muskmelons in 1915, issued by the United States department of agriculture, obtained through the office of markets and rural organization, contains important data on this industry. Producing centers are Imperial Valley and Furlock, Calif., Salt River Valley, Ariz., Moapa, Nev., and Colorado. Crops are obtained by irrigation. Products are sold through commission dealers who supply seed and advance money under contract to the growers. Melons arriving in good condition command ready market at remunerative prices, but much of the stock of the late summer and fall is picked too green, has no flavor and is for these reasons unsalable. Imperial Valley in California produces the earliest and most profitable crops this season, extending from May 25 to July 21, nearly 5,000 cars being shipped during 1915.

Lettuce After Chrysanthemums.

We have seen more failures than successes where lettuce follows chrysanthemums on benches. It looks like a simple process to grow a catch crop of lettuce on chrysanthemum benches until the space is needed for spring stocks. However, results are too often disappointing if the old compost is used. There is no surer remedy than a total house cleaning and fresh soil, but this is often a hardship; hence, the old soil is used over again and trouble invited. Sometimes a lack of soil fertility is responsible for poor crops, but in most cases the trouble is caused by the decay of the immense system of feeding roots left behind from the chrysanthemums. This causes a soil acidity which is serious to the lettuce plants. We have seen many cases where the best of lettuce plants failed to make a single new root in a month, or even lost what roots they had when planted. As time is money under glass, such crops never pay. The direct remedy is air-slacked or hydrated lime, worked thoroughly into the soil before planting. We have recovered bad cases by applying lime between growing plants. Together with the lime treatment, such benches need careful watering for awhile until the lettuce are well under way. MARKETMAN.

Improving Potatoes.

The United States department of agriculture is conducting a number of potato investigations, chiefly at Presque Isle, Me.; Greeley, Colo.; Jerome, Idaho; and Norfolk, Va. One of the main features of the work is the development, from seed, of new varieties of potatoes specially suited for certain purposes and adapted to the special growing regions in which such products can most economically be produced.

Experiments leading to a determination of the factors necessary for the production of disease-free potatoes in western irrigated sections have shown that organisms capable of causing diseases of potatoes are probably present in all desert lands, but that land previously in cultivation with grains and alfalfa may, when disease-free seed is planted, produce a crop comparatively free from disease. In southern Idaho the experiments on the control of powdery dry rot in storage have been completed and show that the losses can be prevented by careful harvesting to avoid mechanical injuries and by keeping the storage cellar at a temperature between 35° and 40° F., with proper ventilation. When it is necessary to store in poorly ventilated or improperly cooled houses the disease may be effectively checked by disinfection with corrosive sublimate or formaldehyde, provided this is done within 24 hours after digging.

The cause of potato "leak," a rapid type of decay causing serious loss in the Delta district of California, has been discovered and experiments have shown that it can be controlled by careful harvesting and sorting before shipment.

Market Gardening Survey Columbus, O.

With the view of establishing a wholesale market under municipal control, a survey of the market gardening industry in the vicinity of Columbus, O., has just been completed. It shows that 118 gardeners, in and adjacent to that city, have a total of 1145.5 acres, or an average of 9.7 acres per operator. At an estimated value of $400 per acre, the land investment is $458,200, or an average of $3,800 per gardener in cultivated land alone. There are 17 vegetable greenhouse ranges, with a total floor space of 161,557 square feet. The 17 have an average of 9,868 square feet. About 32 varieties of vegetables are raised. Wholesale marketing has never been recognized officially by the city, although it flourishes to some extent. The investigators report that unless there are gluts, the growers get better prices on the wholesale market than by selling to consumers. A regular space is to be assigned the wholesale market adjacent to the principal retail market, and made subject to regulation and protection. Flowers are also expected to be a prominent feature of the new market.

NEWPORT, R. I.—The Newport Horticultural Society at its annual meeting, December 12, elected officers for the ensuing year as follows: John B. Urquhart, president; James Bond, first vice-president; Frederic Carter, second vice-president; Fred P. Webber, secretary; William Grey, treasurer.

Hollanders Opposed To Auctions.

Boskoop, November 9, 1916.

Editor American Florist Co.,
Chicago.

Dear Sir: It would afford us great pleasure if you would publish the following communication in the news columns of your paper. Trusting your views coincide with ours as to the importance of this agreement, we beg to thank you in advance for the space given.

(Signed) C. GROOTENDORST, Sec'y.

The Protective Association of Holland Nurserymen, in its meeting held at Boskoop, September 12, 1916, resolved to submit for the signatures of its members, a mutual agreement, in which they bind themselves not to ship any nursery stock to the United States and / or Canada to be sold at public auction. Any one found breaking this agreement to pay a fine of 500 guilders. In the meeting of October 6, 1916, the agreement was read and signed by all members present except one. The association resolved that members who will not sign this contract shall be expelled from the association. After being presented to all members the agreement shows the signatures of 37 exporters, five members being unwilling to sign. The contract reads, translated:

MUTUAL AGREEMENT.

1. The undersigned all being professional nurserymen and / or exporters of nursery stock, bind themselves mutually, not to ship any plants, of whatsoever nature, neither directly nor indirectly, to the United States of America and / or Canada, with the intention of having the same sold at public auction. They declare that they will have broken this agreement and will be considered having sent plants directly for sale at public auction when they should have any interest whatsoever, and / or should participate either directly or indirectly in the shipment of plants to the United States of America and / or Canada for sale at public auction.

2. They bind themselves, to have forfeited the sum of 500 guilders as a fine, whenever they should break this agreement and to pay this fine unto H. L. Maarschalk, Notary Public, at Boskoop, the said H. K. Maarschalk being hereby authorized to claim this fine in or out of court.

3. They authorize Messrs. P. M. Koster and C. Grootendorst, nurserymen, residing at Boskoop, or any other persons to be appointed by the parties to this contract, to publish the contents of this agreement translated into the English language, with the names of the persons who signed it or the names of the firms under which they do business, in the trade papers of the United States and Canada, in such manner as Messrs. Koster and Grootendorst aforementioned shall deem to be in the interest of those concerned.

4. The fine, after being collected by H. K. Maarschalk, following a breach of contract, shall be divided by this party as follows:

One hundred guilders to be paid to the person producing evidence of the breach of this agreement, whether this person is a party to this contract or not and 400 guilders to be divided equally among those who signed the agreement, with the exception of the one who did not live up to it.

5. This agreement is made for one year, and must be considered to remain valid for the same term, every year, unless any one who signed it, informs one of the parties mentioned in clause three per registered letter, not less than six weeks before the expiration of a term, of his intention to withdraw. Messrs. Koster and Grootendorst are then authorized to publish this withdrawal of signature according to their best judgment.

6. This agreement takes effect on the first day of October, 1916.

Declared as agreed upon and signed this sixth day of October, 1916, was signed:

Violets and Pansies.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please give me practical suggestions concerning the greenhouse cultivation of violets and pansies for market. I want information particularly upon the following points: 1. Best single varieties for commercial use. 2. Temperature. 3. Soil mixture. 4. How early should house be planted for winter bloom. 5. Diseases and remedies.

Pennsylvania. B.
1. Princess of Wales is the best of all single violets for commercial use. More of this variety are grown than all other varieties combined.

2. A temperature as near the mark of 40 degrees as possible is best suited for their culture. When grown in a higher temperature, the plants run mostly to leaves at the expense of quantity and quality of flowers. The ideal growing conditions for single violets are a cool, light, airy, house, with the benches so arranged that the soil will dry out evenly and readily between waterings. A damp, close atmosphere being one of the principal things to be guarded against.

3. Good single violets are grown in so many different kinds of soil mixture that it is a difficult matter to select one composition of soil as better than another. We find one grower having good success by using a heavy clay soil mixture and another equally successful when using the lighter black soil of the prairies. One part of well rotted cow manure to three parts of live clay loam makes a good compost to start the plants out in, then should the flowers begin to come smaller later in the season, extra nourishment can be added by applications of liquid manure or surface dressings of pulverized sheep manure.

4. Any time after September 1, according to weather conditions, is time to plant; it is sometimes necessary, when the weather is very dry, to wait for a rain before lifting the plants, and the planting season may be said to cover the period of September 1 to October 15. Some growers prefer to leave the plants out until they get a good freezing.

5. Leaf spot is the most troublesome disease to which single violets are subject, and is caused to a great extent by damp, close conditions in the house, the best remedy being to keep everything about the house clean and sweet. Maintain an even, cool temperature at all times, and when any leaves show the spot, remove and burn them immediately.

Pansies.—Pansy seed sown during August and transplanted in frames as soon as the plants are large enough to properly handle, will be, by October 15 to November 1, ready to plant inside for winter flowering. They do

GARLAND MANUFACTURING COMPANY
DES PLAINES, ILLINOIS.
LOUIS WITTBOLD, President.

Potash Factory to Be Built By Government.

A plant on a commercial scale will be built by the department of agriculture for the conduct of experimental work in the production of potash from kelp, an appropriation of $175,000 for the purpose having been made at the last session of congress. Two locations are under consideration, one near Santa Barbara, and the other near Long Beach, Calif. It is expected that a definite location for the department's factory will be selected shortly and that the work of constructing the plant will begin soon afterward.

The plans call for a plant capable of handling approximately 200 tons of wet kelp per day. Electric power probably will be used for all mechanical operations, while heat for drying and distillation will be furnished by crude petroleum. The equipment will consist of drying kilns, distilling chambers, vats, handling machinery, and the necessary buildings to house this apparatus.

From the 200 tons of kelp used daily about five tons of muriate of potash will be manufactured. The product will be sold and the proceeds turned into the United States treasury. The primary purpose of the plant will be to determine the most economical processes for producing potash from kelp and to work out methods for the recovery and utilization of by-products. Numerous methods will be employed experimentally in operating the factory with this end in view. For the most part, however, the department will depend on distillation processes.

The department has decided to locate its experimental factory in southern California because of the combination in this region of an adequate supply of kelp and admirable operating conditions. The kelp grows in vast groves in water about 60 feet deep along extensive sections of the Pacific coast. For use in the manufacture of potash it is gathered by ocean-going harvesters which cut the plants beneath the water. In some places the beds extend to the 3-mile limit, but in the neighborhoods now being considered by the department as locations for its factory the groves are much narrower. The plants grow rapidly, and it is believed that little difficulty will be experienced in obtaining an adequate supply of raw material.

BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.—James Murray has opened a very attractive flower shop in the Schofield building.

MANCHESTER, MASS.—The North Shore Horticultural Society has raised the sum of $20,000 for a new hall. Construction will commence soon.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Next Annual Convention New York, August 21-24, 1917.

The President's Message.

We are at the beginning of a new year, and again thinking of our friends. The splendid old year has gone, taking its many seasonable possibilities, but gives us in keeping a beautiful new year. The three hundred and sixty-five days of the year just passed were filled to overflowing with many opportunities to acquire happiness by spreading sunshine among our friends. We wish our friends success.

With the possibilities of this new year comes a ray of hope for peace between the warring nations, our friends, our brothers; a conception of which, when accomplished, will constitute once more joy, smiles, laughter and work, which leads to their success. The heart of every American florist goes out in sympathy to our fellow craftsmen who are located in the warring countries. Let us each and all wish for an early peace, in order that it may alleviate suffering humanity and restore prosperity and happiness among them. And may the widened circle of our S. A. F. in our own land give the new year distinction in our calendar, as that in which the blessings and good of the organization were made more manifest than ever before to the communities which have been fortunate to have had the S. A. F. in trust.

I wish each and all success, or, better still, may each one realize his own ideals in his own life, which, when accomplished, will constitute success. May the whole new year be one round of friendships, joyous days of labor and tasks well done.

President R. C. Kerr has sent a personal letter to each of the state vice-presidents, as follows:

My Dear Sir:

As president of the S. A. F., I congratulate you upon your acceptance of the office of state vice-president, and I believe your acceptance will warrant my earnest desire for full and hearty co-operation on all subjects of interest to our organization. Do not overlook the fact that you are the headquarters representative in your state, and I have full confidence in your ability to serve our society in an energetic and intelligent manner. Of course, it is only natural for you to have the interests of your local organization at heart, but I sincerely trust, and in fact know that you will make special efforts to make the society of which you are state vice-president one of the largest organizations in your territory. It is incumbent upon you to direct your attention to securing as many new members as possible, and of taking care of the various interests of the present members in a businesslike manner.

It is also your duty to get in touch with each and every member of our society in your state and obtain their co-operation, which I am quite positive will be given you. Have you considered that the next convention promises to be the largest gathering of our S. A. F. that has ever been held in America? Just instill into the members in your state the fact that great things are in store for them. It is natural for you to expect that this office will aid you in every possible way to make a success of your administration, which, of course, it is needless to say, we will most gladly do.

I know that we shall reap our reward at New York, and I would be unworthy of your consideration, should I think but that it was your co-operation and assistance which aided to make our administration a great success, which I am sure it will be. It is for the above reasons that I am writing you this personal letter. Always bear in mind that I will assist you whenever called upon, or on other occasions when necessary. Do not let this opportunity for service stray from your doorway.

R. C. KERR,
President of S. A. F.

THE CARNATION.

Propagating Carnations.

Preparations for the propagation of the carnation cuttings for next season's requirements should now be well in hand. If the arrangements have not been made to properly carry on this work, it is highly important that they be attended to without any further delay. Cuttings rooted between January 1 and February 15, and given careful attention while in the different stages of their growing season, develop into the most productive plants for winter flowering. The first, most essential thing to be considered is the preparation of the propagating house or bench.

The grower who makes the production of large quantities of rooted cuttings an important part of his business has a propagating house specially fitted up for turning out a big number of cuttings in the shortest possible time, but not so with the new beginner or the man who propagates a small surplus above his own requirements; usually the right kind of propagating space is a serious problem with them and generally a bench in one of the carnation houses or a part of a bench in a mixed propagating house has to be utilized, but whichever is the case the bench selected should be one that allows for a steady bottom heat to be used when needed. While steady firing is going on, the earlier batches of cuttings root readily, but later in the season more bottom heat is necessary to get a successful stand of cuttings. Good drainage is an important part of any propagating bed; a tight bottom bench that does not allow the water to pass freely over the bottom of the bench, then the sand is filled in to the top. A fresh lot of sand should be used for each lot of cuttings, sifting it through a screen to remove any rubbish or coarse material.

When ready to start propagating, prepare the sand in sections at a time, leaving the rest of the bed in a dry state until needed. First give the sand a good watering, then thoroughly pound it down until it is firm and level. Next make arrangements to insure a bottom heat to the sand of 56 degrees; this can be done by tacking sacks along the sides of the bench, letting them hang to the ground, thus closing in the space underneath the bench entirely so that the heat does not go out through the house.

One of the most important factors connected with the propagation of carnation cuttings is a cool, even overhead temperature; it takes a few days longer to root the cuttings cool, but when rooted in a high temperature the life is sapped out of them, causing them to be weak and easily susceptible to disease. At night-time and during cloudy or very cold weather, an overhead temperature of 50-54 degrees is most suitable for the successful rooting of the cuttings. The cuttings need fresh air without cold draughts blowing directly on to them. Ventilate sparingly during very severe weather, and when the conditions become more favorable to allow for more air to be given, caution must be exercised to guard against draughts.

It is a general thing during the month of January for the glass to be either covered with frost or snow most of the time, so that excepting for a short while during the middle of the day (on bright days) shading is not necessary, but the bed should be fitted through the sand, consequently holding it too wet most of the time, makes a poor bench to root carnation cuttings.

We are using a coarse limestone on the bottom of our propagating benches to serve as a drainage for the sand, and are so well pleased with it that we recommend it to those who can obtain the material. First, the inside of the bench is well washed out, then given a good coating of fresh lime-wash, and when thoroughly dry, a thin layer of the limestone is spread with overhead moveable cloth shades, which can be put on or taken off as becomes necessary. Every propagator has his own particular scheme for fitting up a shade over his propagating bed and works it out according to the material he has at his command, but we have given up the old style way of laying newspapers on the cuttings for shade, and the method most generally used is to obtain some sheet muslin, fastening wire rings along each side, hooking the rings on wires running lengthwise of the bed. The shading can then be slid along to the end of the bench when not in use. The wires are placed about two feet above the cuttings and side curtains used from the wires to the top of the bed, making a complete canopy over the cuttings, acting as a means of shade and protection from draughts at the same time.

After all the work necessary to fitting up the propagating bed is finished we can turn our attention to the work of making the cuttings, a very important part of which is their selection. Do not take cuttings from plants that are at all undergrade or the benches next season will contain a large number of plants that are away behind the others in growth and the production of blooms. Experienced growers know what a surprising difference there is in the production of the plants grown from selected cuttings and those taken haphazardly throughout the bench. Some plants will show a more grassy growth than others and some will throw flowers not up to the highest grade in color or form. Plants of this character should be passed over for cuttings.

The best cuttings are obtained from the shoots at the base of the flower stems; usually three or four good cuttings can be taken from each flower stem, but select only those that are strong and even in size. The small cuttings from away up the stem, while they root easily enough, do not make as good plants. Care should be taken not to allow the cuttings to wilt between the time they are taken from the plants and put into the sand.

Trim up the cuttings by cutting off the hard end at the base and the tips of the leaves and remove enough of the lower leaves to make a clear stem long enough to insert in the sand. After the cuttings are trimmed drop them in a pail of water until ready for inserting in the sand. Use a straight edge for running the rows of cuttings in the sand, placing the rows about one and one-half inches apart, firming each row down with the forefingers. After the cuttings are placed in the sand, give a good watering in to well settle the sand, after which very little water is necessary, unless the sand shows signs of drying out too much. A light spraying overhead every day or two will keep the cuttings firm and crisp, but do not carry it to the extreme and cause the sand to become too wet.

Carnation Thenanthos.

At Anton Then's greenhouses, in the suburbs of Chicago, is found the home of Thenanthos, the new giant red carnation. In every respect this seems to be the ideal red. It has every reason to be proud of its ancestry; crossings with Scott, Nelson, and Lawson. had finally produced a strong growing red of great promise, which, with Enchantress blood, brought forth this wonderful flower.

As seen in the house given to it here, it should almost win the coveted 100 points. It has color, form, size and fragrance, and a splendid stem. In productiveness it averaged 30 blooms to a plant last year. The habit of the plant is a bushy, strong and vigorous growth; as many as five stout shoots to one stem are seen in a number of the plants. Many flowering shoots, with buds about to open, now measure 36 inches above the soil. Not a dead leaf is to be seen anywhere; even the smallest leaves of the summer's growth at the soil line are as fresh and green as any on the plant. The cuttings of this stock were rooted early in January, grown on in pots and planted in beds June 23. Last spring they cut flowers with stems four feet four inches in length. The propagating house now contains over 50,000 strong, rooted cuttings, about to be potted off. There can be no question about the vigor of this variety. The A. L. Randall Co. is the exclusive distributor of this variety and has already sold a large number of cuttings to nearly all the leading carnation growers throughout the country.

In addition to the carnations, there is fine stock of well grown cyclamens, poinsettias, primulas and other Christmas plants, of which Mr. Then makes a specialty. Twelve thousand cyclamens in four to six-inch pots, looked to be just right for the holidays. Mr. Then is fortunate in the assistance of his two sons, John and Anthony, who are enthusiastic hustlers, well versed in all the details of the business.

Notes of Various Industries.

It has been learned that one of the worst storms in the history of Yucatan swept that coast about the middle of November. Millions of dollars in damage to the sisal crop and warehouses and shipping were done by the storm.

The secretary of agriculture announces that the experts of his department have developed a superior variety of cotton, which is called Pima cotton.

The best of a cargo of Almeria grapes sold in New York December 14-15 brought $10 per barrel.

The Merchants' Association of New York has appealed to the department of commerce, the state department and the post office department for the establishment of the parcel post between the United States and Russia.

PLANT NOTES.

Poinsettias.

This is a Christmas plant pure and simple. It is to the midwinter holidays what the lily is to Easter and the sale of plants or flowers after the new year is very small and hardly remunerative. The plants that are left should at once be treated for stock plants. It is the custom of some growers to immediately place the pots under a bench and water them no longer. It is much better, however, to block them up closely in a warm house and gradually dry them off until the wood ripens and then store them away where they will be kept dry. When the plants are treated by the former method the green wood often dies down more than half the length, but by a slower ripening off many more and much better cuttings can be obtained. They can be laid down on their sides under a carnation bench where they will not receive any water, or if the pots are needed they can be heeled-in in such a location, and here they can remain until April, when they should be started for propagation, using either the old growth or starting the plants into growth and making the cuttings from the young shoots as they break from the old wood. With these it is better to make the cuttings with a heel and in a warm location they root quite easily.

Cleaning Up After Christmas.

The Christmas sales will give the plantsman an opportunity to give the houses a thorough overhauling and begin preparations for the Easter stock, and also more room for the plants that are to produce flowers during the winter. The probabilities are that the best plants have been disposed of, and the demand for the balance will slacken up considerably for the next two or three weeks. Any plants that will not be salable in the middle of the next month, especially if they are not of the best quality, had better be thrown away, and not allowed to remain taking up valuable space for a month or more, only to be discarded later. The stock plants should all be selected and preparations for next season's propagation begun. The old favorite Begonia incarnata is still grown by many. The old plants never make good stock for another year, so select enough to produce all the stock wanted, and discard the balance. It will be busy times where many plants are grown, but the quicker and earlier the work is done the better will be the resultant crops. The bulb stock is now ready to be brought in and all the room should be immediately filled up with stock that can be grown into plants that will find ready sale. It sometimes takes courage to throw away plants that look as if they would bring in something, but it is far better to do this, even if a plant is thrown out that might be sold, than to carry along a lot of stock that never turns in a cent to the money drawer.

Vinca Rosea.

A plant that is often lost sight of by many for summer bedding is Vinca rosea, and it makes a most beautiful plant, being covered with flowers all through the summer until frost. The great cause of there not being much stock of these is that the seed is not sown early enough. December or early January is the time to plant the seeds of these plants to have them in fine shape for bedding out in June. Plants started early and grown in a warm house will be in flower at the time of planting and continue a mass of bloom throughout the season. The seed should be sown in flats which should be placed in a house having a temperature 65° to 70°. When the second leaf forms they should be pricked out into other flats about an inch apart and when they have five or six leaves potted in 2-inch pots, later being shifted into the 3-inch size. The soil should be of a sandy nature both in the potting and in the bed, if possible, but they will grow well outside in a heavy loam. They can be had in white, rose pink and pink with white eye, and come very true to color from seed.

Tulips and Narcissi.

The Dutch bulbs are now in condition to bring into the houses, for they should be well rooted, and will force readily, and from the first of the year on the grower should regulate the culture of these so that there will be a continuous supply. The best way to accomplish this is to have one day in the week which is bulb day, that is, on this day the succeeding lots will be brought from where they are stored and placed in the greenhouses. The demand will, of course, fluctuate to some extent, but by looking back two or three years it will be found that the call for this stock is about in the same proportion every year, and a basis on which to figure about how many pots or boxes should be brought up can be obtained. If it is found that the stock is accumulating at any time, those that are not quite in bloom can be removed to a cooler house and retarded, and those that are almost in bloom, if moved into a shed where it is dark and quite cool, will last in splendid condition for a week or 10 days longer. For the present it will be necessary to put the pans and pots in a shaded position in order to get the proper length of stem. Those forced early if allowed to stand in a warm house in full sunlight, will open their flowers before they have attained good height, so it is well to place them under a bench or provide a place where they can be kept rather dark for a week. In cutting the flowers endeavor to cut them from the pans or boxes that have been in the houses the longest. A thoughtless man will cut into a box that is just opening and which would be good for a week or more, when there are plenty that could be cut that will not last nearly so long. There is always a great waste in growing bulbs and everything that is possible should be done to prevent it. On bulb day when the fresh lot is put on the bench those that were brought up three or four weeks before and are in full flower will be ready to be thrown out. Any flowers that may be on these boxes, if they are well in bloom, should be cut and placed in water. They will last much longer if cut and kept cool than they will if left on the bulbs in the greenhouses.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—The Rau Floral Co. is increasing its glass area to 14,000 square feet.

MEDFORD, MASS.—Olivia F. Zinn has filed a petition in bankruptcy; liabilities, $5,307; assets, $150.

PASADENA, CALIF.—Elaborate floats marked the twenty-eighth annual tournament of roses parade here January 2. A special feature was the hotel division, in which 14 hotels from the Atlantic coast to Manila were represented. The prize in this division, a silver cup offered by the Palace hotel, San Francisco, was won by the Hotel Blackstone, Chicago.

CHRISTMAS TRADE.

As announced in our issue of December 30, the indications of a greatly increased Christmas trade over sales during the corresponding period of a year ago, are assured by reports from every part of the country, recording in many instances the best holiday business in history and showing sales increases over the wonderful record of 1915 of from 10 to 40 per cent in money value, while a general average of 25 per cent would probably not be overestimated. In a few words, it was, with very few exceptions, a cleanup in all lines at very satisfactory prices, the demand for both cut flowers and plants being much heavier than in former years.

The shortage in azaleas seemed to be little noticed, cyclamens proving a ready substitute, with poinsettias coming in for their accustomed share of popularity. The demand for all plants of the flowering varieties was unusually good. In the cut flower section roses, carnations and violets led the demand in the order named, with a good call for corsages. Made up baskets found ready buyers. The following reports, among a number received, prove that the florist is fast becoming a strong factor as a purveyor of Christmas gifts.

FREMONT, NEB.—Green's Greenhouses had a plentiful supply of stock in all lines of excellent quality, and while prices were about the same as last year, the 1916 Christmas sales showed an increase of 20 per cent in volume. The supply of bulbous flowers was ample, but the demand was poor, and they had to be pushed to make sales. Otherwise the quality of stock in general was better than a year ago. There was no marked increase in the demand for any special flower. A small gain was noted in plant sales as compared with last year, good cyclamens in 7-inch pots proving the best sellers. Two delivery autos made possible the delivery of all orders in daylight which heretofore had been a burden with five horse-drawn outfits.

RALEIGH, N. C.—J. L. O'Quinn & Co. report a better Christmas trade than in 1915, with higher prices and stock of better quality. There was a shortage of violets and the supply of bulbous flowers was not equal to the demand. In cut blooms there was an especially active demand for orchids, lily of the valley and violets, while in the plant section anything of good quality sold at sight. Immortelle wreaths, ruscus, holly, etc., were also ready sellers. The weather was ideal, but poor express service occasioned complaint on deliveries.

BANGOR, ME.—Adam Sekenger reports Christmas business 20 per cent greater than in 1915, prices being 10 per cent higher than last season. Roses and violets were plentiful, but the carnation supply was scant. Snapdragons sold well and there was an exceptionally good demand for roses. Cyclamens, begonias and primulas in large sizes sold readily and the supply of good azaleas was not sufficient to fill orders. Decorative plants were not as popular as in former years.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Higher prices, a 10 per cent increase in the volume of sales, and a shortage in cut flowers, is the report of Abele Bros. on the 1916 Christmas trade. There was no special demand in any particular line and the quality was better than in previous years. Bulbous stock sold readily. While there was an increased demand for flowering plants, lower priced ones had the call.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—H. P. Potter, although handicapped by having but half enough stock to meet his requirements, with the exception of bulbous flowers, reports an increase in sales of 40 per cent over the 1915 Christmas period. The quality of the stock was about the same as a year ago, but prices averaged 10 per cent higher, with carnations the leader in popularity in the cut flower class. Flowering plants sold well; in fact, anything that showed even fair quality found a ready buyer. Double the amount of cut flowers could have been disposed of without effort, but express shipments were not to be depended upon.

DALLAS, TEX.—The Lang Floral & Nursery Co. reports the largest Christmas business in its history, sales showing an increase of 50 per cent over those of 1915. Stock in all lines was of very good quality and the supply was ample with the exception of carnations and roses of the red varieties. American Beauty roses were very popular and found quick sale at prices ranging from $15 to $24 per dozen. Plant baskets were much in demand and good azaleas were fast sellers. There was such a brisk call for stock of all kinds that it would be hard to say what was most in favor.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.—Washburn & Sons report an increase of about 10 per cent over the Christmas trade of a year ago, prices being slightly higher. The supply of cut flowers was plentiful and the quality as a whole averaged better than last year. Paper Whites were the only bulbous flowers handled and moved well as the price was the same as in former years. Plant sales were larger than usual, but there was no increase in the call for any special variety.

Buffalo, N. Y.

CHRISTMAS SALES BEST IN YEARS.

Christmas trade in this city was better than ever before, with an increase of about 20 per cent over the sales of last year's holiday season. American Beauty led in the top-notchers, selling as high as $24 per dozen, although most of them sold went at $18. Shawyer, Ophelia and Hadley sold at $9 and selects in other varieties brought $5, $6 and $7.50 per dozen. Ward, Killarney and Sunburst were quoted at $2 upward, according to stem and flower. Carnations were not in heavy supply and sold at from $2 to $3. Jonquils, good flowers, went at $2 and sold well. Paper White and yellow narcissi were $1 per dozen and stevias were offered at 75 cents. Violets were to be had at $2 per bunch of 50 and had a moderate sale, but were not as popular as last year. The weather on Saturday was cold and wintry; every one seemed imbued with the Christmas spirit and very little complaint was made at the prices asked. The first part of the week was given over to ruscus and other dried arrangements, also holly and greens.

NOTES.

W. J. Palmer had a fine display of cut stock, nearly all of their own growing, the number of plants handled being fewer than in former years. The same may be said of W. C. Stroh's flower shop and the Lenox Flower Shop, both of whom handled cut blooms extensively. S. A. Anderson, the Wm. Scott Co. and L. H. Neubeck had large quantities of plants. Anderson's basket arrangements were also very fine and were handsomely trimmed with ribbons or chiffons.

S. A. Anderson had a splendid window arrangement with the usual good taste that characterizes this establishment. Quality seemed to be the motto. His decorations for the fiftieth anniversary of the Buffalo Club were also very handsome.

M. A. Vinson, of Cleveland, O., with advance information regarding the coming chrysanthemum exhibition to be held in that city, was a recent visitor. Although the meeting is not scheduled until next fall Cleveland is getting an early start.

CHRISTMAS TRADE A HUMMER.

While the Christmas trade just passed was a hummer with most of the retailers, it caused more worry and work than for a good many seasons past. In the first place, the cry that pot plants were scarce was rather misleading, for just because azaleas happened to be scarce, was no good reason for such alarm; there were just as many of the older standbys to help out. Due to the cold weather, the rose crops did not quite come up to expectations, while the carnation supply was about 10 per cent ahead of last year. The colored roses, especially the short and medium grades, were quickly disposed of, with the fancy grades a close second. In the carnation line, the whites were most abundant and least wanted, and on the whole they did not enjoy the popularity, judging by the returns, which they did a year ago. A good many more violets and sweet peas could have been sold had the supply been heavier. All in all we would say that the demand for pot plants was ahead of last year and had the preference over cut flowers. A good many complaints of stock being totally or partially frozen, going or coming, are being heard from and no doubt the express companies, who had more business than they could properly take care of, will be kept busy trying to get the matters straightened out for some time to come. Strange to say that New Year's business consisted mainly in corsage work, which called for violets, sweet peas, orchids, etc., all of which were on the short side.

NOTES.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. found ready sale for the azaleas for New Year, which were not ready by Christmas. They are receiving numerous orders for their new chrysanthemum, Mrs. C. C. Pollworth, which they are disseminating this season. It is a sport from Chrysolora, which originated on their place four years ago, and being an incurve, like Bonnafon, has at least that advantage over the older variety. It captured a bronze medal in Chicago the first time it ever was staged.

We regret to report that Fred Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., has been confined to the house since December 19 with rheumatism, which is causing him endless pain both day and night. Herm. Hunkel, of the same firm, who had his Hudson car stolen from the store November 21, received word from Chicago that both car and the thief had been located last week.

Gust Rusch & Co. report a fine holiday trade. They did not receive the expected cut of American Beauties from the Cudahy Floral Co., due to the unfavorable weather. A shipment of cut boxwood, due for the holiday trade, arrived on Christmas day and proved to be a total loss, having been badly frozen.

J. M. Fox & Son, Inc., report the best holiday business ever, especially in the plant line; with them it was work three days and nights in order to get all orders out satisfactorily.

Walter M. Maas says "it was the best ever." It must have been strenuous for he was all in at 11 p. m. Saturday, December 24, and had to let the others do the rest.

New York Notes.

The New York Tribune is one of the great newspapers that is to be commended for dropping the outlandish and silly "Sunday supplements," which are of no value to old or young. The "Tribune Graphic" for December 31 contained a page of beautiful reproductions of roses and chrysanthemums which have been seen at recent shows. In roses, C. H. Totty's new yellow rose, Lillian Moore, is featured. It will be recalled that this rose won the $1,000 trophy at the Panama-Pacific exposition. It has previously been described in these columns. Another rose featured is Mme. Colette Martinet, and we understand it will be disseminated this year by A. N. Pierson, Inc., who grew the stock from which the photograph used in the illustration was taken. It is described as golden yellow, changing to old gold, shaded with orange yellow in the open flower. The chrysanthemum, Louisa Pockett, by Totty, a rival of William Turner, is shown to advantage. Another of Totty's productions is the chrysanthemum Nag-ir-Roc, a bright bronze-yellow, the flowers being large. The single chrysanthemums, Katewood and Barbara Davis, both by A. N. Pierson, Inc., are also fine reproductions.

The case of Charles Lenker, the Freeport florist, charged with using offensive language toward the President and the American flag, came up, December 12, but was postponed until January, 1917. In the meantime, we understand that a grand jury will investigate the charges.

Peter Fallon, 208 Main street, Astoria, has a nice retail store and a good business. In Mrs. Fallon he has an able and active helpmate in the business.

Z. S. Pappageles, of the Cathedral Florists, Broadway and Cathedral parkway, advises us that they were completely cleaned out of Christmas plants.

I. H. Eisenberg, 916 Sixth avenue, had a large amount of funeral work; making up a pall of cattleyas and white roses and number of fine designs.

The Flower Garden Shop, of which Brown & Beck, 95 Halsey street, are proprietors, is showing good features and reports good business.

The Flower Basket Shop, 147 West 44th street, is now finely located in their remodeled store and is doing a fine business.

Walter T. Lee, a well-known designer and decorator, is now with the Circle Florist, 8-9 Columbus Circle, at 59th street.

Myer, Madison avenue and 58th street, was very busy on New Year's and New Year's Eve, with table decorations.

Herman Weiss, 106 West 28th street, had a fine stock of Hadley roses for Christmas, which sold well.

The Claridge Flower Shop is a new retail venture at 157 West 44th street. It is conducted by Sam Berkowitz, Jr.

The Boulevard Floral Co., 2391 Broadway, had a fine holiday business, both in plants and cut flowers.

N. Scoffes has a fine store at 501 Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, and is well prepared for Christmas business.

Frank G. Seymour, 17 McDougal street, Brooklyn, was well pleased with the holiday business.

Jack Trepel is well pleased with the business at his new store, 480 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

G. E. M. Stumpp stated that his New Year's business was better than last year.

Alfred Kottmiller had a number of good table decorations for New Year's.

HOLIDAY SALES SHOW BIG GAINS.

"The best Christmas ever" is the report from all. Almost every florist reports that business was larger this year by 25 to 50 per cent over any preceding year. All dealers cleaned up well, which indicates everyone made good profit. Holly sold well, but the quality was not up to the usual high standard. Boxwood and magnolia wreaths were all cleaned up. Boxwood became quite scarce at the last minute, caused by shipments being delayed by the express companies. Poinsettias and ruscus had quite a call. The supply houses were sold out early of most all decorative material. The cut flower business was very good for the entire week. Poinsettias, primulas, crotons, heathers, cyclamens, begonias and other beautiful plants, each arranged in the most artistic manner, had a tendency to attract the flower buyer. All other cut flowers sold well and at good prices. Many flowers were delayed in transit, and of course, were either left on hand or had to be sold below market prices. Violets and American Beauties seemed to have suffered the most. Many shipments were from 24 to 36 hours late, and then were refused on account of the delay. The express companies then disposed of them to the best advantage, therefore there were some cheap flowers on the market. All stock could have been sold at good prices if they would have been received on time. Many orders were refused on this account. Even on out-bound shipments there was an embargo. Express packages were received only at owner's risk. Even after the Christmas rush shipments were still arriving from 10 to 12 hours late. New Year's business was up to the usual standard and helped to wind up one of the largest years in the flower business.

NOTES.

Randolph & McClements had a beautiful store for the holidays. When the writer called a few days ago, they had sold the store decorations to be used at a ball the next night.

Zieger Co. had a large business in corsages and fancy plant baskets. Mr. Gibson is more than pleased with this year's business.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had a wonderful stock of beautiful plants for her holiday trade, each arranged in her artistic style.

E. C. Ludwig disposed of many cases of holly and did a large business in cut flowers and plants for the holidays.

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. disposed of an entire house of orchids that was in just right for Christmas.

Wm. Turner, of Wilkinsburg, had a fine crop of stevia, just right for last week.

We all look for the usual eastern "drummer" to call on the trade this week.

Chas. Patton, of Sewickley, cleaned up all salable stock in his greenhouses.

RETAIL TRADE ON PAR WITH 1915.

The Christmas just passed was peculiar in many respects. The wholesalers are of one opinion, and that is of a record business, but with the retailers the balancing of the books shows a business equal to former years, but not much increase. The advance call was very heavy, but on Saturday and Monday there was a noticeable depreciation. This was, no doubt, due largely to the lack of azaleas. Where in former years these plants were handled by the hundreds, at prices ranging from $4 to $15 each, this year many customers with their lists and cards made up would not leave their orders. Plant stock, and made-up baskets were again in very heavy demand. Fortunately the market was well supplied with good cyclamens at from $3 to $5 each, and basket arrangements at from $5 to $15 each. The rose stock was very good, but the prices asked by the wholesalers were out of proportion, especially as the stock was all classed as better grades and there were very few at $3 per dozen on the market. Carnations also commanded from $8 to $12 per hundred wholesale, and when one figures out, it is surprising that stock sold as well as it did. Christmas greens had a large call and wreathing was advanced from 10 to 25 per cent above former years. Holly and mistletoe prices ranged as usual. American Beauties were not very plentiful and were in good demand. Mrs. Russell were very fine and wholesaled as high as $60 per 100. Hoosier Beauty, Richmond, Shawyer, Ophelia and Stanley were all of good quality. Carnations were hardly as good in quality as other years, though the scarcity of stock kept the price well up. Poinsettias were fairly plentiful, as were violets, orchids, lily of the valley and mignonettes, and all commanded good prices. Ferns, flowering plants and made-up arrangements all sold out and the market was well cleared of all stock. Since Christmas, stock continues to be short and prices are accordingly high.

NOTES.

Carl Grobba was again the leader in plants and although he has been striving for many years to produce first-class cyclamens, it is only during the last two seasons that he perfected them. This year 5,000 were marketable and he had some splendid specimen plants. Ericas, rhododendrons, poinsettias, tulip and hyacinth pans, narcissi, Dutch Golden Spur, stevias and palms and Boston ferns were the bulk of his stock. Business here was better than ever, although the cold weather hampered the sales at the department stores, which usually use considerable stock. North Toronto Floral Co. had a small lot of azaleas which were in fine shape and found ready sale. Their roses and carnations were also up to their usual standard of quality.

J. H. Dunlop, at Richmond Hill, was in the best of shape for the Christmas demands; his stock was timed to the day and roses were of exceptional quality. His Russell, Hoosier Beauty, Shawyer and Ophelia were of the best quality and a pleasure to handle. His mignonette, Chicago Giant, was the finest we have ever had in this section, while his orchid sweet peas were a splendid addition for the Christmas trade.

The Dale estate, of Brampton, has, as is customary with a firm doing so large a business, had a record season. They went in strongly for green goods and Christmas stock in their supply department, which proved a large factor in this section. Although short of roses and carnations, they were heavy in orchids, lily of the valley, lilies and other lines, and were able to fill only a small percentage of their orders.

R. Jennings, of Brampton, who has been ill for a considerable period, has been attending to business daily. His Christmas business has been very satisfactory and it is pleasing to note that business of the past season has been the best in his history, for although he has been ill, the responsibility has been placed on the shoulders of his son, Bert, and everything has gone along satisfactorily.

Among the retailers all made large preparations to catch the public. Tidy & Son were very heavy on cyprip-diums and fern arrangements. Simmons & Son made features of novelty effects, Dunlop's more to roses, and Dilemuth to poinsettias and basket arrangements.

Jas. Wilson & Son, of Woodstock, supplied the market with chrysanthemums. They had 8,000, which were held back and came in very fine for the holidays. Their violets were of very good size with exceptionally long stems for this season of the year.

Miller & Son had the only azaleas in quantity on this market, and though quite a number came in, many of them did not bloom in time for the holidays.

The Russells were well timed and 5,000 were cut for Christmas.

HOLIDAY BUSINESS BROKE ALL RECORDS.

Prosperity of the country, and of this city in particular, was reflected in the 1916 holiday business of florists in this vicinity. Both retailer and grower reaped the benefits. Never, in the history of local flower merchandising has such a demand swooped down upon the various factors engaged in the growing and selling of flowers and plants. No handicap was too great to be overcome as was evidenced when a big shipment of azaleas from Mentor, Ohio, was frozen on the express company's hands. Since these plants are most popular at Christmas, the lack of them was almost a disaster. Yet despite this, the average florist who is progressive and on the job registered a wonderful gain over last year. The market, even with no azaleas, was in a very satisfactory condition since roses and carnations were in large supply and of better quality than usual. When it was seen that there was to be a great scarcity of plants, florists who were alert loaded up with cut flowers and pushed the sales of them. Baskets, made up attractively, were also given a great deal of attention, with the result that every florist cleaned up on these with great profit to himself. Poinsettias enjoyed a splendid sale and although there was a great increase in the supply of these, it was not equal to the call. Primroses and primulas with cyclamens were also ready sellers. Great quantities of roses were sold and it was noticeable that there was a demand for the better grades. Carnations were good and sold well. Violets were on the market in sufficient numbers to meet the demand, but lily of the valley was scarce. Narcissi were in good supply. One of the pleasant factors in the demand was the large number of telegraph orders that were received from all parts of the country, showing that the constant education of the public along these lines is bearing fruit and that there is still a great field in promoting flower-grams. The weather was ideal during Christmas week and aided materially in putting the holiday spirit of good cheer into the public. Even New Year's day, which is generally very light, was much better than in other years. It was great business.

NOTES.

Schramm Bros. "plugged for all there was in it" to increase their sales over the good season enjoyed last year, and due to consistent advertising, backed up by service, succeeded in a splendid manner. A sale of dollar baskets made up of ruscus, statice and boxwood was a great success and many more could have been sold had the time been sufficient. Five machines were used to make prompt deliveries, including another new Studebaker, just purchased.

Local retailers have learned with regret that the Cushman Gladiolus farm has been sold to a real estate firm and will be platted into a suburban addition in the spring. The stock from this farm was famous throughout the middle west and were ever in great demand. Ralph Cushman, manager of the farm, is not certain about his future plans. He was a popular member of the florists' club, which will regret to lose his active co-operation.

The next big event on the calendar will be the January meeting of the florists' club. Ever since J. L. Shiller was elected secretary, there has been great activity. He has a number of things up his sleeve, which will be of great benefit to the organization. His pet hobby is flower shows, and he is determined to have one in 1917, if he has to do it himself.

Feniger's holiday trade was nearly ruined when a fire broke out in the rear of his store during Christmas week, but the quick arrival of the fire department stopped the damage in time. Feniger was one of the few local retailers who had any azaleas for the holiday buyers and cleaned up on these plants.

Tom Magee, of Scottwood Greenhouse, was somewhat shocked when his annual supply of azaleas failed to arrive, but when he figured up his sales after the rush, he was agreeably surprised that no fall down was registered. His beautiful baskets of crotons were responsible in a great measure for this.

Henry Miller, carnation specialist, is smiling these days when he thinks of the timeliness with which his large carnation crop matured. And they were of splendid quality. But this is the rule with this conscientious grower, and as a result there is always a ready demand for his stock.

S. N. Peck, located near the inter-urban station, sold an unusual number of customers, who came in from the many adjoining small towns. This helped swell his sales to such an extent that he was kept on the jump getting enough stock to fill his orders.

The holiday business of Paul Timm, on Monroe street, was the best ever, according to his report. Paul was surprised at the sale of ferns and plants that he enjoyed. He raises many of these himself, and was in a position to take advantage of the shortage.

GOOD CHRISTMAS TRADE AND PRICES.

The week following Christmas was full of business and the trade has nothing to complain of regarding either demand or supply. All of those left-over or forgotten ones resorted to the florist to make up for deficiency or negligence and the call for a day or two was almost as good as those days preceding the "day of days." The volume of trade was somewhat in excess of former years and the prices very much advanced. The weather has been fine, almost like early spring, and roses, carnations, etc., have blossomed gloriously, meeting all demands most beautifully. The pot plant business continues to flourish, and the many Christmas week festivities have been abundantly supplied with floral beauties both in cut flowers and in plants.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. have some beautiful azaleas that have come out since Christmas day and they are selling right along. Of roses, they have all the leading varieties, and an abundance of good carnations. Trade is good on the cyclamen plants. As an aftermath of the Christmas trade, their business is holding up splendidly.

The Joy Floral Company has had very fine American Beauty, with long stems and large fine flowers, and the call has been brisk. Other roses are also fine. The call here for corsages has been very good.

McIntyre Floral Company still has some very fine orchids, as well as roses of all kinds and carnations in profusion.

SUPPLY LIMITED AND PRICES ADVANCE.

Cold weather and snow continue and the holiday business has been very good. Funeral work has also been in heavy demand during the past week. The storm of December 22 put a number of trolley lines out of commission, crippling traffic and tying up Christmas deliveries, and as a result a great many plants were frozen. Roses are very scarce since the holidays but the quality is very good. Ophelia, White Killarney, Maryland and Shawyer are among the best. Lily of the valley is rather hard to obtain. Carnations have all advanced in price and the supply is limited. Paper Whites, stevias and hyacinths are plentiful.

NOTES.

Miss Lillian Wheeler, of E. C. Kaelber's staff, was awarded first prize of $50 for the best window display of Fulper pottery and roses offered by the Fulper Company. Similar displays of the company's product were made in all the leading cities of the United States at the same time and Miss Wheeler is receiving the congratulations of the trade on her achievement.

George Kramer has been with Salter Bros. during the holidays.

J. B. Keller Sons had a number of elaborate decorations for Christmas festivities and social events. Their holiday trade was unusually large.

George B. Hart has been elected alderman of the Third ward and is receiving the congratulations of his many friends.

OBITUARY.

Nicholas J. Rupp.

Nicholas J. Rupp, treasurer of the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, died December 27 from the effects of an operation for appendicitis. He had been suffering from a nervous breakdown and had been at home for more than a year, but his health was steadily improving; in fact, so much so that he was almost ready to assume active duties when he was suddenly stricken with appendicitis. He was rushed to the hospital and an operation immediately performed, but his heart failed the second day and he passed away at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Mr. Rupp was one of the pioneers in the greenhouse construction business. In 1894, after the death of J. C. Moninger, he joined E. F. Kurowski, and together they bought the business from Mrs. J. C. Moninger. From then on he devoted his entire life to the advancement of greenhouse construction. He was constantly at his office at the John C. Moninger Co. and contributed greatly to the rapid advance and success of this firm.

Members of the greenhouse trade knew him as a jovial good fellow and many florists and vegetable growers have profited by his advice in regard to the construction of their ranges.

He was 53 years old, and besides his wife is survived by a son, Walter Rupp, who is secretary of the John C. Moninger Co., two daughters, Clara and Elsie, his father, Charles Rupp, Sr., a brother and two sisters. The funeral was from his residence, 3508 Janssen avenue, Sunday, December 31, at 2 p. m., and interment at St. Lucas cemetery. Dave Pires, John Winterstein, Michael Steiner, Claus Thompson, John Klunder and Edward Berles, all old employes of the firm, acted as pallbearers and the funeral was well attended. The floral offerings were many and beautiful and included a beautiful piece from the Chicago Florists' Club, of which he was a member, and from many of the wholesale cut flower houses.

Richard William Silvester.

Richard William Silvester, for 20 years president of the Maryland Agricultural College, died of pneumonia, December 31, 1916, in the Union Protestant Infirmary Hospital, Baltimore, Md., after an illness of only three days, though his health had not been good since 1912, when he resigned as president of the college.

He was born in Norfolk, Va., in 1857. He attended the public schools of Norfolk, and later the Virginia Military Institute, from which he graduated in 1877, with the degree of master of science. He was elected president of the Maryland Agricultural College in 1892. Since his retirement in 1912, he has lived on his farm in southern Maryland, devoting his time to scientific research in agriculture and horticulture. He is said by those familiar with his record, to have been one of the best known educators in this country along agricultural and horticultural lines. He was a strong advocate of intensive farming and was well known as a lecturer on that and kindred topics.

He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Lucy Lee Bowen, a daughter, Miss Virginia Lee Silvester, and a son, Dr. Richard Lee Silvester.

THE Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association is distributing attractive cards and stickers to its members.

WINDSOR, ONT.—C. R. Tuson, prominent florist here, was elected mayor of the city, January 1, by a sweeping majority, obtaining almost as many votes as his two opponents combined.

FEATURES of department store holiday decoration are life size Christmas trees of dyed ground pine or lycopodium tied to a wire frame. Immense bright red wreaths of artificial oak and sumac leaves have taken the place of immortelles for the show windows.

At this season of the year when sudden cold spells compel running boilers to full capacity care should be taken that no rubbish has accumulated on top of the boiler or smoke flues, as is too often the case. Many disastrous fires have been caused by ignition of dry punky materials which has sifted through cracks in the floor of the boiler or potting shed.

Rose Pink Ophelia.

Fred Breitmeyer, of Mt. Clemens, Mich., will offer his sport of Ophelia in 1918, under the name of Rose Pink Ophelia. The sport is said to be a more vigorous grower and more prolific than the parent and the flowers resemble those of My Maryland, in color.

American Rose Society.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Rose Society is to be held at the office of President S. S. Pennock in Philadelphia, Pa., January 4. Details of the annual rose exhibition March 20-23, and other important business of the society will be considered. President Pennock is much pleased that the guarantee fund has been so largely over-subscribed and that H. A. Dreer, Inc., have announced their intention to make a rose garden display of pot roses such as was the feature of the national flower show of last spring.

American Carnation Society.

Prospective exhibitors at the American Carnation Society meeting to be held January 31-February 1, will kindly bear in mind that entries in the competitive classes will close January 22. A penalty of $2 will be imposed on each entry made after that date. Please mail your entries early and make entry in every class in which there is a possibility of your showing. That will save you expense and the secretary work and confusion. The premium schedule has been mailed. If you need another, drop the secretary a postal.

Everything points to a successful convention. Word comes from every direction of large delegations. The local society is planning entertainment for a large attendance and is leaving nothing undone to make your stay both pleasant and profitable.

"Carnation Yellows" will again be up for discussion. Another subject will be, "How can we improve the marketing of carnation blooms?" Please come prepared to give your views.

There will also be an exhibition of roses, carnations, violets, sweet peas and other florist crops, which will be shown by various specialists in cut-flower production in the eastern states. Other lectures in floriculture will be given on other days of the week by the staff of the department of floriculture.

Am. Ass'n. for Advancement of Science.

The above named association met in New York, December 26, 1917, and continued its sessions for one week. Seven thousand delegates attended.

While the advancement of science is the object all have in view, many associations and societies were represented, such as the Mathematical Society, the Astronomical Society, the Entomological Society, and the Genetic Association. Nearly every conceivable subject was discussed by the various groups, from birth control to the origin of the Eskimos, and the ape-man whose remains were said to have been recently discovered in Java.

In the exhibit of strange fruits and food, some of them, lent by the United States department of agriculture, were specimens of the mangosteen, described as the most delicious of tropical fruits. This soon may be imported into this country on a commercial scale. Near by were the chayote, a little-known winter vegetable, which resembles a pale-green pepper.

The American Nature Study Society, of which Prof. L. H. Bailey is president, held a meeting December 27, and was addressed by the president and others.

On December 29, before the American Society of Naturalists, papers were read on heredity and genetics, one being by O. E. White on "Variation and Heredity in Peas."

At the meeting of the Society for Horticultural Science, M. A. Blake, the president, read a paper on "Horticulture as a Science and as an Art."

SPLENDID YEAR'S BUSINESS RECORDED.

The splendid business of the 1916 Christmas season came as a fitting close to an excellent trade during the entire year and the new year is making a record-breaking start. The trade in general in commenting on the holiday business, indicate it was the best in years and far beyond all expectations, with a decided increase in sales over last year. Plants sold very well as did made-up baskets, corsages, wreaths, etc., and much stock of good quality in all lines was used in elaborate decorations in both homes and hotels.

NOTES.

Manager Parker, of the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., closed his connection with the firm December 31, with a record-breaking holiday business. Mrs. Lamb, who retired from the firm some five years ago, resumed her position as manager January 1 and has the good wishes of a large circle of friends for her success in the work. T. J. Brackenberry, of this firm, will after December 31 take up a position with C. P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kans. Mr. Parker will confine his efforts to the other lines in which he is engaged.

W. J. Barnes had one of the most satisfactory Christmas trades since he has been in business, with a big increase over any previous year, especially in made-up baskets. Sales in these were triple other years. Pot plants moved well and the orders for corsages kept up until after the holiday season. He had a large supply of orchids and they were much in demand.

R. S. Brown recently lost by death the aged colored fireman, who had been in his employ for upwards of 30 years. Mr. Brown, although nearing his 79th year, is still hale and hearty and attends to the routine greenhouse work every day, in which he is ably assisted by the genial Bill Bridgeland.

H. Kusik & Co., while they prepared for an exceptionally heavy holiday demand, could have sold much more stock had it been available. Fine roses, carnations and violets were features among other good stock.

T. J. Noll & Co. carried the heaviest Christmas supply in their history, but everything sold up exceedingly well. They were well prepared with fine roses, carnations, lilies, lily of the valley, etc. The shipping trade at this establishment was immense.

Wm. Sharp, the accomplished grower at Murray's greenhouses, has a fine batch of Begonia Turnford Hall, and his orchids, including cattleyas, oncidiums and phalaenopsis, are in fine condition, promising a large supply of good flowers.

Samuel Murray had some splendid Lorraine begonias and they sold out early. There was an excellent call for other pot plants, of which he had a large and varied supply, and his made-up baskets were in excellent demand at good prices.

A. Newell's Christmas sales were 22 per cent greater than last year. Begonias, cyclamens, poinsettias, azaleas and made-up plant baskets moved well. New Year's orders were more numerous than in former years.

Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. sold out early and then followed a big week with orders for decorations. The force here turned out more corsages in one week than ever before.

A. E. Elberfeld, of the Alpha Floral Co., has had phenomenal success in his agency business and his large store force has been busy as bees all through the holiday season.

A. F. Barbe had a great run on wreaths as well as in pot plants and cut flowers. He had an excellent supply of stock grown at his own establishment.

Miss J. E. Murray reports an excellent business extending through the holiday season, resulting in a practical sell-out.

John Stevens was cutting an average of 3,000 carnations daily from his range during the past two weeks.

Wm. M. Reid, representing the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is calling on the trade of this territory.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—George Rye, "Some Florist," reports a decrease in the volume of Christmas business, due principally to most unfavorable weather conditions. A cold wave visited the city December 18, followed by one of the most severe snowstorms in years, the temperature dropping to 10 degrees above. Both plants and cut flowers arrived in a frozen condition. December 21 the weather moderated, resulting in a thaw. Trains were from 8 to 10 hours late, and many shipments were from three to four days late. December 24 was very cold, but buying took on a better tone, although poor. Christmas day ended with a rain which started at 2 p. m. Plants did not sell as well as in former years, and while cut flower sales were fairly good, they did not measure up to standard.

CHRISTMAS TRADE SHOWS INCREASE.

The 1916 Christmas trade came up to all expectations. The volume of business done was large, prices were a little higher than last year and the quality of stock better. Total sales in money value showed an increase of about 15 per cent over those of a year ago. The confidence of a good business by the retailers was overshadowed by a feeling of doubt until Saturday as business had been light and telephone orders few, the heaviest snowstorm in the history on Friday giving many justifiable cause to look troubled. Delivery was almost at a standstill, automobiles were stalled all over the city and a few overcrowded street cars were the only means of transportation. Saturday, however, turned cold and bright and business commenced with a rush and good sleighing helped the delivery end. Many stores were open Sunday and on Christmas day nearly all of the cut flower orders were recorded while plants sold earlier. The absence of azaleas was well covered by cyclamens of which there was never a better showing made. Poinsettias were not as popular as usual and the prediction has been made that they are destined to lose their first place position among the Christmas plants. Cherries sold better than last year as did ferns. Of palms, a few were sold. Some large araucarias decorated with ribbons found ready buyers. Nearly all plants were supplied with pot covers—some very expensive and some very cheap. In cut flowers, roses were the favorites and the quality was splendid. American Beauty sold as high as $18 per dozen. Hoosier Beauty, Milady and Stanley led the demand with Richmond, Killarney and Ophelia following. White was held back owing to the heavy demand for funeral work. Carnations sold well but did not meet with the same degree of favor as roses. Mignonette was scarce as was lily of the valley. Narcissi in white and yellow were plentiful. J. L.

Los Angeles.

GREAT HOLIDAY BUSINESS.

All dealers in this city, without exception, report the greatest holiday business in their history. There was a shortage in carnations and lily of the valley together with late arrivals of azaleas in poor condition, but a fairly good supply of poinsettias were on hand and cyclamens were of good quality but the prices were high.

There was the usual stock of cinerarias, primulas and begonias. The cold wave which visited this section has cut off the supply from the ranges and prices will continue firm for a time at least. Business is good.

NOTES.

Howard & Smith report that they never had a better trade. Everything cleaned up completely. This firm furnished many thousands of carnations for the celebration given the soldiers at El Paso.

S. Murata & Co. did an immense shipping business for the holiday trade. They report a shortage in almost all lines.

The Germain Seed & Plant Co. reports that of 1,000 azaleas received, about four-fifths of them were frozen.

The Broadway Florists report the biggest Christmas trade in the history of the firm. They were well prepared however and had a large stock of good quality.

Seki Bros. Co. has been busy with funeral work, which, together with their Christmas trade, has kept their force on the move.

NEW YEAR'S TRADE QUIET.

The New Year's trade was quiet, according to most reports, with no business whatever to speak of, but the sales for the week in general were very satisfactory and everything in cut flowers cleaned up nicely at good prices, with the exception of carnations, which are selling at low figures compared with all the other offerings. American Beauty roses are in good demand and there is hardly ever any surplus to speak of. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are in large supply with plenty on hand to fill all orders. Roses in general are cleaning up nicely every day, including White Killarney, which are in good crop. Orchids are good property, and while not scarce, are none too plentiful. Gardenias are moving as quickly as ever. Sweet peas are more plentiful this week than they have been for some time, but are in good demand at high prices and clean up very satisfactorily right a long. Violets are in good supply and the same holds true for lily of the valley, which continues to hold up in price. Paper White narcissi are seen in large quantities at most of the houses and very fancy stock is obtainable at most reasonable figures. Freesias and jonquils are gradually becoming more plentiful and are having a fairly good call. Fancy stevia is in good demand but is none too plentiful. Lilies are in large supply and so are callas. Snapdragons are good property and it is surprising how well calendulas continue to gain in popularity. Mignonette, bouvardia and Romans are included in the many offerings and are in good demand. Green goods of all kinds are plentiful and a further advance in ferns has been made by some of the wholesale houses this week. Outside of funeral work and wedding orders trade has been none too good, but seems to be improving at this writing, and while stock is in good supply, it is none too plentiful, neither is it scarce, but a few brisk days would find quite a change in the market conditions.

NOTES.

The John C. Moninger Co.'s factory was partly destroyed by fire on the afternoon of December 30. Fortunately the blaze was extinguished before much damage was done, and while the loss will be in the neighborhood of many thousands of dollars, fully insured, it will not interfere with business to any great extent and deliveries will go forward on time. The ventilating and steel structure departments were damaged most, but additional space in an adjoining building is already in use and work is going along as though nothing at all had happened.

The regular meeting of the florists' club will be held at the Morrison hotel, Thursday evening, January 4, at 8 o'clock. The installation of officers will take place at this meeting and retiring officers will present their annual reports.

W. W. Seekins, wife and daughter, of Duluth, Minn., passed through here January 3 on their way to Florida, where they will visit for several months. Mr. Seekins has invested in some property near Jupiter, and his mission there is to get a line on what it really is.

Percy Jones is having a special January sale on bronze galax and boxwood, which will continue until the present supply in stock is exhausted. This firm recently added another new rose grower to its list of consignors.

H. C. Blewitt, of Des Plaines, is cutting from a nice crop of sweet peas.

The A. L. Randall Co. has leased another floor in the LeMoyné building, in which it is now located, and if it keeps on it will soon have the whole structure, with the exception of the main floor, in which several other wholesalers are located. This firm is receiving many compliments on its new illuminated aquarium, which promises to be almost as popular with the trade as the celebrated electric store fountain, which beautifies so many retail establishments throughout the country.

Chas. J. Bond, the orchid specialist of Naperville, says that his Cattleya Trianae is producing a larger percentage of high grade blooms than in former years. C. Schroederae, C. Mossiae and C. Trianae recently received from the woods are rooting sturdily and should make excellent stock next season. Oncidium splendidum has enormous spikes. A hybrid between Cattleya labiata and C. Bowringiana introduced by Sander as C. Portia, seems to please the western trade.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are handling a heavy supply of smilax this week in addition to their usual complete offerings of other greens and cut flowers. Orchids are to be had in quantity regularly at this establishment. Mr. Vaughan, who has been slightly under the weather for several weeks, is feeling much better and is ready to tackle another record breaking year's business.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a large quantity of choice carnations, which are moving very satisfactorily, owing to their splendid quality. American Beauty roses are arriving in good supply and clean up early every day at high prices.

Bassett & Washburn are in large crop with White Killarney roses and report a good demand for same. This firm is booking a large number of new

J. A. Budlong is cutting a large quantity of fine Mrs. Chas. Russell roses. Budlong's list of roses as far as varieties are concerned, is without question the largest and most complete in this vicinity.

Sinner Bros. are cutting from a heavy crop of Killarney and White Killarney roses. John Sinner says that trade was fine with them for the week following Christmas and much better than the one before.

Allie Zech calls attention to the extra fancy orchid flowering sweet peas that Zech & Mann are receiving from W. H. Amling of Maywood. Fred Ottenbacher is back in the employ of Zech & Mann.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is showing a good supply of home grown jonquils, in addition to a most complete line of all other seasonable cut flowers.

August Jurgens has recovered sufficiently from his recent operation for appendicitis to be taken home, and is getting along as nicely as can be expected.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are handling a nice grade of roses and carnations in addition to a good supply of exceptionally fine orchid flowering sweet peas.

Erne & Klingel have a large quantity of St. Patrick's green carnation absorber on hand to supply their trade with this year.

Tom Rogers, who has been employed in Minneapolis, Minn., for several years, is visiting old acquaintances here this week.

August Poehlmann is able to be about again after being confined to his home for several days with a severe cold.

Carl Beu has been all smiles since December 29, when the stork deposited a brand new baby boy at his home.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are offering a splendid grade of yellow narcissi, which are in very good demand.

Frank Farney, formerly with one of the leading eastern supply houses, is now with the A. L. Randall Co.

Duncan Robertson is now with George Wienhoeber, well known South Wabash avenue retail florist.

The American Bulb Co. mailed all its customers a very pretty Happy New Year card this week.

B. Friedman, of the Atlas Floral Co., Detroit, Mich., was in the city on business January 2.

Richard Parker has accepted a position with the National Plant & Flower Company.

Mrs. Victor Bergman is home from a pleasant visit with relatives at Pittsburgh, Pa.

L. Koropp is in charge of the Ohio Floral Co.'s store.

Miss Emily Lampartes and W. I. Wilson were quietly married in this city last November, but managed to keep it a secret until very recently, when Mrs. Wilson resigned her position as saleslady with the Atlas Floral Co. to go to housekeeping.

The George Wittbold Co. is busy taking inventory this week. This firm's handsome new store on Buckingham Place is an object of much interest to the customers, even though the finishing touches have not yet been added.

Mrs. Nicholas J. Rupp and family have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of a kind husband and father, whose death occurred December 27, an account of which appears in our obituary column this week. Mr. Rupp was probably the first greenhouse salesman in the west and was then identified with John A. Diez & Co., who made greenhouse materials and millwork, and at which time his business partner, E. F. Kurowski, and former employer, John C. Moninger, were associated with the same firm. When John L. Diez & Co. retired, John C. Moninger bought the business, which was in the neighborhood of 1892, and in 1894, after his death, Mr. Rupp joined E. F. Kurowski in buying the business from Mrs. Moninger. Mr. Rupp sold material for the first ranges built in this vicinity and was well and favorably known to the trade. He was always ready to help a worthy cause and attended all the meetings of the Florists' Club and other trade gatherings whenever he found it possible to do so. Notwithstanding that very few people in the trade knew of his sudden death, the floral offerings were many and beautiful, and showed the high esteem in which he was held by the local trade.

Peter Reinberg has 600,000 rooted carnation cuttings ready for immediate delivery, including a good supply of many of the newer varieties. This firm is about ready to repot 3,500 Thenanthos carnation cuttings and the stock is in splendid condition, according to Emil Reichling, who states that his firm was among the first to buy this variety. American Beauty roses will be discarded at the Reinberg establishment next season. Felix Reichling reports trade at the store all week as exceptionally good, with a brisk demand for Mrs. Chas. Russell roses.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is strong on roses and carnations this week and is offering a particularly fine supply of American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses. This firm will grow 5,000 Thenanthos carnations next season, and has just got through potting up the cuttings, which were delivered this week. T. E. Waters, of the supply department, is serving on the jury for two weeks.

Flowers, plants and equipment valued at $10,000 were destroyed December 30 by a fire in the conservatory of the Oakwoods Cemetery, Sixty-seventh street and Dorchester avenue. Three greenhouses were burned and a defect in the heating apparatus is believed to have caused the blaze.

E. Paselle, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s Morton Grove office force, received a new Overland touring car for Christmas from his wife. The car is painted a bright red and is always given the right of way because it greatly resembles those in use by the local fire department.

Kirscht Bros., of Morton Grove, have 10,000 cuttings in the sand of their new carnation Winsor Enchantment, which will be disseminated next season. This variety has made quite a hit with the customers at A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s store, where it has been on sale this fall and winter.

Henry Wittbold has the job to decorate the Coliseum with green goods for the Allied Bazaar, to be held January 11-20. Mr. Wittbold had several carloads of stock shipped in for the job by Harry Garland, formerly of Des Plaines, but now of White Cloud, Mich.

Joseph Weis, 3445 Southport avenue, had a heavy run on funeral work all this week, including several orders for the recent N. J. Rupp funeral.

PLENTIFUL SUPPLY AFTER HOLIDAYS.

Since Christmas, the market has been quite well supplied with all seasonable lines of stock. Business has been steady with a fairly active demand. The New Year's business was excellent for that day. American Beauties are in a good supply and include a fair assortment of the various sizes. Other roses are plentiful and can easily take care of all present calls for them. Carnation receipts are heavy and sufficient for present needs. Easter lilies are plentiful. Narcissi are in fair supply. Roman hyacinths and freesias now are offered. Stevia has a fair market. Other offerings include some excellent orchids, lily of the valley, violets and sweet peas. In the last named, the pink and the white ones are fairly plentiful. The first of the cut of lavender are coming into the market. Callas and rubrum lilies may be had.

NOTES.

P. J. Olinger, after a successful holiday season with his new red carnation seedling, Radium, has begun to sell the rooted cuttings.

C. E. Critchell has been getting some excellent Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty from Wm. Gardner, Richmond, Ind.

The regular meeting of the florists' society will be held Monday, January 8.

E. G. Gillett's business for the new year opened very auspiciously.

LARGEST HOLIDAY BUSINESS EVER.

The Christmas business in this city was the best ever enjoyed by the trade. As was expected, the supply of cut flowers was far behind the demand. The florists expected this, and stocked up heavily with pot plants. The call for these was exceptionally heavy and nearly every store cleaned up completely. The continued cold, dark weather kept all cut stock on the short side, and as we are experiencing the same kind of weather still, it will be some weeks before stock of any description is in ample supply again. Roses of all varieties were scarce and hard to get, and the wholesalers held them at higher figures than for some years past. What stock did arrive was spoken for long before it reached the market. Carnations, too, proved in short supply, though not nearly so bad as were the roses. The growers received higher figures for these also, compared to former years. Orchids began to come in a little more freely by Christmas week, but there was not enough to fill all demands. Many of the stores featured orchids in pots, principally cattleyas. These proved rapid sellers. Gardenias were in limited supply with no lily of the valley at all to speak of. Quite a few freesias came in and sold at top figures. The very cold weather had a bad effect on the cut of violets. Usually these are in the market in large quantities at this season of the year, but this one was the exception. The out-of-town call for violets was very heavy. Quite a few chrysanthemums hung on for the holidays and flowers of every grade sold out completely. Seldom has the supply of pot stock been as excellent as was to be had during the week. Vast quantities of poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias and primulas were used. There were no azaleas to be had. The supply of California red berries was practically unlimited and great quantities were sold by the stores and by the green men. Some extra fine English holly arrived from the north and was quickly disposed of. Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus are in rather short supply just now, owing to the cold weather. California wild cherry was extensively used in place of holly. Smilax was a scarce item and little of it was seen in the market.

NOTES.

All the stores presented splendid pictures during holiday week. Some of the decorations were very elaborate and expensive. Pelicano, Rossi & Co. made their usual splendid show. The store and windows were gay with poinsettias, pot orchids, cyclamens and begonias. They report themselves greatly pleased with the results of the holiday business. J. B. Boland made an excellent display in their Kearny street store. All seasonable plants and flowers were displayed to the best advantage. MacRorie-McLaren Co. made a grand showing of pot plants, principally poinsettias and orchids. They are greatly pleased with their first Christmas trade. Podesta & Baldochi featured orchids largely, this being their great specialty. Their show of pot stock was all that could be wished for and cleaned up in fine shape. The Art Floral Co. made very unique window displays, this being the work of Manager Matraia. They are greatly encouraged by the large volume of business transacted. In the residential districts the same reports are being received as from the downtown florists. E. Serveau says this was his busiest Christmas. A. O. Stein, Chas. Steppenback and the Misses Hannon sold out completely.

At the last regular meeting of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society the officers for the ensuing year were elected. The evening was pleasantly spent after the business session in inspecting the various exhibits. The officers chosen are as follows: John M. Daly, president; David Bassett, vice-president; George Nunn, treasurer; Arthur Bearsby, financial secretary; Percy Copp, corresponding secretary; trustee for the long term, Richard D. Cruikshank. Exhibition committee: Percy Ellings, David Bassett, Rudolph Slama, Arthur Bearsby and John Aitken; ushers, Angus McVicker and Henry Wright.

The plant growers all did a splendid trade and many "sold" signs were on stock several weeks previous to the holidays. Eric James, who is one of our leading plant specialists, sold out everything. Some of his ericas were grand specimens. H. Plath reported a heavy sale of nephrolepis in all sizes; also kentias and Primula obconica. The Japanese growers across the bay did a thriving business, especially H. Hayashi, the cyclamen grower. He sold out completely on large sizes.

Luther Burbank, the well known originator of new plants, and Miss Elizabeth Waters were quietly married in this city December 21. Miss Waters was born in Michigan, and for several years past has been Mr. Burbank's private secretary. They are at present in the southern part of the state and upon their return will reside at the old Burbank home in Santa Rosa.

Arthur Cann, of San Jose, who was a recent visitor, reports a splendid Christmas trade. He says a great many more cut flowers could have been used if they were to be had. The trade in pot plants was larger than in former years, owing to the cut flower shortage.

Geo. F. Wakefield has been appointed superintendent of parks of the city of San Jose. Wakefield is a civil and landscape engineer. He promises to devote much attention to the improving of the scenic aspects of the city parks.

T. Fenton, superintendent of the MacRorie-McLaren Nursery, is still on the sick list. During his absence, Andrew McDonald is in charge. He reports an exceedingly busy week shipping plants for the holiday trade.

Percy Ellings, of the Lynch Nursery Co., has been confined to his home for several weeks past by illness. His many friends in the trade look forward to seeing him about soon again.

Supt. McLaren, of Golden Gate Park, has been called upon by the trustees of Leland Stanford University to assist in the planning of the new Stanford arboretum.

Frank R. Mills, of Palo Alto, has purchased several acres of land adjoining his nursery in San Mateo county. G. N.

EXCELLENT NEW YEAR'S BUSINESS.

New Year's business was devoid of any special features. There was a good trade, reported by some as greater than last year. The supply of nearly all the seasonable items was about equal to the demand. Paper White narcissus was the only flower, the supply of which was in excess of the call, and yet great quantities of them were used, chiefly because of the moderate price and excellent quality. Carnations were in fair supply and all available stock sold at reasonable prices, but it is becoming evident that the "divine flower" is losing ground in popularity; thousands were formerly sold, where now a few hundred will suffice. Roses of short and medium lengths were very much short of the demand. Lilies, too, were quite scarce, while violet stock about equaled the good demand for them, retailing at $3 and $4 a hundred. American Beauties were fine and sold well, closely followed by the higher grades of Russell, which is now pushing the famous fragrant American Beauty for first place in the call for the more expensive flowers. Azaleas and other flowering plants were in meagre supply and all were easily disposed of. Boston ferns still maintain their popularity and many were sold.

NOTES.

Joseph Streit, who has the Taepke greenhouses on McLellan avenue, is putting in an auxiliary boiler 16 feet long by 66 inches diameter, which, with his other boiler of lesser dimensions, will assure him of full heating capacity in the coldest weather. A new retail store has recently been attached to these greenhouses and is in charge of Miss Streit, who ably cares for the good business being developed here. A propagating house, 10x60 feet, is now being built and an extensive business will be done in rooted cuttings of poinsettias. His plants of these were fine for Christmas, as were also his stock of azaleas. The coal shortage has no terrors for Mr. Streit, as his supply on hand will last until March 1.

The continued severity of the weather is causing much anxiety to the growers here and at Mt. Clemens, because of the shortage of coal, with no indication of an improvement in the situation. A pot famine, too, is included in the growers' troubles, with no prospects of relief in sight.

GOOD BUSINESS FOLLOWS CHRISTMAS.

The holiday week's business has been quite satisfactory; flowers in plenty, with a very fair demand, which has kept the scales balancing nicely. Prices were about one-third less than for Christmas. The quality of the stock is quite up to standard. Roses appear to be cut too tight, a mistake that is too often made, many growers seeming to think they must send in something, whether it is ready or not. Sweet peas also are seen in half-blown sprays, a great mistake sure to show in the returns. This flower was a greater factor at Christmas than ever before; nearly all the orchid varieties were in, some almost up to the February standard of last year. Lily of the valley, while plentiful, is still quoted at Christmas prices, and in consequence the wholesale men carry the stock, dealers buying when necessary. Gardenias are held at high figures, being in the hands of but a few. The quality is good. Paper Whites and stevia are over abundant—the flowers of the common people—but they do not work well alone. Violets are in good demand, on account of a limited call. Carnations are holding their own fairly well. They are, just now, cut almost too tight. The French Golden Spurs are in good demand. White lilac, very good for the season, is not sufficient for requirements. Mignonette is good stock. Easter lilies come and go with great regularity; they are one of the most standard of all round the season flowers. Cattleyas are scarce at top prices. There was an extra demand from out-of-town customers for New Year's, but the city stores made very little preparation, expecting little more than a busy morning. December 24 was the quietest Christmas eve ever experienced in the wholesale trade of this city, while the 23d was one of the busiest days. Christmas day, falling on Monday, gave the store men a chance to get out orders, which for the most part were to be delivered Christmas eve. For this business they stocked up well on Saturday with the result there was not much doing on Sunday and all the wholesale houses closed at 6 to 7 p. m.

NOTES.

The wholesale shippers of the craft of this city—commission florists and growers—are to get together in the near future and formulate a plan looking to the more expeditious handling of their products by the various express companies. They will then take this matter up with the companies and do their utmost to have flowers and plants given a right of way over the ordinary perishable matter that goes to make up the bulk of the express business at the holiday season. The service was a trifle better this Christmas because last year's delays in deliveries of flowers, fruit and vegetables, cost the company in this city alone, over $25,000; of this amount $6,000 was for flowers. Mr. Niessen believes that it is possible to greatly improve the existing system, and that something practical will develop from such an action of the entire trade.

A meeting of the chairmen of the local committees of the coming American Rose Society exhibition was held at the Bellevue-Strafford hotel, December 26. Very enthusiastic reports were received, showing that the entire trade was taking an active interest and that many fine exhibits were already assured.

Emil A. Doemling, son of August Doemling, of Lansdowne, Pa., was a messboy on the steamer Maryland, which wirelessly on Christmas night that she was in a sinking condition. Nothing has since been heard of the vessel. It is hoped that the crew have been taken from boats by passing vessels.

Carl Cortis, of the Jos. Heacock Co.'s force, in speaking of express service, said they had found that a little "grease on certain cogs in the wheels of service" to have been of the greatest benefit. Killarney, Hillingdon, Ward and Hadley roses are the features here.

George Cook, for a number of years with the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., joined the forces of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange December 26. Mr. Cook is very well versed in the wholesale business and should be quite a factor in his new position.

A small red Jap chenville wreath, only three inches in diameter, with a twig of green and a red bow, was used to good effect in the decoration of small trellis boxes. These were seen in the store of George Craig, whose Christmas business was very satisfactory.

John McIntyre, well known to the trade in this city, died suddenly in New York, December 28. The funeral was from his late residence, January 2. He was an indefatigable worker in the wholesale district as well as when in the retail business for himself.

Growers of chrysanthemums for next season should include in their varieties some of the newer single and smaller flowered anemones. These found a ready sale in all markets during the past year.

American Beauty, white lilac, gardenias and high grade lily of the valley are features of the Leo Niessen Co.'s stock. A very good out-of-town trade was reported for January 1.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are recovering from the tremendous early December business which nearly swamped them. The outlook for the new year was never better.

Wholesale prices for gardenias for Christmas delivery was $3 to $6 per dozen. The street price on December 25 was—"Here's your fresh gardenias, five cents each."

My Maryland, Brilliant and Ophelia roses, lily of the valley and high grade carnations, were holiday week specials with Edward Reid. Business was very good.

Berger Brothers found a good demand during the holiday week. Maryland and Ophelia roses and high grade violets and carnations were features.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. handled a great many plants at Christmas. Their business in this line is rapidly increasing.

The Robert Craig Co.'s business taxed their increased facilities to the utmost. It was the best holiday trade ever experienced.

Ardisias were good stock this season. The supply was only half enough to go around. K.

ASHTON, R. I.—The greenhouses of the John Patterson estate are to be offered for sale in the near future, it is reported.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—Fred G. Lewis has opened an up-to-date flower store on Main street, which will be supplied from his range on Locust street.

FAIR MARKET AFTER GOOD CHRISTMAS.

The New Year's business was fair, but not remarkable. As was to be expected, for a few days after Christmas, the market was quiet. It is no secret that it took several days for some of the dealers to clean up on left-over stock. December 27 opened with what the weather bureau called a "glaze," but to be explicit, was that kind of rain that freezes as it falls and makes the earth one grand concourse for slipping, sliding and falling. As a consequence there were accidents and broken limbs. Rain continued for two days, melting the ice and the greater part of the snow that had previously fallen. On the mornings of December 29 and 30, business improved, but though the wholesalers kept open till nearly midnight of the 30th, there was practically nothing doing. There was plenty of stock to supply the demand, at fair prices. American Beauties, special, brought 60 and 75 cents each. The general run of tea roses, such as Ophelia and the best Killarneys, 15 cents for specials, six cents for No. 1s and four cents for No. 2s. There was stock of such roses as Mock, Scott Key, Russell and Ward that went higher. Hadley, which may be placed in a class by itself, is running a close race with American Beauty. In carnations, there were sales of Cottage Maid and Mrs. Ward for 10 cents, but Enchantress and the reds and whites ranged from six to eight cents. The best violets went at $1 per 100, but were slow. Lilies and lily of the valley dragged throughout the week. On December 31, 12 cents was the top price for the best lilies; for ordinary stock there were sales as low as eight cents. The bulk of lily of the valley sold for four cents and was slow at that. Trumpets and Golden Spurs were scarce and averaged $1 per dozen. A few short tulips are on the market at 50 cents per dozen. Some good stock of the old varieties of sweet peas is noticed, but the Spencers have the call and even they are rather slow. Good snapdragons and what irises there are on the market bring good prices. A few chrysanthemums are hanging on, but little attention is paid them. The warm and wet weather of the past week had a bad effect on some of the roses.

January 1.—The business attending the beginning of the new year has been light. December 30 was about the same as the average Saturday. While the wholesale stores were open all day December 31, there was very little doing. There was some buying this morning, but the demand was not heavy. As stated, a few carnations sold for 10 cents, but it is doubtful if the bulk of the stock averaged over six cents. The supply of stock in general is not heavy, but there is no scarcity.

NOTES.

Percy B. Rigby, of the S. S. Pen-nock-Meehan Co., will soon leave for a short stay in Florida, his primary object being to visit his father and other relatives, one being a grandmother who is 92 years old. The scientists who met here last week talked about America as the "melting pot" for alien races, but the Rigby family do not need to go into it. Their ancestors came to New England in 1620, Percy B. Rigby having been born in Connecticut.

J. K. Allen, who has seen longer service as a wholesaler than any man now in the business in this city, is well pleased with his holiday sales. He had a nice stock of poinsettia plants, which sold well, and also a good variety of cut flowers.

George D. Nicholas, Seventh avenue and 123d street, has a fine store, the interior features being artistically arranged. He has been in business in this city for many years, has a fine education and artistic tastes.

N. Scafes, 501 Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, had a fine Christmas business and was completely sold out of plants. J. Kontzias, his buyer, is a daily visitor in the wholesale cut flower district.

Walter F. Sheridan, another of the pioneer wholesalers, had a fine holiday stock, particularly of roses, and has had a steady run of business.

At George I. Laird's, 3014 Fulton street, Brooklyn, it was stated that holiday business had been good. He has both a fine store and a considerable glass area.

Hugh H. Jahn, 710 Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn, advises us that he had an excellent holiday trade. He has one of the best stores in that borough.

Tryforos Brothers, who have one store at 56 East 125th street and another at 489 Willis avenue, report good holiday business.

Joseph Vock, salesman in the Cut Flower Exchange for W. H. Siebrecht, has been quite ill, threatened with pneumonia.

New Catalogue.

AGGELER & MUSSER SEED COMPANY, OF LOS ANGELES, ISSUE 24TH ANNUAL

One of the largest seed houses in the West, The Aggeler & Musser Seed Company, Sixth and Alameda streets, Los Angeles, have just received the first edition of their new 1917 catalog, and are giving it broadcast distribution. This is their 24th Annual Catalog, and it certainly surpasses any previous edition.

It contains many new features such as hints to the home vegetable gardener, how gardening may be made easy, etc. In fact, the supplementary booklet, called the “Garden Manual,” which heretofore has been printed separately, is this year incorporated in the big Annual, and is claimed to be one of the most complete seed books published. It contains answers to more than 1,000 questions and gives information regarding all varieties of plants listed and is fully illustrated. Not only does it tell all about seeds, but gives full data concerning the correct tools and implements agriculturists should use to obtain the best results. Valuable hints on Poultry, Spraying, Fertilizing, and the use of Insecticides are also given.

The Aggeler & Musser Seed Company will gladly send this descriptive, illustrated and interesting catalog free and postpaid to anyone writing and requesting it.

contracts, but in added land value.

HARRY A. BARNARD, the well known representative of Stuart Low & Co., London, Eng., reached home November 19 and his many American friends will regret to learn that he has been ill with influenza since his return.

LOMPOC, CALIF., produces the largest bean crops but the value of commercial beans is so great that the growers do not care to raise green-pod garden sorts under 10 or 12 cents per pound, which is too high for eastern seedsmen.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—The business of the McGill Seed Growers' Co., has been taken over and will be conducted by Wm. A. Cox, under his own name. Mr. Cox was president and principal stockholder of the former concern,
R. C. McGill retiring.

NEW YORK.—Among those in attendance at the seed analysts' annual convention, held in this city, were Miss Jessie L. Anderson, J. Henry Roy-eux and Morris Robinson, representing J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.—
Vaughan's Seed Store is handling early cured new crop tuberoses in carload lots.

FREIGHT congestion is universal, even exceeding the unfortunate holiday express record. Carload shippers and importers of nursery stock, east and west, advise us that delays of 10 days and two weeks are common, even on short hauls. Most recent shipments have come in frozen. By thawing slowly at 35 to 40 degrees it is hoped to save the stock.

THE Harris Bros. Seed Co., bean growers and dealers of Mt. Pleasant, Mich., is mailing customers a bean scarf pin with the following card: "The world is topsy turvy, we say; Indeed, we swear it! When diamonds are bought by the bushel; And beans are sold by the carat. If you would be stylish, wear it; If you would be rich, plant it; If you are hungry, eat it."

NARCISSUS PAPER WHITE bulbs are said to be still available in several cities. It is evident that jobbers, feeling the shortage of 1915, started early to secure liberal quantities for 1916, and the high prices incident to these transactions caused slow sales in view of the early oversold state of the big buyers, the florist forcers, many of whom, under clever urging, contracted larger stocks than usual.

VAPORITE, recommended for the killing of wire worms, was the subject of a recent lawsuit in England, a farmer refusing to pay for the insecticide supplied by the dealers on the ground that it did not kill wire worms on his land. The jury found there was no specific guarantee in respect of the vaporite sold to the defendant and a verdict was returned in favor of the dealers for the amount claimed with a stay of execution.

Potato Quarantine Amended.

Hereafter shipments of potatoes from the Dominion of Canada certified by the shippers to be as sound as is com-mercially practicable and to contain no more than 10 per cent of tubers showing traces of disease will be admitted at any port of entry of the United States, instead of at certain designated ports only, as in the past.
The shipments, if accompanied by certificates of soundness as provided, will not be held by collectors of customs for inspection, except on special notification from the federal horticultural board. An order amending the rules and regulations of the potato quarantine to this effect has just been issued by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Under the amended regulations the importer must apply to the federal horticultural board for a permit for importation of potatoes as at present, designating the desired port of entry.
The foreign shipper must enter the number of such permit on his certificate of soundness. The federal horticultural board has prepared and will send to all applicants for permits forms for shippers' certificates of soundness.

Boom Times in Aroostook.

What tales of plethoric affluence are coming down from the banks of the Aroostook these days! Every mail and every breeze brings them—such tales of unprecedented agricultural prosperity as no other part of the country can tell, unless it be the most golden section of the golden grain belt. Aroostook has had big potato crops and high prices before—they have made it known as the richest agricultural county in the whole country—but no season like this one. Houlton, the shire town and trade outlet, with about 7,000 population and 1,600 telephones, unblushingly puts forth the claim that it is the richest town on the map, except our own Brookline, where not a few Aroostook people find it pleasant to spend their winters.

A Houlton statistician figures that fully $100,000 daily is coming into the county from potato sales and has been for weeks. The 100,000 acres planted to potatoes in the county have yielded some 10,000,000 barrels, and with potatoes selling at the local stations at $4 and even more a barrel you can figure it out for yourself. You hear of farmers who are cleaning up from $10,000 to $20,000 on the crop, of one who has just refused $88,000 for his 22,000 barrels, of two sisters who cleaned up $18,000 on their brother's farm, which they took over for the season; of one farmer who has paid off a $13,000 mortgage from his profits, of farms that are being sold for $30,000 and of many others that could not be bought for $50,000.—Boston Herald.

Providence, R. I.

HOLIDAY TRADE HIGHLY SATISFACTORY.

Christmas business in this city was very good, all retail stores being rushed to their capacity. Everything sold well and there was a heavy demand for plants. In cut flowers, roses, carnations and poinsettias were the leaders. Violets, although limited in supply, enjoyed a good call and many more could have been disposed of had they been available. In plants, begonias, araucarias, ardisias, crotons, azaleas and fern palms sold fast. The weather was good and taking all in all the business was a hummer. The weather on New Years was cloudy, causing an advance in prices and a shortage of stock. Carnations are bringing good prices and violets continue in short supply, but sweet peas are beginning to make their appearance. Easter lilies are of good quality and are moving well. Pansies, marguerites and bouvardias are selling well. Wholesale prices on cut flowers during the holiday season seemed higher than ever before, but the quality was good and the stock was sold almost before it was cut from the plants.

NOTES.

T. J. Johnston & Co. are now located in their new store on Washington street, where they have much more commodious quarters than before. The store is roomy and imposing in appearance, with a balcony and good windows for display purposes. It is a welcome addition to the retail shops in this city.

The excellent displays of both cut flowers and plants made by the various flower shops helped sales very much and were a factor in the cleanup that resulted. The Westminster Greenhouses had one of the finest displays seen here, plant baskets being a feature.

The evergreen men at the bridge had a very prosperous season. Prices were high but stock sold fast and there was little complaint from the public.

Samuel Resnick, of the Joseph Koppelman Co.'s force, is still confined to the hospital, but is much improved in health and is expected home soon.

Columbus, O.

UNUSUALLY BUSY HOLIDAY WEEK.

There is very little fault to be found with existing trade conditions. Social events during the holiday week have kept florists unusually busy, and the outlook is for a continuance of large demand from the same source. One important factor has been the good rose crop, the large variety and the prolific cuttings as well as the fine quality, giving richness to displays. Some scarcity is beginning to develop in low-priced roses. Carnations approach the glut stage nearer than any other flower, but are still bringing $1 a dozen. Sweet peas are at the other extreme, and could be moved in greater quantity if they were to be had. Violets are in ample supply at $1 per 100. Pot plants have not recovered from the cleaning up of the Christmas trade, primroses and cyclamens being the mainstay. The former are not of normal quality, as they run more to leaf than to bloom. Roman hyacinths are coming in, and sell for 75 cents a dozen. With time to review their Christmas trade, florists are enthusiastic over the showing. Cut flowers, pot plants and fancy basket creations played a much more important part in gift giving than was anticipated. One shop which ordinarily has a force of 10 people, kept 30 busy Christmas week, working until nearly midnight. Another large dealer reports having more than doubled the rose sale of last year. Funeral work, though fair, is just now a secondary feature.

NOTES.

The Hartman Floral Shop, which opened during the past summer, has gone out of business, as a result of financial troubles. The owner of the Hartman Theatre building, in which it was located, brought action against Sam Graff, the proprietor of the shop, in the sum of $317 for rent due. Mr. Graff owns another shop on Gay street, which has been in operation for several years. The newer location did not prove to be a good one. A former venture at the same place by another florist failed to make good. J.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

John Watson, Newark, N. Y., President;
Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President;
Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress Street,
Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel.
Forty-second annual convention will be held at Philadelphia, Pa., June 27-29, 1917.

NEW YORK.—M. Aronowitz, proprietor of the Barclay Nursery Co. was painfully injured December 12, when he fell down the elevator shaft at his store, 60 Barclay street.

PASADENA, CALIF.—Robert Baird, of this city, has purchased the interest of W. J. Eilers in the Van Nuys Nursery Co., in which firm he will be associated with E. W. Hewett.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.—The establishment of an international park, under regulation of an international committee, to embrace both banks of the Niagara river, is being advocated.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Edward Manning Bigelow, who was instrumental in securing Schenley park as a gift to this city and later the Phipps conservatory, died recently following an operation for cancer.

DURING the fiscal year 1916, 705,872 acres of national forest timber lands were estimated and mapped intensively, and 1,093,006 extensively. In all, 20,815,798 acres have been mapped by intensive methods and 47,291,660 by extensive methods.

Timber Cut from National Forests

There were cut from the national forests in the fiscal year 1916, 604,920,000 board feet of timber. Of this amount, 119,483,000 board feet was cut under free use privilege by 42,055 individuals. In all, 10,840 sales of timber were made, of which 97 per cent were under $100 in value, indicating the extent to which the homesteader, rancher, miner, small millman and others in need of a limited quantity of timber draw upon the forests.

Fumigating Chestnuts.

Chestnuts can be prevented from becoming wormy without detracting in the least from their eating or keeping qualities, according to entomologists of the United States department of agriculture, by fumigating them with carbon bisulphid, which can be obtained at most drug stores. The nuts are placed in a tight box or barrel and bisulphid of carbon at the rate of one ounce, liquid measure, to a bushel of chestnuts is poured into a saucer resting on top of the nuts. The heavy fumes of the chemical sink through the nuts and destroy the minute grubs as well as larger worms. After fumigation from 12 to 24 hours, the nuts are exposed to the open air, when the very unpleasant odor of the gas quickly passes off. Carbon bisulphid, however, is highly inflammable and should not be used anywhere near fire. Even a cigar spark will set it off. Fumigation should never be performed in a tightly closed room or in a dwelling, as the nauseating fumes under such conditions might make the operator ill and if breathed in any great quantity might prove poisonous. In using carbon bisulphid under any conditions, care should be taken to breathe as little of the fumes as possible. If fumigation is started in the late afternoon, the nuts should be effectively treated by morning. Users would do well to observe the effect on the worms and increase the amount of bisulphid if found necessary.

The larvae and eggs of chestnut weevils can be killed also by placing the nuts in a bag or sieve and submerging them for a few minutes in boiling water. Another way is to put the nuts in a tub and pour boiling water over them to cover them an inch or two. If the chestnuts in the tub are stirred, many wormy nuts will come to the surface and can be removed. If water is used, however, the nuts must be dried thoroughly before they are stored or shipped. The nuts can also be submitted to a temperature of from 125° to 150° Fahrenheit for a sufficient time to destroy the insects without injuring the food or seed value. Where large ovens or kilns are available, this method should be found convenient and economical. Care should be exercised, however, not to allow the temperature to rise much above 150°.

President Watson's Christmas Card.

President Watson, of the American Association of Nurserymen, had the following on his Christmas card sent to his many friends:

"Each Life is but the Sum of all its Friendships; and what we have of Friendship is but Return of what we give. Then what a reckless Spendthrift have I been; for now at Christmas time, I count my Treasure and I marvel at the Store; for all Good Fellows are my Friends. To You and all whose Friendship has brought into my Life so much of Sunshine and of Happiness, I hope the New Year brings a Harvest rich in all good things—Health and Strength, and Work to do and the Wish to do it for the Love of doing; for that is the Joy of living."

Rooted Carnation Cuttings Immediate Delivery.

We are now booking orders for our New Seedling SUPERB—$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

SUPERB is a seedling of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink, and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full, and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

AVIATOR If you want Scarlet Carnations for Christmas, grow Aviator. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

GOOD BUSINESS FOLLOWS HOLIDAY RUSH.

The last hours of the Christmas trade developed a wonderful demand, and everything salable both in plants and flowers was cleaned out entirely. It was the best Christmas ever experienced in the city. It may also be said that since that time there has been really no let-up in the demand; social events are numerous and the trade has all it can do to keep up with the procession. Belated azaleas are beginning to come in in quantity. There were very few of these on hand for the holiday, but with the call that seems to be so continuous, it looks as though they will be all disposed of satisfactorily.

The legislature convenes January 2, and will no doubt be in session for two months at least. This will bring lots of people to the city and there will no doubt be quite a little entertaining socially and florists will have plenty to do during that time.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Fuchsias.

It is a good time now to start the old stock plants of fuchsias, for there is plenty of room in the propagating bench and it is the early struck cuttings that make the fine plants for vases and boxes, and if cuttings are taken in spring they immediately produce a flower and it is difficult to get a good growth, the plant often remaining short with a stunted appearance yet bearing flowers. If the old plants have been thoroughly ripened, shake the soil off and pot in a good new loam, cut back the wood and place them in a warm house and syringe plentifully. The young growths will shortly appear and should be made into cuttings as soon as they have attained a length of an inch and a half or two inches. As soon as rooted pot in 2-inch pots and give the young stock a warm temperature. When growth commences the top can be taken off and another cutting made, and the plants shifted to 3-inch pots. Another stopping will be necessary in late winter to make nice, bushy plants that will be full of bloom in early spring. Keep them clean from mealy bug by constant spraying.

Lilies.

The lilies for Easter should be brought into warm temperature right after the first of the year. A house of 60° at night should bring them into perfect condition for Easter when it occurs at the time it does this year.
Those that are in 4-inch pots should be potted in 6-inch, and we have found the best way to do this was to first place a crock in the bottom of the pot and cover with about an inch of soil, then place the 4-inch plant on this, filling in around the stem above the old ball. The lily always throws out roots at the base of the stem when the buds form, and if potted in this manner these roots will be in soil and materially aid the plant in perfecting the bloom. With these roots covered with soil the plant also makes a much better appearance. The soil in which they are potted should be a rich compost of about the same composition as is used in rose culture, and the plant should be firmly potted and well watered and placed in a good light location where the plants will not get drawn. A plant 18 to 24 inches high when in bloom with the foliage thickly studded along the stem is the one most desired at Easter. Keep the aphis down all the time by constant fumigation. These little insects are the worst plague to the lily grower, for if they once get established on lilies they are very difficult to dislodge, so it is much better to give the plants a fumigation every week and thus guard against them than to wait until their presence is manifest and try to kill them. This is one of the most pronounced cases where "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Rambler Roses.

Of all the exhibits made at the flower shows in the east a year ago last spring, the Rambler roses attracted the most attention. The varieties of these beautiful plants have increased rapidly and they can now be had in all the shades of red and pink and also white. The single varieties have also been greatly improved and many of these make most beautiful plants.
Every grower should have a few of these for Easter, and even if they do not sell they can be grown on for next year when a finer and larger plant will be had and the wood grown this year can be propagated and if planted outside will make nice plants.
Plants grown in the field and lifted this fall will have to be started the first of the year to have them in bloom for Easter; pot-grown plants can be started two weeks later. They should be firmly potted in good rose soil, and placed in a cool house, one not running higher than 45° at night, and syringed often to soften the wood.
Before the eyes start into growth the plants should be tied out into the shape they are to be grown. These plants can by a little ingenuity and

"At Your Service"

Original Two Columns Wide, Five Inches High.

care be trained into any shape desired. Many fancy as well as grotesque forms are now seen every year. To the inexperienced the round spreading plant should be the first attempted. Five or six stakes at the edge of the pot with the stems wound around and two or three arching over the center is the simplest form. Experienced growers have them in the shape of umbrellas, large balls, ships, and any form they desire. When the growths have got well started the plants should be moved into a temperature of 55° at night, and the syringing on bright days should be kept up to prevent insects from getting a foothold. By the middle of March the flowers should begin to show color and if they do not a little warmer temperature will be required to have them well in bloom for the first week in April. A regular rose temperature of 60° at night will be necessary, but the flowers are not of as good color nor do they last as well if they are unduly forced. A fine assortment of these includes Crimson Rambler, Philadelphia Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, White Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon, Lady Gay, Hiawatha and American Pillar, and in the Baby Ramblers, Crimson Baby, Jessie, Phyllis and Orleans.

Geraniums.

After the holiday trade there will be room enough to space out the geraniums and other bedding stock. The cuttings that were placed in flats, and the young stock in 2-inch pots, should be shifted to the 3-inch size and spaced on the benches so that a good growth is encouraged. As soon as well established in these pots the top can be cut off and another cutting obtained. All the young stock possible should be taken from the plants selected in the fall for propagating purposes, for all the cuttings from which it is expected to produce good sized plants should be in the propagating bench by February 1. Any rooted after March 1 will make small plants for bedding purposes. The best stock for late May and early June planting should be in 4-inch pots by April, that they may be well enough established by the middle of May to begin to flower, and should have at that time three or four good branches so that a succession of bloom is assured.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

After the Holidays.

There is oftentimes a lull for a week or so after the first of the year, which gives an opportunity to make the store as inviting as possible. The social season should now come, the time which will be full of all kinds of functions, dinners, balls, receptions, theatre parties, etc., for all of which there is always more or less demand for floral decorations. "We are giving a dinner next week; what suggestions have you to offer in floral arrangement—I want to have something a little different?" This will soon be the question of the hour, which could be best answered from a number of plans and color combinations already worked out. Last year's successes have been in mind, and along these lines in the various high and low treatments, with the tall vases filled with long stemmed flowers that were kept above the line of vision, and the low shallow bowls and receptions, increase the demand for flowers for personal adornment. Every lady must wear a corsage or a few flowers to give color effect. Cat-tleyas are first choice. Corsages made of orchids with lily of the valley and Farleyense are the acme of the florist's art. Mexican ivy is substituted at times for green on account of its keeping qualities. Violets and Sweet-heart roses, sweet peas and lily of the valley, and gardenias, which are a great favorite with many, are all good selections for the corsage. The bronze tinted, Mrs. Ward and lily of the valley, are also much favored.

A line of flowering plants are good stock at this time; they give a color effect to the decorations of the store, and are generally in demand to add cheer for the sick or for plant windows that are now a feature of many city homes.

The store windows should receive the best attention. Many people go considerably out of their way to see the decorative effects for which many stores have gained a reputation. Timely displays of well arranged flowers, showing artistic effects, are sure to command attention and add to the fame of the store. Plants or baskets of choice flowers, prominently shown, although they compel admiration, may not at that time be wanted, but the impression is made, and when occasion arises, the house will get the order. Floral Holidays—Valentine's Day.

February fourteenth has great possibilities as a floral holiday. As it is, those who for their own benefit exploit the day within their comparatively narrow circle, generally have all they can do, with very satisfactory returns. If the proper publicity along the lines of associating the day with flowers was taken up in the largely populated centers all over the country, the demand created would be almost impossible to supply. With the example of what has been done in the comparatively little general effort to boost Mothers' day and the splendid results obtained in Cleveland, Detroit, Columbus and in other cities, to a more or less degree all over the country, there is every reason to believe that the public will respond heartily to any concerted movement that is enthusiastically put before them.

that were so much in vogue last season, together with the great variety of flowers now in the market, many beautiful effects are possible.

Flowers in pink, red, lavender, yellow, white and green, in solid colors or their various shades, make striking and handsome decorations. An orange colored arrangement, with calendulas and mignonette or with Sunburst and Mrs. Ward roses, mignonette and orange snapdragon is very effective.

Pink snapdragons and sweet peas make a dainty table. Red roses, the flowers well advanced, and mignonette, are a very rich combination. A low, long center of growing ferns, in sections that fit together, in which are concealed vases to hold the flowers, makes a striking center piece. It extends the full length of the table, providing a background suitable for any color combination. A figured or plain chiffon ribbon, pinned to the cloth just inside the plate line and tufted at the corners, of the same color as the dominant flower, is effective.

CO-OPERATION.

Publicity is the greatest factor in business, but in the various florists' clubs of the country, where men gather together to discuss matters of general interest to the craft, this vital subject is rarely ever mentioned. There are fortunately some exceptions. The Cleveland club, all praise to them, has blazed the way and shown what can be done by well organized publicity in exploiting Mothers' day, and in the remarkable success achieved in the flower shows given under their auspices.

There are just as willing workers in every club in the land, but they seem to lack enthusiasm or leadership, or wait for the other fellow to take the initiative. They meet together and have a good time, instructive papers are read and discussed, but this vital principle that will give them returns in dollars and cents is considered individual, to be worked out by each separately, according to his ability.

Growers make the plea that they have nothing to do with the sale of flowers at retail, all their skill and energy being devoted to their production. Commission dealers, who market the product, are without doubt the most important factor of this great industry; their interest lies in obtaining the best returns possible. They increase the demand for flowers by building up and encouraging their sale in an ever-widening territory, but to them, publicity and all such details of final distribution, is entirely a matter for the retail dealer.

Through the avenues of final distribution, ranging from the palatial stores of the large cities to the large middle and less pretentious class, and finally to the curbstone dealer, is obtained all the money to support this vast industry. This is an army of workers, each one for himself, the welfare of the grower or the wholesale dealer being no more to him than his is to them. Why cannot these divisions of the trade be gotten together? Their interests are mutual. Well planned national or even local campaigns of equal benefit to all, could not fail but be of the greatest advantage.

All dealers should be encouraged to feature and make the most of Valentine's day. In all the leading stores there are men of initiative who are constantly bringing forth new things, bright ideas that count and have their day. If each were prevailed on to do his best to make this coming celebration a floral event, such a general observance could not but be noticed and result in a much greater sale of flowers. If in each community the leaders of the trade would agree to feature the day and make the noise loud enough, the local papers would take it up and print data and illustrations of the latest ideas, if they were furnished them. Appropriate window cards would be displayed by many stores if they were furnished free or at small cost, who would never think of or go to the trouble of getting them out for themselves. Such cards and window stickers, printed in large quantities, could be furnished at low cost to wholesale men or other large dealers for distribution, all of which would have great influence in making this a great floral holiday. The Street Merchant.

Paper by E. J. McCallum read at the January meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club.

This is a subject that a commission man must handle delicately, as he is liable to tramp on the toes of either his consignors or his best customers, and as his business depends entirely upon both he often cannot cite certain instances to prove his contention nor make as positive statements as he would like to. Taking these things into consideration I would like you to consider the following for what it is worth:

To start with, there are three classes of street fakirs, according to the viewpoints of the different classes of florists. First, there is the average street stand which has a small room and a large glass case filled with flowers and covered with cut price signs. Legitimate florists often disdainfully refer to them as "The Greeks," and continuously ask how can they sell at such low prices that make his customers think he is a robber. Secondly, there is the street stand which, in addition, employs boys to sell on the streets and these are looked down on by "The Greek" as badly as the high-class store looks down on him, and he disdainfully refers to these people as "The Jews" and angrily asks the commission man where they get the stock they sell so cheap, and go into a frenzy if one of "The Jews" get too close to his stand. Third, there is the boy who is connected with no stand and sells wherever he can make a sale. In turn both "The Greeks" and "The Jews" disdainfully refer to these free lances as "kikes," and they continuously ask the commission man not to sell them at all, as he hurts their business, and as large, or clean-up buyers of junk, they should be protected.

Besides these people there should be taken into consideration the market gardeners who sell quantities of summer flowers, chrysanthemums and bulbous stock at ridiculously low prices. Thus we see that the seemingly simple subject, "The Fakir," is rather complex. The writer believes that all these people do both harm and good to the true florist. Harm, because there are instances where as a result a florist will get a call down for being a robber, which undoubtedly is bad for the business, and good because they create ultimate customers for the florist. I mean by this, there are thousands of people who do not feel that their love for flowers is enough to overcome the loss of a dollar bill or even a 50-cent piece. Their idea of the value of flowers being the same as yours or mine is, of a small bunch of wild flowers gathered by the country boy and offered for sale at our back door. This class of people will gladly spend 25 cents for a few flowers from the "kike" on the corner and upon taking them home find that they create so much pleasure among the ladies of the household that he mentally resolves to bring home a little happiness more often in the future. A few such purchases convinces him, or her, that their flowers are not as nice as the ones on the stands at a higher price and feels that it would be worth while to spend a little more and get better flowers. He thus becomes a customer of the regular stands, and if anyways well-to-do, probably begins to patronize the legitimate florist where he gets service and art as well as flowers. In any event, if he does not patronize them now, he certainly never would have anyway, and so the florist is not out anything, even if he did not gain anything. The customer of any commodity will always purchase where his taste dictates. Thus one candy buyer will go into Huylers, although he knows he can buy cheaper next door, but he wants what he thinks is best. Another will go into Reyers, thinking they are a little less expensive, although he knows he can buy a little cheaper next door. Another goes into the first candy store he sees, although he knows he can buy cheaper from the Italian peanut stand. The customer of each of these candy dealers is satisfied, and not one store has interfered with the business of the other. Or, furthermore, will we go into a cheap restaurant if we want a good meal? Will we buy a pair of shoes from the curb dealer? Will we stop into the phoney jewelry store for a watch? Will you buy your fruit from the dirty Arab peddler's push cart? So, where will flower buyers buy their flowers?

As for maintenance of high prices regardless of season. Very little explaining is necessary to your customers as to why prices are lower or higher than last time if we only take the trouble to tell them what conditions, such as sunshine, weather, crops, seasons, etc., have to do with the supply. Does the customer question the price of strawberries in March because they are cheap in June?

Now a word for the poor wholesaler who is accused of deliberately conspiring with "The Jew" and "The Greek" to undersell the store man. Nothing is further from the truth. To start with, the grower never forgets to remind the commission man that he must have high prices in order to pay his coal and labor bill. The commission man who ignores this soon finds himself without shippers. That alone prevents the wholesaler from sacrificing prices to anyone. However, Mr. Commission Man receives his flowers in the morning and holds them all for what he thinks a fair price, no matter which class the buyer belongs to. Perhaps he does not clean up that day and is compelled to carry some flowers over until the next day. If so, and the flowers are still in good condition, he tries to get the regular price, but if towards evening he still has them on hand he is willing to sell them to anyone at a reduction. Note that I say anyone, but the only man who will take him up (and I talk from experience) is the street stand. He thus gets his flowers at a reduction. Now, suppose the street stand does not want them, even at a reduction; then the "Jew" is the only one to turn to. By this time the desirable colors, grades, etc., are gone and only the leavings are left. While some of them with a little picking and sorting over, still look fresh, yet they are all old and if this party does not buy them they will have to be dumped. Naturally the price is not much, but it at least gives the grower something. It will be seen from this, that except in rare cases do the street men get fresh flowers, and when they do they pay full price. It would be the height of foolishness to sell the fakir good stock at a low price when there is a chance to sell it to some one else at a higher price. That isn't human nature. Reducing the length of stems as suggested by our previous speaker would not be practical, as the fakir will always pay a better price for a more desirable lot of flowers and perhaps would not touch them at any price if the stems were too short. In roses, where there are five or six grades, that practice would make seconds out of specials, as well as the firsts, and the fakir will pay his different prices for each grade the same as the retailer. Even at that the wholesale man has not time to go over each flower and reduce its length.

Now as to a remedy. I frankly feel that there is none, but I would suggest one thing the retailers could do to remedy this to a great extent and fully believe it is the only partial solution there is. I also firmly believe it would be the cheapest advertising a florist could get, and that is to buy up these flowers during glut periods while they are still good (at a cheap price, of course) and donate them to their customers and would-be customers. Thus a box of a dozen carnations or roses, including delivery expense, would be no more than 15 cents each and could you beat that as an ad?

Harold Joy.

Harold Joy, second son of the late Thomas C. Joy, of the Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn., is a native of that city and has lived there the greater part of his life. He was educated at Montgomery Bell academy, graduating with high honors. From childhood he has been in and around the greenhouses and early took an interest in the growing of plants. Even in boyhood he began to learn the art of floriculture. As he grew older and decided to continue in this work he determined, under the advice of his father, to take a wider field for study, and with this in view he went to Nahant, Mass., where he was with Thos. Roland, having previously spent some time with Denver, Colo., growers.

Some months before his father's sudden demise he returned home and side by side with him superintended the greenhouses. He was, therefore, well prepared and eminently fitted to step into his father's place and take charge of the work. He has been made secretary and general manager of the company, while his brother, Thos. H. Joy, has charge of the store. There are employed at the greenhouses 37 men and the entire plant covers 260,000 feet of glass. Mr. Joy has been growing roses for more than a year, commencing work before his father's death under the training of Godfrey Johnson, an experienced grower, and he is making a specialty of this branch of the work.

Mr. Joy is 25 years of age and was married two years ago to Miss Ethel McAlister of Nashville.

BALTIMORE, MD.—W. J. Halliday, who has been laid up with grippe, is able to attend to business again.

PASSAIC, N. J.—John L. Lunsted is building a new greenhouse, 42x350 feet. This will bring his glass area up to 40,000 square feet, the John C. Moninger Co. supplying the material, while a new No. 6 Kroeschell boiler has been added to the heating plant.

BOSTON, MASS.—At a meeting held at the office of the Waban Rose Conservatories, December 18, a rose growers' association was formed which will have for its object the exchange of views regarding market conditions and the giving of credit information. Among those in attendance were Wm. Elliott, Alex. Montgomery, Wm. McAlpine, Allan Pierce, Neil Boyle, Thomas Roland and P. Donahue.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Morrison, January 4, President Henderson in the chair. W. J. Baumer, Berwyn, Ill., and Thos. Heaven, Benton Harbor, Mich., were elected to membership, and Duncan E. Robertson, who has been away from the city for a number of years, was nominated for membership. The transportation committee presented Indianapolis trip report on the occasion of the annual convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society, to be held in that city, January 31-February 1, full particulars of which will be found elsewhere in this issue.

President Henderson thanked the officers and members for their hearty support during his term of office and bespoke their cordial assistance and co-operation for his successor, President-Elect W. H. Amling, who, on account of his health, was unable to be present. Secretary French and Treasurer Klingsporn presented their annual reports, which make a good showing for the club with 244 members in good standing and a cash balance of $352.61. The receipts of the year amounted to $1,146 and disbursements to $1,552.64. There were 22 applications for membership, two reinstatements and two resignations. The old ledger shows 29 delinquents and the new 39. Vice-President Paul Klingsporn, Secretary Allie Zech and Treasurer Otto H. Amling, elected at last meeting, were then installed, Mr. Klingsporn assuming the chairmanship of the meeting, and the following letter was read from President-Elect Amling:

"It is with deep regret that I am missing this meeting. Although I am getting along nicely and have good chances for an early recovery from my late illness, my physician would not grant my request to let me go to the meeting to-night, but called it unwise and urged me to wait another month. Since the pen is mightier than the sword and the doctor stronger than the patient, I must submit to his ruling. However, if I can not be with you in person I am with you in spirit and wish the club as such and each member individually good health and a very happy and prosperous New Year and an enjoyable time for the evening. I hope that all the rest of the officers elected for the coming year come well prepared with a good long speech that you will not miss the chairman. Especially our new secretary, who is world renowned for his talent in speaking, has something up his sleeve and is loaded to the brim. Get it out of him. And I know that the Vice-President-Elect with his pleasant face and melodious, touching voice, will do such credit to the chair that the club will be more than pleased. It being the duty of the chairman to appoint certain standing committees I would beg the following gentlemen to serve for the year—Good-of-the-Club, George Asmus, Guy French and Fred Lautenschlager; Sports and Pastimes, Peter Olsem, Fred Price and Joe Einweck; Transportation, Michael Barker; Sergeant-at-Arms, Michael Fink. Hoping to be able to meet you all personally at the February meeting, I am, very truly yours."

There was an interesting discussion on publicity in which Samuel Seligman suggested the use of posterettes for St. Valentine's Day. Peter Pearson favored signs on florists' delivery wagons and E. A. Ollinger and others spoke for street car advertisements. Frank Krause, a visitor, however, suggested posterettes and these met with such approval that a committee consisting of Fred Lautenschlager, George Asmus and Michael Barker was appointed to get out a supply well in advance of this date to give them a trial. Full details of this posterette work already outlined by the committee will be found elsewhere in this issue.

The Wm. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y., staged a fine vase of the new Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late White, which attracted much attention.

There were some fine roses on exhibition from the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia, grown by F. Stielow, Niles Center, and Killarney Brilliant and Milady, grown at the Wellworth Farm Greenhouses, Downer's Grove; also Golden Spur narcissus, grown by August Jurgens.

Iles Cole, of Springfield, who was a visitor, spoke of the meager prizes offered in the professional classes at the state fair and urged that some action be taken to improve this condition.

August Jurgens, who was still in the hospital, sent his regrets in being unable to attend the meeting.

New York Florists' Club.

The monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held on the night of January 8, with a large attendance. The officers-elect were installed. In turning over the gavel to President Stumpp the retiring president, Henry Weston, made an appropriate speech, thanking the members for the loyal support he had received during his term of office. His remarks were applauded, President Stumpp made a clever address. He will work heartily for the welfare of the club and hopes that every member will "do his bit" during the coming year. Vice-President Fieser made interesting remarks and pledged himself to do his share for the good of the club. Roman J. Irwin, John Canning and Alfred Kottmiller, trustees, were introduced and made appropriate remarks, as did Secretary Young and Treasurer Rickards.

President Stumpp appointed committees as follows: Legislation—W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., chairman; James McHutchison and F. R. Pierson. Essay—Leonard Barron, J. Harrison Dick and L. W. C. Tuthill. Exhibition—Charles J., exhibited seedling carnation No. 22, scarlet; highly commended. Guttman & Raynor, Inc., New York, staged pink rose, September Morn, sport of Prima Donna, lighter shade; highly commended. P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y., exhibited hyacinths; vote of thanks.

Acknowledgments were received from two members who are sick, thanking the club for its interest, and stating that they are improving.

OMAHA, NEB. — Hess & Swoboda's 1916 Christmas trade was 16 per cent greater than a year ago, with prices about as usual. The cut-flower supply was plentiful and of good quality, with the exception of bulbous stock, which was poor. Plants were more popular than a year ago, and while azaleas were not up to standard, fine cyclamens, poinsettias and baskets sold well. Owing to cold weather many plants were frozen in delivery. Ten per cent more business could have been done, but facilities to handle the trade were limited.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The Saltford Flower Shop reports a most satisfactory Christmas trade. Prices were about the same as last year, except in the case of roses and carnations, which sold at better prices. The quality of stock was very good, especially in sweet peas and calendulas. Owing to a lack of supply in azaleas the plant department did not make as good a showing as usual. There was a decided increase in the number of Florist Telegraph Delivery orders.

CINCINNATI, O.—O. H. Hoffmeister reports little difference in either volume of business or prices in comparing the Christmas trade of 1916 with that of the corresponding period a year ago. Roses and carnations were plentiful but violets were very scarce. Narcissi were in good supply and the demand was excellent. The quality of stock was better than a year ago. All colored flowers sold well and any sort of flowering plant found a ready buyer.

QUINCY, ILL.—Gentemann Bros., in comparing 1916 Christmas sales with those of a year ago, report a 20 per cent increase at normal prices. Bulbous stock was plentiful, but the demand was not very heavy. Roses and carnations in the red varieties showed a marked increase in popularity, as did violets, and all were far short of requirements. Flowering plants sold especially well.

CANAL DOVER, O.—C. Betscher reports a sellout in all lines, and while prices were no higher than a year ago, his sales total shows a substantial increase over that of the 1915 period. In bulbous flowers, cut narcissi sold fairly well. In blooming plants there was a better demand than a year ago and customers seemed easier to please.

TAMPA, FLA.—A very satisfactory Christmas trade—far better than in former years—both in plants and cut flowers at usual prices, is the report of the Tampa Floral Co.

Knight, H. C. Riedell and Richard Hughes. House—Philip Kessler, chairman; A. Buckholtz and Alex. Donaldson. Annual Dinner—A. L. Miller, chairman; Chas. Schenck, Emil Schloss, Thos. B. DeForest and John G. Esler. Awards—P. W. Popp, chairman; J. A. Manda, Henry Weston, Chas. H. Brown, Julius Roehrs, Percy Rigby and W. H. Duckham. Committee on Special Awards for the Club—John Canning, W. R. Cobb, Julius Roehrs and W. H. Siebrecht, Sr. An outing committee will be appointed later.

A. L. Miller suggested the appointment of a committee to act on the work pertaining to the convention of the Society of American Florists, which will be held in this city, August 21-24. F. R. Pierson and Prof. E. A. White of Cornell University, were appointed delegates to the Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs, which meets in Ithaca, N. Y., February 14. Prof. White is a member of the New York Florists' Club. A flower show committee will be appointed later. The present flower show committee reported progress.

A large number of proposals for membership were received. The following were elected members: Carl C. Reck, Bridgeport, Conn.; L. E. Dupuy, Whitestone, N. Y.; A. Van Praag, 4 West 40th street, New York; Arthur Marshall Clarke, 2139 Broadway, New York.

The retiring officers were tendered a hearty vote of thanks. Treasurer Rickards read his report, showing that the club has over $14,000 in the treasury. Notice was given of a meeting and exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York at the American Museum of Natural History, January 13. The dinner committee will report later on the date for the annual dinner, which is likely to be held at the time of the spring show.

H. Fred Byxbee, Norwalk, Conn., exhibited two vases of daphne; cultural certificate. G. F. Neipp, Chatham, N.

Christmas Trade Reports.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Samuel Murray reports a substantial increase in the volume of Christmas trade for the 1916 period as compared with that of a year ago. Prices were better and the supply equal to the demand with the exception of home-grown violets. Stock in general was of good quality with the possible exception of American Beauty roses, which were soft. Plants were in greater demand than a year ago and there was an increased call for orchid corsages. The weather was ideal, making delivery easy.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—Edward Lortz reports an increase of about 15 per cent in Christmas trade as compared with that of 1915. Cut flowers were short of demand. There was an increase in the demand for flowering plants.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—Fred E. Avery reports Christmas sales this year somewhat better than in 1915, with no increase in prices. Roses and violets were plentiful but carnations were short of the demand, shipments being delayed by a storm. In the plant section, the flowering sorts had the lead. Money was plentiful and people spent more freely than in several years past.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—S. A. Anderson reports increased business and better prices for the holiday season just passed as compared with that of a year ago. Stock was plentiful and excellent in quality. There was an increased demand for plants and good flowers and plants specially trimmed for the season sold especially well.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Gude Bros. Co. reports an exceptionally good demand during the 1916 Christmas period, everything from fern dishes to large palms finding ready sale. Sales were about 15 per cent greater than last year and prices somewhat higher with a plentiful supply to meet a heavy call for high grade stock.

HAVERHILL, MASS.—W. F. Abrams & Son report 1916 Christmas sales 25 per cent greater in money value than those of a year ago. Prices advanced in about the same ratio. The cut flower supply was limited and bulbous varieties enjoyed a good call in consequence. In plants, primroses, cyclamens and begonias sold nearly twice as well as last year.

PEORIA, ILL.—Volume of business and prices were about on a par with the corresponding period in 1915 is the report of B. Juerjens. The cut-flower supply was limited and in consequence bulbous varieties found ready buyers. Carnations and roses were of better quality than last year. Everything sold well with a splendid demand for made-up baskets.

GREELEY, COLO.—With a demand for cut flowers 50 per cent greater than the supply, and a greater call for plants than in previous years, the Gardner Floral Co. estimates its holiday sales for 1916 about equal to those of the corresponding period last year. Prices and quality of stock were about as usual.

Rochester Florists' Association.

A meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held in Musician's hall, January 8, and after a short business session the newly elected officers were installed as follows: H. B. Stringer, president; Fred Thomann, vice-president; Geo. T. Boucher, treasurer; Ambrose H. Secker, secretary. Charles Vick, the retiring president, was presented with a handsome large cut glass vase filled with Sunburst and Francis Scott Key roses. The newly elected trustees are John Dunbar, A. H. Salter and Hugo Teute. Several new applications for membership were voted upon.

Professor E. A. White, of Cornell University, extended an invitation to the members of the association to attend the meeting and exhibition of the New York State Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs to be held at Ithaca, February 14-17. No action was taken at this time, however.

A "jolly sing," in which all participated, was arranged for the last half of the meeting and solos were rendered by Geo. T. Boucher, Horace J. Head and Richard Teute.

Boston.DEMAND QUIET BUT PRICES FIRM.

Although business during the past week has been rather quiet, the general shortage of stock has kept the prices up on nearly all lines. Carnations and roses are the leading items and they have been selling well all week, the former at $5 and $6 per 100, the latter moving at prices varying from four cents to 16 cents. The carnation supply is very short. Violets are also being received in limited numbers and find ready buyers at $1 per 100. Bulbous flowers are seen, and being considered at this time in the class of novelties meet with ready sale. Irises are arriving in small quantities and are quoted at $3 per dozen. Mignonette is more plentiful and does not move as well as in the past at this season of the year. The plant trade is not exceptionally good, although sales are as good as can be expected. Azaleas, begonias and primulas are the most plentiful.

NOTES.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, Mass., narrowly escaped death, January 6, when he fell down the stairway at the Thos. J. Gray Co.'s store, 32 South Market street. He was found at the foot of the stairs by his son, Robert, after the store was closed. His right shoulder was severely hurt and he received internal injuries, the extent of which are not as yet known.

One of the finest vases of carnations ever seen in this market is that of the new variety, Laddie, grown by S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass. Each flower measured four inches in diameter and were almost perfect in shape. He is also cutting some very fine Rosalia and Nancy.

John Lynch, Norris Comley's new salesman, is receiving better carnations than have ever before been seen at this establishment. The violets seen here are also of the first quality. Roses are coming better, some fine Stanley and American Beauty being in evidence.

A. S. McDonald, dealer in greens and berries, will be compelled to move from his present location, 45 Temple place, shortly, as the building is to be remodeled. He will try and secure a location nearer the wholesale flower growers' center, Winthrop square.

Philip L. Carbone is getting his store back into better condition than ever, following the destructive fire which destroyed much of his stock of glassware and antiques before Christmas. A fine display of French iris was noticed in his windows, January 6.

Walter Holden of the Co-operative Flower Market, is receiving a fine lot of Boston ferns from Arthur Coolidge, of Cambridge. F. L. W.

Pittsburgh, Pa.MARKET CONDITIONS AGAIN NORMAL.

The cut flower market is now back to normal; no great rush and about enough stock to meet the demand. Roses are not plentiful and still hold up in price, the best specials selling at $12 per 100. American Beauties are not moving very fast and some have been sold very cheap. Carnations are good and hold to $3 per 100. Paper Whites and lilies are quoted at fair prices. Some very good single violets are seen in this market, and are selling well. It has been some time since single violets have been shipped here. Greens are plentiful. Almost all the dealers have had a good rest and are now taking things a little easy.

CLUB MEETING.

Probably the most interesting meeting of the florists' club that has ever taken place, from the viewpoint of the retailers, was the regular meeting held January 2. The subject under discussion was "The Street Fakir." Henry Meuschke had read a paper on this subject at the previous meeting, which was to be answered by E. J. McCallum. Upon this paper being read, the president asked for remarks from those present. Intense interest was created in the dramatic speech of A. Krongold, introduced as the "King of the Street Fakirs," and who defended his profession in a vigorous style. Some fine specimens of primulas and hyacinths were shown by M. Leeck of New Brighton and Carl Becker. Nomination of officers for 1917 also took place, the election to be held next month. The special committee appointed to investigate the possibilities of a flower show to be held in Pittsburgh next fall reported adversely and the project was given up and all agreed to turn in and give all help possible to the Sewickley Florists' Club show to be held next fall. It was also proposed that Pittsburgh try and secure the 1918 meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America and hold a big flower show in connection therewith. This is a movement that should enlist the support of every florist in western Pennsylvania.

NOTES.

The Haymen Greenhouse Co. of Clarksburg, had a wonderful business at Christmas time and had to call on other cities for stock to supply their trade. They are sending out a very neat calendar, which is worthy of mention.

Mrs. E. A. Williams is having her share of decorating this winter and keeps the entire force working night and day.

Wm. Loew has been on the sick list since the first of the year, but is now able to be around with the help of a cane.

E. J. McCallum, who has been living in the city since November 1 has returned to his home at Allison Park.

Fred Burki left January 3 for an extended trip to Florida and the Isle of Pines.

Visitor: Milton Alexander, representing Lion & Co., New York. M.

Cleveland.NEW YEAR OPENS WITH GOOD BUSINESS.

Business during the first week of the new year has been quite satisfactory. The only bad feature was the absence of enough short roses for funeral work; of the longer grades, the supply was a trifle better, but crops in roses are "off" generally, and will be for a few days longer. A few good Rhea Reid, Mme. Pirrie and Russell arrive daily. American Beauties are short of requirements. Carnations are in good supply and are bringing a fair price; the quality of the stock has improved considerably. Calla lilies meet with a good demand. Easter lilies are scarce. Paper White narcissus are quite plentiful. Stevias are just about equal to the demand. A limited amount of snapdragons arrive and clean up quickly. A few calendulas are on the market, also a limited number of sweet peas. Daffodil are making their appearance. Violets are good stock and the quality is fine. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

Visitors: Stephen Green, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co.; Julius Dillhoff, of Schloss Bros., both of New York.

At the florists' club meeting Monday, January 8, John Van Leenwen, of Sossenheim, Holland, spoke on "Bulbs."

Al Barber, of the Jones-Russell Co., has been ill in bed with a severe cold, contracted during the holiday rush.

C. F. B.

Cincinnati.HEAVY SUPPLY; PRICES VERY LOW.

The supply of stock in this market at present is far in excess of all needs, and although the quality in general is excellent, prices have dropped to a very low level. Roses are plentiful and especially fine Killarney, White Killarney, Russell and Ophelia, may be had. Fine American Beauties are also coming into the market every day. Carnations are in good supply and the receipts of Easter lilies, callas and rubrums are large enough to care for all immediate demands. The receipts of narcissi are heavy. Sweet peas have become plentiful. Other offerings include orchids, lily of the valley, violets, forget-me-nots, wall flowers, Roman hyacinths, snapdragons and primroses.

NOTES.

P. J. Olinger spent several days last week at his range at New Castle, Ind. David E. Wooley, his representative, started January 9 on a trip through northern Ohio and Indiana.

Ray Reinstatler, of G. Brunner's Sons force, has the sympathy of his many friends in his bereavement in the death of his one-year-old son, which occurred recently.

At the January meeting of the florists' society, only routine business was transacted.

C. E. Critchell has been receiving some excellent pussy willows.

Rochester, N. Y.STEADY DEMAND FOLLOWS HOLIDAY RUSH.

Business since the holidays has held up remarkably well, parties, balls and receptions having caused a good demand for stock. Plants are rather scarce as practically everything was cleaned up during the Christmas rush. A complete change has taken place in the wholesale flower market. Chrysanthemums have gone and the spring flowers, such as daffodils, narcissi, stevias, marguerites, heliotropes, etc., have taken their place. Pans of Roman hyacinths and tulips are now coming in. Roses are still scarce as are carnations. A few sunny days will bring an abundance of both, however. The call for funeral work has been heavy during the past week.

NOTES.

J. B. Keller Sons had a very attractive window of spring flowers in birch bark boxes last week, daffodils, tulips, hyacinths, ferns and pussy willows being grouped together. Inside the store was a charming luncheon table arrangement. This firm had the decorations for the Corey-Harris wedding, a very elaborate affair.

Mrs. E. C. Armbrust has returned from the east, where she spent the holidays with relatives.

Salter Bros. have a very attractive display in the windows of their East Main street store.

The fruit growers' convention held here January 3-6 attracted many visitors to this city.

Edwin C. Kaelber has added a handsome delivery car to his service.

CHESTER.

Providence, R. I.SHORT SUPPLY BRINGS ADVANCED PRICES.

Business during the past week was exceptionally good; funeral work was in good demand and flower sales steady. Stock in all lines is in limited supply and prices have advanced. Roses and carnations as well as some bulbous stock are commanding good figures. New Year's trade was good, with cut flower sales better than a year ago.

Joseph Kopelman is on the sick list, suffering with a severe cold.

H. A. T.

Milwaukee.MARKET OVERSTOCKED; PRICES WEAK.

From all appearances quite a lot of flowers which were expected from the growers during the holidays, but which were held back by the extremely cold weather, are now arriving in heavy supply. While there is an abundance of funeral work, it is about the only branch of the business that is showing any activity, and with shipping trade none too brisk, the supply of cut stock during the last week was in excess of the demand and prices dropped a notch in most lines. This was not only the case with roses and carnations but also with violets, both single and double, sweet peas and Paper White narcissi. The price of orchids is about one-half that asked a fortnight ago. There is still plenty of stevia to supply all demands.

CLUB MEETING.

The florists' club meeting held January 4, certainly must have been most gratifying to our new president, Wm. A. Kennedy. The attendance was excellent and many good points of trade interest came up for discussion, which were handled in a businesslike way and ought to prove a benefit to all in the trade. C. C. Pollworth, who installed the new officers for the coming year, made a neat job of it. Resolutions for best wishes and a speedy recovery were sent to Fred Holton, who is still confined to his home with inflammatory rheumatism, and who seldom misses a meeting.

NOTES.

Otto Sylvester, Jr., of Oconomowoc, Wis., who was a visitor the past week, says the coal proposition with Otto Sylvester & Sons was very acute at one time, as there was no coal to be had locally, and less from outside dealers.

Thursday, January 11, is the day Roy Currie will be united in marriage to Miss H. Jeuss, formerly employed in the office of the Holton & Hunkel Co. We herewith extend our best wishes for a bright and happy future.

Our friend, Alfred Schiller, who, underwent an operation two weeks before Christmas, is still at St. Joseph's hospital. Latest reports are that he is getting along nicely.

H. E. Roff, of Baraboo, Wis., who is on the fire commission in his home town, is attending the local auto show, looking up fire fighting auto apparatus.

Decorations at the auto show did not benefit any one in the trade locally this year; still, most of the florists have some kind of auto.

During the night of January 1, burglars entered the store of the Baumgarten Floral Co., getting away with only $18 in cash.

E. O.

Kansas City, Mo.SUPPLY AMPLE AND QUALITY GOOD.

Stock has been arriving in quantities sufficient to meet all demand and the quality holds up well. Roses in all varieties are still high in price, but carnations are very good and prices are reasonable, occasioned by a rather heavy supply. Bulbous stock, such as Paper White and yellow narcissi is in good supply and Dutch hyacinths are more plentiful with the Romans making their first appearance. Lilies are arriving in larger quantities and are first-class stock. Violets, orchids, sweet peas, lily of the valley and snapdragons make up the miscellaneous offerings. Made up baskets and pot plants continue to sell well.

NOTES.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., under the management of Mrs.

Lamb has started the new year at a good pace. The cut flower trade is holding up fine. Some very good azaleas, cyclamens, begonias and Whitmani ferns are to be seen here.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports business for 1916 showed an increase of about 17½ per cent over that of the preceding year. With the exception of December every month showed a gain. Business since the first of the year has been good.

H. Kusik & Co. report a continuance of good business, with an exceptionally strong demand for wire work. They have a good supply of roses, local carnations, white and yellow narcissi, eastern lilies and miscellaneous stock.

T. J. Noll & Co. report a specially good wholesale trade, with all stock moving fast. Offerings here include roses, carnations, lily of the valley, stevia, sweet peas, violets and the first Romans of the season.

Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. is cutting exceptionally good Shawyer and Ophelia roses; also a better supply of carnations and sweet peas. Trade in general during the past week has been excellent.

W. J. Barnes had the decorations last week for the white goods sale at Emery Bird & Thayer's store. Business in all lines is reported good, with a splendid call for pot plants.

Everything is moving nicely at Arthur Newell's. Designs for funerals, hospital flowers, corsages and wedding arrangements help in the total sales.

Manager Ellsworth of the Rosery reports good business in all lines during the past week. Bulbous stock is in good supply and is popular.

The Central Floral Co., a new establishment, is located at Eleventh and Walnut streets, the stand formerly occupied by Miss Roberts.

Chas. Biederman & Son report a big increase in the volume of their holiday business as compared with that of a year ago.

J. B. Masson, of Kansas City, Kan., reports a cleanup on stock during the holidays, with good trade since the first of the year.

E. J. B.

Washington, D. C.SOCIAL FUNCTIONS MAKE GOOD BUSINESS.

Business continues good after the holiday rush. The social season has started and the leaders in the smart set seem to be trying to make up for lost time, and since the beginning of the new year it has been one continuous round of luncheons, teas and dinners, and practically everyone in the local trade has been getting his share of the work. The supply of stock is normal.

NOTES.

Geo. Lavalie is now showing one of the finest calendulas ever seen in this city. It is of the cactus variety, the flowers measuring from 3½ inches to 4½ inches across. He imported the seed from Europe some time ago. He will be able to put it on the market next season. He also has some fine lupines in all colors which find ready sale.

J. H. Small & Sons have been kept very busy with decorations for receptions and dinners.

G. C. D.

Windler Wholesale Floral Co. Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., St. Louis, Mo., held January 2, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Frank A. Windler, president; E. E. Windler, vice-president; A. W. Gumz, secretary-treasurer.

OBITUARY.Richard J. Donavan.

Richard J. Donavan, better known to the trade as Dick Donavan, one of the pioneer florists of Chicago, died at the Presbyterian hospital, that city, January 3. Mr. Donavan was prominent in the local trade in the seventies. Born in Cork, Ireland, March 14, 1848, he went to England when young and was employed for a time in London nurseries. Coming to the United States in 1871 he located at Philadelphia and later moved to Chicago, where he was first employed in the Rosehill cemetery. In 1879, he started a commercial establishment on Ravenswood avenue, near the cemetery, where he built up a prosperous trade in addition to selling the product of the McCormick estate at Lake Forest, roses, etc., on commission. Disposing of the Ravenswood establishment, he moved to Granville avenue, near Clark street, where he carried on business for a number of years. He devoted considerable time to politics and served as an officer of the circuit court, being in his latter days engaged in the West Side parks. When operating as a commercial florist, Mr. Donavan was considered one of the most successful growers of violets in the west.

Mrs. Kate Donavan survives, also five children, Mrs. R. Perkins, Mary, Alice, Edward and Robert. The funeral was held January 5, with interment in Calvary cemetery. Thos. E. Wallis, Adam Zender, Andrew Miller and Henry Hansen were honorary pallbearers.

Mrs. Anna Theresa Siebold.

Mrs. Anna Theresa Siebold, wife of Julius P. Siebold, well known florist of Lancaster, Pa., died January 2 from pneumonia, following an illness of five days, aged 51 years.

Mrs. Siebold was born in Germany in 1866 and came to America with her father when 15 years of age and lived for a number of years in Missouri, where she met her husband. In 1888, three years after their marriage, they moved to Lancaster, where she has resided ever since. Mr. Siebold engaged in the growing of flowers shortly after coming to Pennsylvania, and with the aid of his wife established an extensive shipping business, in which she will be greatly missed by all who knew her. Besides her husband, she is survived by one son, Frank, and several brothers and sisters in Germany. She was a member of the Advent Lutheran church and a conscientious worker in all of its activities. Funeral services were held from the church and interment was in Riverview Burial Park. The Lancaster Florists' Club attended the funeral and sent an emblem expressive of its respect and sympathy.

ST. CATHERINES, ONT.—Robert L. Dunn has opened a handsome retail store in connection with his greenhouse at 104 Queenston street.

BROCKVILLE, ONT.—Walter H. Edwards reports business has been entirely satisfactory with a good holiday demand to round out the year.

ALEXANDRIA, VA.—The Dunbar Floral Co. suffered a loss of about $1,000 December 22, when a 70-foot brick smokestack blew over, wrecking the ends of two houses.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed by John W. Cassidy, florist, 237 South Richardson avenue. Assets are listed at $3,336; liabilities, $4,031.40.

DISASTROUS fires in greenhouse establishments have been unusually numerous the past two weeks, showing that extra care is necessary during the holiday season.

American Gladiolus Society.

Gladiolus Prosperity is offered for registration by Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y. If no objections are filed with the committee, requiring the withdrawal of the name, the registration will become complete January 30, 1917. The following is a description:

The plant is tall, most striking, and attractive. Its massive proportions, broad, heavy foliage of a rich green, erect and vigorous habit of growth, give evidence of a strong constitution. Flowers are large. Color is a bright rose, shading to madder lake, except the last segment, which has a cham-chois-yellow base. Anthers violet, styles white. Unsurpassed as a keeper.

A. C. BEAL, chairman.

THE famous London exhibition hall of the Royal Horticultural Society of England has been taken over by the military authorities for the use of troops. The shows for the time being will be held at the Drill hall, Buckingham Gate, where they were formerly held, but the offices of the society will be maintained as heretofore at Vincent square.

Nebraska Meeting Next Week.

The joint meeting of the florists of Western Iowa, Missouri and Nebraska in conjunction with the Nebraska State Horticultural Society, will be held at Lincoln, January 15-17, and gives promise of being an interesting one. With the increasing cost of labor and material, both of which are becoming a serious problem in all branches of the trade, the meeting offers a field for discussion that should bring forth an exceptionally good attendance and an exchange of views on the subjects of commissions to undertakers and others, credits, collections, increased costs, coal shortage and other matters which should prove of great value.

J. J. H.

Posterette Publicity.

The posterette publicity campaign inaugurated by the Chicago Florists' Club last week promises good results. It is proposed to prepare and distribute suitable posterettes advertising the various important flower days, beginning with St. Valentine's day. The posterette for this day is now in preparation and will be ready next week. If this meets with success similar posterettes will be issued for Easter, Mothers' day, Memorial day, Thanksgiving and Christmas. These posterettes are intended for use on the face of all bills, statements, letters and packages sent out by those who wish to use this form of advertising. The posterettes will be sold at a very low price in lots to suit purchasers and any profit made on their sale will be used in the preparation of similar advertising matter. In this way every florist can promote his own business to such extent as he may wish to invest in the posterette. This work is in charge of a committee consisting of Fred Lautenschlager, chairman; George Asmus and Michael Barker.

The St. Valentine's day posterette will show a red heart with the words "Let Your Valentine Be Flowers" in attractive lettering. Any florist or others in any part of the country desiring to use these posterettes for St. Valentine's day should communicate with Fred Lautenschlager, 440 West Erie street, Chicago, who will mail samples and prices.

An enlarged form of the St. Valentine's day posterette is also in preparation for use in store windows, on delivery wagons, etc. To insure the best results the use of the St. Valentine's day posterette should be started without delay.

Chicago to Indianapolis.

CARNATION MEETING AND EXHIBITION.

For the annual convention of the American Carnation Society to be held at Indianapolis, Ind., January 31 and February 1, the Monon Route has been selected as the shortest and most convenient line for the Chicago party. The one-way fare between Chicago and Indianapolis is $4.60 and the party fare for 10 or more, $4.14 each. Lower berths, $2; upper berths, $1.60.

The night train leaving the Dearborn station, Polk and Dearborn streets, Tuesday, January 30, at 11:40 p. m., due in Indianapolis 4:30 a. m., has been chosen by the Florists' Club as the convention train for its members and others wishing to join the party. Berths on the night train are ready at 10 o'clock and can be occupied until 7:30 a. m. the next morning.

Reservations should be made early to secure the party rate by writing or telephoning Herbert Wiley, General Agent Passenger Department, 104 South Clark street, Chicago. Telephone Harrison 3309.

For those who wish to reach Indianapolis earlier the Monon Route has an evening train, leaving the Dearborn station Tuesday, January 30, at 5:30 p. m., due in Indianapolis at 10:30 the same night.

American Rose Society.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society met in Philadelphia, Pa., in connection with the local committee for the annual exhibition to be held in that city March 20-23, 1917. A resolution was passed to call for 50 per cent of the guarantee fund to be paid to the order of the American Rose Society on or before February 1, 1917. Everything pertaining to the coming exhibition seemed to be moving along nicely towards its success. The preliminary schedule of prizes was adopted and will be issued without delay.

Application for the registration of a new rose was made by John H. Dunlop, Richmond Hill, Ont., as follows:

Mrs. Henry Winnett. Parentage—Russell x Shawyer. Color, bright red, about shade of Richmond. Large full flower, solid color, foliage ample. Deliciously fragrant, combining keeping qualities of Russell with the freedom of Shawyer. Form good, petals well reflexed and of solid texture.

Mr. Dunlop, in presenting this rose, said: "I am proud to be the first Canadian grower to have the honor of entering a seedling of such sterling merit, as I have had a number of visitors both from the United States and different parts of Ontario, and all agree as to its quality."

A resolution of regret was passed on the death of W. C. Barry, ex-mayor of Rochester, N. Y., who was one of the earliest supporters of the American Rose Society, and was held in esteem by every one who knew him as a man of fine character.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Indianapolis Hotels.

In view of the fact that the convention of the hardware dealers will be held in Indianapolis on the same dates as that of the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society, namely, January 31-February 1, 1917, it has been deemed advisable by the reception committee to have rates of Indianapolis hotels published so that reservations may be made in due time. There are plenty of good hotel accommodations in Indianapolis included in the following list:

Grand hotel—Rooms, $1 up; with bath, $1.50 up.

Washington hotel—Rooms with bath, $1.50, $2, $2.50 and $3.

Claypool hotel—Single room, $1.50; with bath, $2.

Severin hotel — Room with shower bath, $1.50; with tub bath, $2 to $3.50 (European plan).

STOCK SCARCE AND PRICES HIGH.

Never before has there been such a call for flowers for decorations following the holiday season, but stock is scarce and prices are high. Some splendid Ophelia roses are being received from San Francisco while from the local ranges there are excellent Prima Donna, September Morn and Ophelia. Prices are high, however, and the same holds good for carnations. A few days of warm weather will, however, bring in the bulbous stock and the market will be relieved. Some superb Pink Supreme carnations are being offered.

NOTES.

Wright's Flower Shop is always a busy place. They have had considerable funeral work in addition to orders for bouquets and arranged some special decorations for the rose tournament at Pasadena. A fine supply of roses and orchids was noteworthy at this establishment.

Wolfskill Bros. & Morris Goldenson have been busy recently with funeral orders. One design recently arranged by them was a motorcycle in flowers for the funeral of an officer of the motor squad. It was cleverly done and attracted much attention.

O. C. Saakes reports a brisk trade at the opening of the new year. He had several large orders for decorations. As usual he has a fine stock of roses, especially September Morn, and is featuring Pink Supreme carnations.

A heavy New Years' business just about cleaned out the supply at Howard & Smith's. It keeps them hustling these busy days to secure sufficient cut flower stock for their requirements but they are well supplied with good plants.

The Redondo Floral Co. reports a scarcity of stock, but Scotch heather which they have used in quantity has been a great help in decorations and funeral work. The rose stock here is fine.

Paul J. Howard is feeling the effects of the business revival at his establishment. Aside from the landscape department he is carrying a full line of decorative plants, many of rare varieties.

J. W. Wolters is rushing the season with outdoor freesias and ranunculus, also some almond blossoms. Some extra fine Willowmere roses were seen here.

Seki Bros. & Co. have a good supply of carnations from their own houses which are bringing high prices. G. H. H.

Vaughan's Seed Store, 43 Barclay Street, NEW YORK. 31-33 W. Randolph St., Chicago

Oklahoma City.

EXCELLENT NEW YEAR'S TRADE.

Retailers say that business is very good with plenty of stock to meet all demands. Flowering plants are very numerous, especially azaleas. New Year's day is not considered much of a holiday in this city so far as celebrations go, but the florists had quite a little extra trade in the form of gift baskets and boxes of loose flowers. The demise of several prominent citizens in near-by towns called for some large funeral orders recently.

At the opening session of the legislature which took place January 2 in the new state capitol building, the Stiles Co. furnished a large basket of roses which was placed on the desk of the president of the senate, and a basket of carnations for the desk of the speaker of the lower house.

Furrow and Co. are sending in a nice line of flowering plants from their range at Guthrie. S. S. B.

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo.—Pollard & Hammond have opened a retail flower shop here.

A VERY QUIET WEEK.

Trade was very quiet last week, and while there was not any great supply of stock offered, prices were lower than they have been for some time, especially carnations, which have not been in any too good a demand all season. American Beauty roses are having a good call and command high prices considering the general market conditions and clean up better than any other item. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are in large supply and are having a fairly good call, but prices might be a whole lot better. Roses in general are plentiful enough to supply the demand including White Killarney, which is meeting with good sale. Carnations especially are in extra large supply and probably never sold at such cheap prices in January as they did last week. Sweet peas are seen in large quantities and very choice stock is obtainable in this line at very reasonable and much lower figures. Orchids seem to be in large enough supply to meet the demand and hold up well in price. Gardenias are having their usual good call and the same holds true for lily of the valley. Lilies are seen in larger numbers and the same applies to callas. Violets, both home-grown and single, are more numerous and have dropped considerably in price. White and yellow narcissi are to be had in quantity at low figures which have prevailed practically all through the season. Jonquils, tulips, snapdragons, daisies, daffodils, Romans, freesis, mignonette, white, pink and red bouvardia, purple stocks, irises, sweet allysum, stevia, calendulas and a limited supply of "hate-to-leave-you" pompons and chrysanthemums are included in the many offerings. Greens of all kinds are in good supply and while at times one or two items are short there is nearly always enough of everything available to fill all the immediate orders. Trade at this writing, Wednesday, January 10, is much better and if conditions continue to improve a sudden shortening up of stock in some lines may be expected. The shipping trade is showing the most improvement, which is helping conditions considerably, for the out-of-town demand last week was the quietest that it has been for several months.

NOTES.

Fred Breitmeier, of the Breitmeier Floral Co., Mt. Clemens, Mich., was here this week with his new Rose Pink Ophelia, which looks good to all the growers who had the pleasure of inspecting it. This variety will be disseminated in 1918 and possibly next spring for so many growers are so anxious to secure some of the stock that it will be pretty hard for Mr. Breitmeier to refuse them. Every rose grower will do well to investigate this variety, for it is a great producer and one of the prettiest, pleasing pink roses that one ever had the pleasure to come across. A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., had a vase of this same rose on display at his firm's store during Christmas week, when it attracted much favorable attention.

Herman W. Rogers, who has been connected with Weiland & Risch for the past 12 years and with the local trade since 1889, is leaving for Detroit, his native city, and will probably start in business on his own account at an early date. Mr. Rogers is one of the best all around storemen in this vicinity and has a host of friends in the trade here as well as elsewhere and carries with him the best wishes of all.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting heavily in roses and are offering some particularly fine Ophelia and Mrs. Chas. Russell. Carnations are also seen in large supply at this establishment and a good demand is reported for the variety Belle Washburn.

It is rumored that one of the young men employed in the A. L. Randall Co.'s cut flower department is going to join the ranks of the benedicts in the very near future. Not mentioning any names, it is understood his initials are the fifteenth and seventh letters of the alphabet.

Mrs. Frances Stollery, 5063 Glenwood avenue, part owner of the Lincoln Floral Co., 3154 Lincoln avenue, wife of Frederick Stollery, of Stollery Bros., well-known Wilson avenue florists, was seriously injured, and Mrs. Jane Folsom Vail, her sister, was killed in a spectacular collision at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, January 9, between an automobile and a street car at Wellington avenue and Broadway. Another party was killed, three other people were injured in the accident all of whom were in the auto when the accident occurred, with the exception of one. Mrs. Stollery and her sister were leaving the florist shop for home when a southbound car speeding down Broadway struck the auto, which was going east on Wellington avenue. The car struck the auto with an impact so terrific that the machine was hurled across the street and into the window of a millinery shop. The plate glass window was smashed, sending a shower of glass into the street car and inflicting minor injuries to several of the passengers. Mrs. Stollery and her sister were taken to the Chicago Union hospital, where Mrs. Vail died shortly after. Mrs. Stollery will recover, according to the physicians.

Wietor Bros. are supplying their trade with a fancy grade of American Beauty roses, which are none too plentiful in this market at present. N. J. Wietor reports that the early demand has already started in for American Beauty rose bushes for spring delivery. They fill a large number of orders each year for this stock and their firm is one of the few in this vicinity that still grow this rose on a large scale.

Wallace H. Eiss, secretary of the Wm. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y., called on the trade here this week. He

H. Van Gelder, of Percy Jones', reports that his bronze galax advertisement, which appeared in a recent issue of this paper, brought orders from every section of the country, including California, and enabled him to dispose of a large quantity at an early hour. Mr. Van Gelder, who is interested in five other lines, is devoting more time to his wholesale florist business and finds that the more he mingles with the dealers the better he knows them and says that they are as fine a class of people as he would care to do business with.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is showing a fine line of roses in all the new and best standard varieties in addition to a choice grade of carnations. Stevia, narcissi, lilies and orchids are included in the daily shipments from the greenhouses. The supply department is having a heavy call for its special $10 assortment of 50 Valentine baskets.

Business since the start of the new year has been very good, with daily sales highly satisfactory. Funeral work has been quite an item and in addition several events of importance played their part in moving quite a quantity of stock. The weather has been fine, for which the trade has been thankful as it helps to conserve the coal pile. The removal of the First National bank to its new quarters created a call for many flowers and all of the florists were busy.

Hess & Swoboda sent many handsome floral arrangements, the value of which totaled over $700 on the occasion of the opening of the new quarters of the First National bank.

GOOD SUPPLY BUT PRICES ARE LOW.

The holiday rush being over, business is becoming normal and prices have dropped rapidly. While the fine weather lasted the supply of stock was heavy, some of which reached this market in very good condition. American Beauties were not plentiful but the quality was excellent and they sold at from $1.50 to $4 per dozen. The supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell was just about sufficient to meet requirements but the demand was not as brisk as it should be. They cleaned up well though at from $8 to $20 per 100. Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, Hoosier Beauty and Milady are in good supply at prices ranging from $4 to $12.50. Both Killarneys are in heavy supply and the quality is very good, but sales are not numerous. White Killarney is selling better than the pink, but the prices are low, the best bringing only $6 per 100. Carnations are plentiful with a fair call. Heavy out-of-town shipments are arriving and prices have dropped to $10 per 1,000 for good stock. The best home-grown brought $2 per 100. Paper White narcissus is plentiful. The prices vary from $1 per 100 for inferior grades to $2 for the best. Violets are arriving in larger quantities every day and the sunny weather has given them fine color and flower. They sell at from 35 to 50 cents per 100. Of sweet peas, there are just enough to supply the demand. Some very fine Spencers are to be had at $1 per 100, common varieties being offered at 50 cents. Lily of the valley is plentiful at $6 per 100. Harrisii lilies are scarce at 12½ cents. Callas are in good demand at $10 per 100. Decorative greens of all kinds sell well and the supply is large.

NOTES.

H. C. Ostertag, of Ostertag Bros., has been highly complimented in the daily press for the decoration of the new state capitol at Jefferson City on the occasion of the inauguration of the governor and other state officers, which took place January 9. The price of the decoration was $1,400. Wild smilax and American Beauty roses were used in profusion.

Gullett & Sons of Lincoln, Ill., are shipping large quantities of carnations to this market, the quality of which is very fine. H. G. Berning, who distributes this stock, is well satisfied with sales but an improvement in prices would be gratifying.

The fine display of the Rando electric fountains in the downtown store of Grimm & Gorly is attracting much attention from the public. F. X. Gorly reports numerous sales of them.

Windler Wholesale Cut Flower Co. reports business good. Al. Gumz states that the outlook for spring is excellent. This firm has very select callas and Spencer sweet peas.

The business of the north end florists was better last year than ever before. A great improvement in the demand for cut flowers is reported from this section of the city.

Alex. Siegel, the well-known downtown retailer, is still on the sick list and his many friends will regret to learn that his condition is showing little improvement.

The counters at the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. are well filled with fine violets and roses. Some especially fine Hoosier Beauty are featured here.

Miss Rose Schoenle is one of the most welcome visitors to the market. She is seen there every day and the trade admire her for her good business ideas.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, is supplying the local market with fine carnations, Paper White narcissus and sweet peas.

A fine showing of orchids in variety can be seen daily at the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co.'s establishment.

The first cut of jonquills reached this market a few days ago and are on sale at the Windler Wholesale Floral Co.

Horticultural Society of New York.

An exhibition of this society will be held January 13-14 at the American Museum of Natural History. The monthly shows have usually been held for the afternoon only, but it has been decided to try the experiment of holding them for two days. This one will be open on Saturday afternoon, and also on Sunday afternoon. There are classes open to all, and others restricted to non-commercial growers. Prizes are offered for cut flowers of orchids, carnations, sweet peas, schizanthus, Buddleia asiatica, and antirrhinums. Premiums are also offered for primula and begonia plants. Special prizes may also be awarded by the exhibition committee for unusual exhibits, and such exhibits are requested.

There will be a lecture at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, December 13, on "Darwin and Other Tulips," by John Scheepers. This will be illustrated with colored lantern slides.

Schedules are now ready for distribution and may be had by addressing the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City.

HEAVY HOLIDAY CUTS CAUSE SHORT SUPPLY

There has been a falling off in the supply as is natural after the cutting of the heavy holiday crops. Roses are not at all equal to the demand, particularly in the shorter grades, for which there is a continuous call from those whose customers are the common people. Prices are but a shade less than for Christmas. There are but few of the higher grades as seen at that time, but prices are maintained because of the scarcity. American Beauties are still in fair supply, but will enter their shy period in another week or two, when one has to scour the town to get a dozen. Carnations are also a bit scarce, but growers say the plants look promising and before long there will be enough for all. Easter lilies are good stock at very fair prices; callas are also in demand. Cattleyas are hardly equal to the out-of-town orders. Lily of the valley is in full supply, but its 20 per cent increase in price still prevails. White narcissus is very abundant, selling slowly at buyers' prices. Good French Golden Spur is offered by a number of the houses. Sweet peas promise before long to rule the market. Very many growers in this vicinity have one, two or more houses planted to them, the best orchid varieties, some of which will in two or three weeks be in full crop and furnish shipments that will, as the season advances, tax to the utmost the facilities of the market in their disposal.

NOTES.

J. F. Pyle, of J. H. Pyle & Son, Kennett Square, Pa., reports things booming in his neighborhood. Way Brothers last fall added a house 40x400 feet to their range. Richard Brothers, Toughkenamon, erected one 41x400 feet which is planted to carnations. There are also a number of others who erected glass or mushroom sheds. Mushrooms are grown as a side line by many of the trade hereabouts, while quite a number make them their leading crop. Although this is the center of the old carnation belt, the rage is now for sweet peas, nearly all the growers having given considerable space to the cultivation of the orchid varieties. There will, Mr. Pyle thinks, be twice as many sweet peas shipped this season as ever before from this neighborhood.

The illustrated lecture on "Rock Gardens," given by Richard Rothe at the January meeting of the florists' club, was a delightful treat. These gardens are now becoming very popular as the examples as shown on the screen were of real gardens, features of the various estates when the pictures were taken. The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. staged Carnations Cottage Maid and Crystal White from the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y. Baur & Steinkamp exhibited Carnation Merry Christmas; Carnations Doris and Rosalia were shown by S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass.; Carnation Abington by Littlefield & Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late White by C. F. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y. A seedling pink rose of exceptional merit was staged by Edw. Towill, Roslyn, Pa.

The fire was put out by the local fire company before it caused further damage, except to two houses which had one end of each partially destroyed. made at once, and as soon as the new shed is completed all marks of the trouble will have disappeared.

The H. F. Michell Co.'s poultry show Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week was very full and complete, there being over 1,000 fowls in the various entries. Cups, medals and poultry appliances were offered as prizes. The attendance was more than expected, as many as 1,000 visitors being counted after 6 p. m. on the first two evenings.

The sympathy of the craft goes out to Paul Huebner in the loss of his wife, who died January 4 from an attack of pneumonia. Interment was in Northwood cemetery, Monday, January 8. There were quantities of flowers from his many friends in the trade.

Paul Berkowitz reports the year just past the best ever. One, to see their great stock in the Bayersdorfer warehouses, wonders, in the light of all that has gone out, at the magnitude of the business.

Clarence Watson of the Leo Niessen force reports a very good demand, particularly for medium grade roses. Double Pink bouvardia, lilac, American Beauty roses and gardenias were features here.

S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.'s plant business is rapidly extending. They are in close connection with the largest growers in the country, and in this way can fill orders in the shortest possible time.

Everybody is pulling for the rose festival. The retail florists' display booths will far excel those at the great national show. So says Mark Mills.

Daffodils, orchid sweet peas and high grade roses were features with the Berger Brothers. Supply and demand kept pace nicely the past week.

Not enough roses to go around is the word with the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange. Prospects are good for the immediate future.

Stuart Miller is featuring violets. Easter lilies and carnations. Sweet peas are also a factor.

Edward Reid found roses scarce. Russell roses, French Golden Spur, lily of the valley and Easter lilies were headliners here.

K.

New York.

SUPPLY LIMITED WITH LITTLE DEMAND.

Business was quiet during the past week, and though the supply of stock was rather light, there was enough to supply the demand. Weather conditions were unfavorable to stock, there having been a succession of rainy and foggy days, which had a particularly bad effect on roses. January 6 was clear and much cooler and in the morning there was more life in the market. Special American Beauties have ranged from 40 to 50 cents, wholesale rates. Special stock of the standard varieties of tea roses, with a few exceptions, ranged from 15 to 20 cents; No. 1s, six to eight cents; No. 2s, three to five cents. It was noticeable that the demand for special stock was the lightest. Good carnations have done fairly well. There is a marked increase in the supply of Paper White and the yellow narcissi, and prices have declined. Paper Whites are particularly plentiful. Excellent stock of freesias is on the market, wholesaling at $4 per 100. Lilies are slow at from eight to 10 cents. There is an increase in the supply of tulips, but all have short stems. There is a plentiful supply of cattleyas, sweet peas and calendulas, but no extraordinary demand. Violets and gardenias are plentiful and are getting into the hands of the street merchants. In good snapdragons, irises and lilac, there is a fair movement at good prices.

January 8.—The market opened this morning under fair conditions. Indications point to larger receipts of stock for this week. An increase in the supply of bulbous stock is noteworthy.

NOTES.

Herbert Arenaut, chauffeur on one of the large auto trucks owned by Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford, N. J., became involved in an accident January 6, that resulted very seriously. A surface car of the trolley line running from Hoboken to Paterson was going down the hill to Homestead, N. J., when, it is said, Arenaut "turned out from behind another machine and swung squarely in front of the car." There was no time for either the motorman or the chauffeur to do anything. Arenaut was thrown from his seat, the truck was overturned and the gasoline tank exploded, setting fire to the truck. The vestibule of the car was smashed and the brake rendered useless. Beyond control, the car (which was well filled) sped down the hill, left its track and ran on the track of the Erie R. R. for about fifty yards, when it overturned. One man was killed and twenty-one injured, some of them mortally, it is said. Arenaut was locked up. Another version of the accident is, that Arenaut was trying to avoid a collision with another automobile when the car struck his machine. He has been admitted to bail.

At a time when the social season is supposed to be here we have been surprised at the light demand for special or long stemmed roses. This is more noteworthy when it is stated that the supply of such roses is not large. "They all want short roses," is what several wholesalers have recently said of the buyers. Looking about for a reason, it seems to be that fashions in decorative effects are changing, and that the tall vases of long-stemmed roses are being replaced, to some extent, by baskets and various designs of bowls in which short roses serve the purpose. This, coupled with the constant demand for short roses for funeral work, seems to be the solution. In some instances, in this market, during the past week, No. 1 roses sold readily for eight cents, whereas specials, held at 12 to 20 cents, were almost a drug.

Jens Jenson, a noted landscape architect of Chicago, who was engaged by the Women's League for the protection of Riverside Park, located in this city, has made a report. His engagement came about through the proposal of the New York Central railroad to change its tracks and incidentally "beautify" the park. He has made a thorough study of the situation and says that the plan now before the board of estimate "represents only the views of the railroad engineers and would result in a conglomeration of vulgarity, insulting to the finer feelings of America."

J. Ebb Weir & Co., Inc., have a handsome store and conservatory at Fifth avenue and 25th street, Brooklyn; also several houses near by on 25th street, where a great stock of bedding plants is being propagated and brought forward. They have another large range on Fort Hamilton avenue, doing a large business in the spring and summer in Greenwood cemetery.

Thomas E. Langdon, who for many years conducted a retail store at 198 Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, died in the Kings county hospital, January 6, aged 70 years. On account of ill health, he retired from business a year ago. He was a native of Brooklyn and was reared in the florist business, his father having been a florist.

We have received an invitation to attend the eighteenth annual dinner of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, which will be held at the Florence Inn, Tarrytown, on the evening of January 16. Tarrytown is noted for its many good features, not the least being its dinners. We shall strive to be there.

The seventh retail store which Joseph Trepel has opened in Brooklyn is located at Fifth avenue and 51st street, in the Bay Ridge section. Like all his other stores, it is finely fitted up and is doing a good business. Edward Solomon, formerly in the Lewis avenue store, is manager.

Miss Adelaide Krombach now conducts the retail business at Fourth avenue and 25th street, Brooklyn, established 35 years ago by her father, the late Charles Krombach. She reports

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich., President; F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., First Vice-President; L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer. Thirty-fifth annual convention, June, 1917.

Seed Disclaimer Resolution.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at the annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, held at Chicago, June 20-22, 1916:

Resolved, That this association is opposed to any legislation affecting the germination of seeds, nullifying the disclaimer, or interfering with interstate commerce.

J. B. AGNEW, Visalia, Calif., left Chicago for the east January 7.

JOHN C. BODGER, of John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif., is making an eastern trip.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, senior director of the Bowmanville National Bank, was re-elected January 9.

L. W. WHEELER and wife of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Calif., left Chicago for the coast January 7.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Henry F. Michell Co.'s wholesale price list for 1917 omits prices on sweet corn and garden beans.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade January 10, were as follows: Timothy, $4.00 to $5.50 per 100 pounds.

NEW YORK.—J. B. Deamud, of Vaughan's Seed Store, will celebrate the fifty-first anniversary of his birthday, January 12.

THE blockade restriction promulgated October 6, preventing the importation of grass seeds into Norway, has been cancelled.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., and wife; W. B. Currie, of Currie Bros. Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—T. Herschel Brown and wife left this week for the south, where they will visit New Orleans, Galveston and other points.

ARNOLD RINGIER, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, and wife celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their wedding day, January 7, enroute to the Golden Gate.

THE reports on bean deliveries are that they are running much less everywhere than anticipated and there is some surprise and disappointment in store for those who have been figuring on a fair supply.

WHEN in need of stock or supplies of any kind in a hurry it will be a great advantage to have a copy of the latest edition of our Trade Directory at hand for names and addresses. The price of the latest (1916) edition is $3 per copy, postpaid.

Chinese Narcissus Exports.

Amoy, China.—The value of narcissus bulbs invoiced at the American consulate at Amoy for the United States increased from $8,489 for the first nine months of 1915 to $14,620 for the same period in 1916.

BURPEE'S general spring catalogue has been increased from 182 to 204 pages and the cover is said to be one of the finest examples of offset work yet produced. Some 30 of the firm's varieties of flowers and vegetables are illustrated in color.

Lily of the Valley Pips.

A communication from the state department at Washington, December 22, is to the effect that a cablegram has just been received from the American minister at Copenhagen stating that he is informed that the crop of lily of the valley pips in Denmark is this year only one-fifth to one-tenth of the normal crop, and, that, therefore, to fill existing orders, German pips will have to be used. The minister indicates that this accounts for the attitude of the British authorities and that Hjalmar Hartmann & Co. are unwilling to make shipments unless positive assurances of non-interference are given by the British authorities. The minister states that Hartmann has 1,000,000 Danish grown and 5,000,000 German grown pips. In view of this information the department is instructing the American ambassador at London by cablegram to endeavor to obtain assurances of non-interference with at least the 1,000,000 pips which the department is informed are of Danish origin.

Catalogues Received.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., wholesale and retail seed lists; Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., gladiolus; California Nursery Co., Inc., Niles, Calif., nursery stock; W. K. LaBar & Son, East Stroudsburg, Pa., rhododendrons, etc.; Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., Boston, Mass., seeds; George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I., dahlias; C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., "Field Notes on Sweet Peas;" Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., seeds.

Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, Scotland, seeds and plants.

Free Seeds.

The appropriation of $243,000 by the House for free garden seeds will not add so noticeably to the size of the crops in 1917 as to reduce the cost of living. That was not the purpose in passing it.—New York World.

Canadian Growers Plan Increased Acreage

Growers of all kinds of crops in the vicinity of Ruthivan, Ont., are quite busy at the present time, taking advantage of the few warm days and are dumping fertilizer on the large market garden fields by the ton. All indications point to the planting of a much larger acreage of early tomatoes than last year, and the growers in that section are well posted on both early and late varieties, their product always commanding fancy prices. The coming spring will also see many acres devoted to early beans which are now always in demand. Several greenhouses will soon be in shape for the sowing of tobacco seed. The Warne leaf, which has for the past few years been in good demand by the buyers, will be grown on a large scale. Celery has been shipped from the Strathroy, Ont., territory to New Orleans, La., competing with the Kalamazoo product.

J. E. K.

Detroit.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND BALANCE.

A pretty evenly balanced supply and demand were characteristic of the trade the past week. Business was very good and a fair quantity of roses were easily disposed of. Violets were in good supply and no surplus noted. Carnations, the supply of which is daily increasing, all sold readily, as did the cut of Easter lilies. Paper Whites were somewhat in excess of the demand, but good prices were realized on all sold. Fine freesias are now coming into the market, but meet with sluggish movement with the dealers. Flowering plants are scarce since the holidays, there being only a meager supply of azaleas of indifferent quality on hand to partially meet this demand. Some bulbous stock, however, is promised for next week, and a ready sale of all available is expected.

NOTES.

A meeting of a dozen growers was held January 3 to discuss the real and fancied evils associated with the growing and sale of greenhouse stock. The meeting was representative of the more prominent and extensive establishments and the proceedings enlivened by vigorous remarks which resulted in the determination to organize a growers' association here, and to this end Sydney Beard was appointed to call a full meeting of all the growers in this city and vicinity for Wednesday evening, January 10, to effect a permanent organization.

A. J. Stahelin, who has been on the sick list, is up and about again. Robt. Rahaley, Frank Danzer and Ernest Sullivan are now at home suffering with bad colds.

J. F. Sullivan announces that he will move to his new store, 268 Woodward avenue, September 1 next.

CLUB MEETING AND DINNER.

Forty-nine members and guests of the florists' club were present at the January meeting of the organization, making it one of the largest in some time. The business session was brief. A committee of two members was appointed by the retiring president, Thomas F. Tracey, to escort the new president, Charles Sanders, to the chair. After a few remarks by President Sanders in the way of thanks, the routine business was transacted in 15 minutes semble around the dining tables in and all left the meeting room to as-Keeler's grill room, State street. Frederick Goldring was toastmaster until the hour approached for him to catch a bus for the suburbs, after which Thomas F. Tracey filled the role. The responses included interesting remarks on trade conditions by Walter Cook, with Stumpp & Walter of New York; James J. Cairns, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; Thomas F. Tracey on certain aspects of the wholesaler's business; Fred A. Danker, Edward P. Tracey, James T. Barrett, James H. Snyder, a violet grower of Rhinebeck; Frederick Henkes, Joseph Traudt, of Canajoharie; Earl Shaw, superintendent for George C. Hawley of this city, and others. The remarks of the two traveling men, Messrs. Cook and Cairns, were instructive to an unusual degree and showed a remarkable talent for observation. Both laid emphasis upon the thought that specialization in the trade is becoming more and more pronouncedly the sign of the successful grower or retailer. Men who formerly grew both plants and cut flowers are dropping either the one or the other and concentrating energies upon the thing they select. Those in the retail end of the business, mentioned increasing expenses and costs of supplies which must force an advance in prices if the dealer is to remain in business. On behalf of the members, Louis H. Schaefer, chairman of the entertainment committee, presented to retiring President Tracey a fine black morocco traveling case, which contained a large variety of articles that a man often needs on a trip. The case was passed around for examination and was approved by all. The club has at the beginning of the new year 69 members in good standing, a net gain of eight during 1916.

Through the holidays the chief demand in the plant line was for poinsettias, which sold well. Next in order came Scotch heather, ardisias, aurasias, dracaenas, primroses, cyclamens, palms and ferns. In cut flowers the demand was for roses, violets and carnations. Roses brought from $3 to $6 a dozen; American Beauties from $10 to $24 a dozen; carnations, $1.50 a dozen, with red ones as high as $3 a dozen. There was a good demand for greens and stocks of all kinds were well cleaned up.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

John Watson, Newark, N. Y., President;
Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., Vice-President;
Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress Street,
Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel.
Forty-second annual convention will be held at Philadelphia, Pa., June 27-29, 1917.

NASHUA, N. H.—Robertson Kirkpatrick, well known in this vicinity as a landscape gardener and nurseryman, died here December 20, aged 55 years.

UNDER title of "Growing Cherries East of the Rocky Mountains" the United States department of agriculture has issued Farmers' Bulletin 776 containing information as to sites for orchards, propagating, selection of suitable trees, season for planting, control of diseases, insects, etc.

BULLETIN No. 435 of the United States department of agriculture issued November, 1916, treats of the feeding habits and character of injury of the apple leaf-sewer, sometimes termed the apple leaf-folder, together with methods of control. This bulletin should prove of value to apple growers in the north and central Atlantic states, the middle west and portions of Canada.

Nursery Imports in Danger.

In the agricultural appropriations bill now before congress we understand there is a rider attached, which, if passed, would give the federal horticultural board of Washington arbitrary and autocratic control over the business of nurserymen and florists who ship plants or trees. It would give the board the power to establish a quarantine on suspicion—without calling for a hearing as required by the federal nursery stock law now in force. The matter is now in charge of a committee, of which Congressman John J. Fitzgerald of Brooklyn, N. Y., is chairman and measures have been taken which it is hoped will induce this committee to allow the nurserymen and florists to express their views on a subject that is of such vital importance to them before such a drastic amendment is adopted.

It is not generally known that the Association of State Inspectors recently advised the federal horticultural board to establish a quarantine that would shut out imports of bays, azaleas, palms, rhododendrons, evergreens and all balled plants from every source, or that the American Forestry Association is seeking a quarantine that would shut out shipments of all kinds of nursery and florists' stock from every source, and a conference will be held in Washington, D. C., January 18-19 to promote this scheme. The significance of the rider above mentioned will therefore be noted.

Nurserymen, florists, and others interested in the importation of nursery stock and other plants, will do well to write their representatives in congress at Washington, D. C., giving their views in this matter and clearly stating their objections to the proposed legislation. This should be done without delay.

Pasadena Tournament of Roses.

The streets of Pasadena, Calif., were thronged with people to view what was no doubt the greatest and most gorgeous of floral pageants, showing the best offerings of the southern California gardens. The decorators are getting their color schemes down to a science, for never before was there so much real art displayed, never have there been such lovely flowers used. There were never so many real roses used. Much ingenuity was displayed in making the different floats. Civic bodies, fraternal organizations, hotels, schools, business houses and individuals vied with one another in presenting the wonderful creations. It was claimed that the parade was viewed by 100,000 people. G. H. H.

Nashville, Tenn.

SPLENDID SUPPLY AND GOOD SALES.

The weather continues good and has given a splendid supply of the best of flowers and everything is coming on in splendid shape with trade excellent. Roses were never better or more abundant. There are plenty of violets and lily of the valley is not scarce. Carnations are excellent and popular with the buyers. Many good plants are to be seen and the call for them continues unabated.

NOTES.

Charles Tritchler has been gradually building up an excellent business, and while he has not yet an up-town store, does a very good trade, destined to grow. He is a practical florist as was his father before him. In the last year he has purchased two acres near one of the city's carlines, and has a nice range of houses built thereon.

Geny Bros. have been kept busy with their trade, which has been very good, not alone with funeral work, but with weddings, and the many social functions which create a large daily demand. They still have fine azaleas, cyclamens and all kinds of bulbous stock.

The Joy Floral Company had a busy week with funeral work and several good wedding orders. They have an abundance of flowers—all kinds of roses, carnations, violets, orchids, valley, sweet peas, etc. M. C. D.
